RUGBY

NAPANEE 11, BELLEVILLE 8.

N. C. I. Rugby Team played the Belleville High School Team yesterday afternoon in Belleville, on the Albert College grounds, defeating them by the score of 11 to 8. Napanee scored the first point, forcing Belleville to rouge. Belleville then worked the ball back and forced Perry to rouge. The Belleville line was heavier than Napanee and by means of successive bucks reached Napanee's five yard line when on a fake buck Deacon went around the end for a touch. On account of the goal bars being too low no converts were allowed nor were field goals. The score at the end of the first half was 8 to 1 in favor of Belleville. In the second half the Napanee team 2nd got warmed up and put into effect some nice combination work and end runs. In a short time by means of splendid work, Napanee reached Belleville's 20 yard line, and Perry went through for a touch-down. Belleville kicked off and Perry ran it back 25 yards, and Napanee started in again to work down the field by means of end runs and soon reached Belleville's 20 yard line again. The same play was put into effect as previously and again Perry got through for a touch, making the final score 11 to 8 in favor of Napanee.

The Napanee Collegiate Team plays Picton Collegiate Team in the Napanee Driving Park to-morrow at 2.30 p.m.

GOVERNMENT CONTROL OF LIQUOR ENDORSED BY ALBERTA PROVINCE.

Moderation League Scores Decisive Victory in Referendum of "Wet" and "Dry" Issue—Majority of Over 30,000 Expected When Count Ends.

Calgary, Alberta, November 6th.—In by far the largest vote ever polled in Alberta on a liquor question, prohibition yesterday was beaten decisively. Seven years ago, the province gave a dry majority of 20,000 in a total vote of 95,000 on the abolition of the retail sale of liquor. In 1920 the matter of importation came up, and with a total vote of 106,000, there was a majority against importation of 18,596. Monday's vote will go close to 150,000, the majority against prohibition standing at the moment at about 24,000, probably will approach 30,000 when the returns are complete.

There are 62 provincial constituencies and on incomplete returns there appears to have been a majority for Government control in 36 of them, including the four cities, Calgary, Edmonton, Lethbridge and Medicine Hat. In some rural constituencies the figures are so close that later returns will involve some shifting from one column to another.

There was little confusion in the use of the four clause preferential ballot, and there appears to have been comparatively few spoiled ballots. The contest, as the returns quickly showed, had resolved itself into a practically straight fight between prohibition and Government control, A. and D., with B. and C. as representing the beer advocates, having no chance of achieving success. On the present showing, clause D has such a decisive majority over all other clauses that it will not be necessary to count second or later choices.

The City of Calgary voted two to one for Government control and in the whole city less than half a dozen polls favored the continuance of prohibition. With a few polls missing there were 15,799 first choices for D., 8,039 for A., and 540 altogether for B and C. Clause D. in addition to Government control of all liquors, authorizes also the sale of beer in licensed premises by glass or bottle, without specific instructions to the Government as to the procedure to be followed, and there is a good deal of speculation to-day on this subject. Many people are anxious to know whether beer licenses would be confined to hotel proprietors or whether something like the tavern license system of Quebec will be established.

Clause D., in the words of the ballot means "sale of all liquors by or through Government vendors — beer to be consumed on licensed premises and in private residences; wine and spirits to be purchased in limited quantities under permit issued by the Government, under Government control and regulation." The bill to cover the acceptance of this double principle has yet to be drafted.

Commenting to-day on the result the Calgary Albertan, which supported prohibition, says: "The people are tired of prohibition. They have lost patience with it. The re-action has come and for another period, at least, we must return to the liquor traffic."

The paper says the Legislature should meet as soon as possible and that clause D. should be in operation by the opening of the year.

On figures compiled Monday night there was a majority for Government control in Alberta of 25,545 in a total counted vote of 114,933. Slightly more than half of the polls had reported, but they accounted for about 75 per cent of the expected vote and so the result will not be altered appreciably. At 10.30, a total of 1,170 polls, including the majority of those in Calgary and Edmonton, gave the following results: (a) meaning continuance of prohibition, 42,968; (b) meaning sale of beer in hotels, 3,114; (c) meaning sale of beer by the Government, 2,548; (d) meaning Government control, plus sale of beer in licensed premises, 66,508.

Edmonton, Alta., Nov. 6th.—It is altogether likely that the Alberta Government will decide upon a December session of the Legislature to deal with the problem of enacting a law to regulate Government control of sale of liquor in accordance with the verdict of the people in yesterday's referendum.

Neither Premier Greenfield nor Attorney-General Brownlee would comment on the result late last night, "I have absolutely nothing to say until the final returns are in," the Premier said.

That a December session will be held was indicated by private members of the United Farmers' Party in official statements during the last two weeks. It was apparently realized that enforcement of the present prohibition law could not be successfully carried on for any considerable length of time if the system of Government control was endorsed by the people.

Ask Referendum in Saskatchewan.

Regina, Sask., Nov. 7th.—The petition asking for a referendum on the liquor question as it affects Saskatchewan will be presented to the Government early next week, it is announced by officials of the Saskatchewan Moderation League.

According to the same source, the petition will carry approximately 80,000 signatures. It is possible, according to men concerned in the circulation and final presentation of the petition, that pressure will be brought to bear on the Government to repeal the Saskatchewan Temperance Act and substitute some measure of Government control without putting the Province to the expense of a referendum vote, the cost of which is estimated at $200,000.

O.R.E.C. CONVENTION COMMITTEE MEETS.

A meeting of the committee charged with the affairs of the recent O. R. E. C. Convention was held in the Council Chamber on Tuesday morning, President MacGregor in the chair.

The meeting was opened with prayer by Rev. W. R. Tanton, after which reports were heard from all the sub-committees. In every case they reported the kindly public spirit which had enabled them to accomplish their tasks with pleasure and ease.

The treasurer's report showed that the economical management of the convention had enabled the committee to keep well within its budget. On motion, duly made and carried, the treasurer was instructed to remit the balance, after all expenses had been met, to the head office of the O. R. E. C. to be applied on the deficit.

The committee then put itself on record to the effect that:

"We, the committee charged with the local arrangements in connection with the recent O. R. E. C. Convention, desire to express to the boards of management of the various churches in the town and through them to the members and adherents, our gratitude for the generous and unselfish manner in which the church buildings and equipment were placed at the disposal of the convention, and of the courteous and kindly way in which the delegates were received and entertained.

"We express our appreciation of the very full and careful reports of the convention appearing in the local papers.

"To the business men of the town for the whole-hearted and liberal manner in which they contributed to the success of the gathering the committee is deeply grateful.

"To the organists who provided the music, and to all others who kindly gave of their time and talents to the end that the three days' meetings might be harmoniously conducted, we extend our gratitude."

It was decided that a copy of the aboue resolutions be sent to the ministers of the churches to be read from the pulpits on Sunday.

The business having been concluded, the committee was disbanded and dismissed with prayer by Rev. A. J. Terrill.

BIG INCREASE IN PATIENTS AT KINGSTON HOSPITAL

At the annual meeting of the Kingston General Hospital on Wednesday the report showed the total days' stay of patients in the institution was 59,094, being an increase of 7,000 days over previous years. Patients admitted 3,712; average days' stay 16; cost per day per patient, $2.32.

The number of operations performed during the year was 2,335, as compared with 2,157 last year.

The financial statement shows receipts amounting to $136,089.03; expenditures, $136,854.33. Both receipts and expenditures are the highest in the history of the institution. A considerable sum has been spent on repairs and the general upkeep of the hospital.

The officers elected are: R. E. Kent, chairman; F. G. Lockett, vice-chairman; A. F. Chown, honorary secretary; William Jackson, Harold Davis, R. J. Carson, members of the committee of management.

WILTON.

We have been enjoying very fine weather for the last few days.—The vesper service in the Methodist Church on October 21st, under the direction of the men, was a decided success, Mr. G. W. Gibbard, of Napanee, being the speaker for the afternoon. A number from here attended the vesper service at Odessa last Sunday.—The October meeting of the W. M. S. was held at the home of Mrs. A. W. Babcock, and a large number of ladies were present. — "A great success" was the verdict of the delegates and visitors at the district convention of the Ladies' Aid Societies held at Wilton. The délegates endórsed the idea of organizing a District Ladies' Aid, and the following are the district officers for the year: Hon. President, Rev. A. J. Terrill, Napanee; President, Mrs. A. Earl Perry, Wilton; 1st Vice President, Mrs. D. Richmond, Roblin; 2nd Vice President, Mrs. L. P. Wells, Tamworth; Secretary, Mrs. Norman Boyce, Colebrook; Treasurer, Mrs. Alpine Woods, Napanee. The officers, with Mrs. B. M. Black, Napanee; Mrs. Geo. Ruttan, Dorland, and Mrs. T. D. Creighton, Bath, constitute the executive. — The girls' softball team, under the management of Rev. A. L. Blackstock, held a masquerade party and social on Tuesday evening, Oct. 30. —Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Mills have returned from visiting their daughters in the west, and report a very pleasant trip.—Mrs. (Rev.) Dixon entertained the members of the Wilton Ladies' Aid at the parsonage, Odessa, on Wednesday afternoon.

NAPANEE 11, BELLEVILLE 8.

N. C. I. Rugby Team played the Belleville High School Team yesterday afternoon in Belleville, on the Albert College grounds, defeating them by the score of 11 to 8. Napanee scored the first point, forcing Belleville to rouge. Belleville then worked the ball back and forced Perry to rouge. The Belleville line was heavier than Napanee and by means of successive bucks reached Napanee's five yard line when on a fake buck Deacon went around the end for a touch. On account of the goal bars being too low no converts were allowed nor were field goals. The score at the end of the first half was 8 to 1 in favor of Belleville. In the second half the Napanee team had got warmed up and put into effect some nice combination work and end runs. In a short time by means of splendid work, Napanee reached Belleville's 20 yard line and Perry went through for a touch-down. Belleville kicked off and Perry ran it back 25 yards, and Napanee started in again to work down the field by means of end runs and soon reached Belleville's 20 yard line again. The same play was put into effect as previously and again Perry got through for a touch, making the final score 11 to 8 in favor of Napanee.

The Napanee Collegiate Team plays Picton Collegiate Team in the Napanee Driving Park to-morrow at 2.30 p.m.

Nominations for Older Boys' Parliament Close Nov. 10th.

Between three and four hundred older boys will be nominated on Saturday of this week as candidates for the Third Ontario Older Boys' Parliament, which will meet in session in Toronto on December 27th, 28th and 29th, 1923.

Tuxis Squares entering candidates are reminded that the Deputy Returning Officer must have their nomination papers by Saturday of this week (November 10th).

Only one or two Members in the entire province will be elected by acclamation. Contests will take place in fully one hundred constituencies.

The Deputy Returning Officer for Lenaox and Addington is Frank Bell. Nomination papers and lists of voters for the voters' list should be sent direct to him.

Any organized Sunday School class of teen age boys may vote, provided they have sent a statement to the Deputy Returning Officer covering the name of the class, teacher, church and town, and a list of their members by November 17th.

The election will be held on Saturday, Nov. 24th, unless otherwise notified.

The Parliament will meet in the Legislative Assembly Chambers, Queen's Park, Toronto, and promises to be one of the most unique gatherings that has ever been held in the Province of Ontario.

Moderation League Scores Decisive Victory in Referendum of "Wet" and "Dry" Issue—Majority of Over 30,000 Expected When Count Ends.

Calgary, Alberta, November 6th.—In so far the largest vote ever polled in Alberta on a liquor question, prohibition yesterday was beaten decisively. Seven years ago, the province gave a dry majority of 20,000 in a total vote of 95,000 on the abolition of the retail sale of liquor. In 1920 the matter of importation came up, and with a total vote of 106,000, there was a majority against importation of 18,596. Monday's vote will go close to 150,000, the majority against prohibition standing at the present at about 24,000, probably will approach 30,000 when the returns are complete.

There are 62 provincial constituencies and on incomplete returns there appears to have been a majority for Government control in 36 of them, including the four cities, Calgary, Edmonton, Lethbridge and Medicine Hat. In some rural constituencies the figures are so close that later returns will involve some shifting from one column to another.

There was little confusion in the use of the four clause preferential ballot, and there appears to have been comparatively few spoiled ballots. The contest, as the returns quickly showed, had resolved itself into a practically straight fight between prohibition and Government control, A. and D., with B. and C. as representing the beer advocates, having no chance of achieving success. On the present showing, clause D has such a decisive majority over all other clauses that it will not be necessary to count second or later choices.

The City of Calgary voted two to one for Government control and in the whole city less than half a dozen polls favored the continuance of prohibition. With a few polls missing there were 15,799 first choices for D., 8,039 for A., and 840 altogether for B and C. Clause D, in addition to Government control of all liquors, authorizes also the sale of beer in licensed premises by glass or bottle, without specific instructions to the Government as to the procedure to be followed, and there is a good deal of speculation to-day on this subject. Many people are anxious to know whether beer licenses would be confined to hotel proprietors or whether something like the tavern license system of Quebec will be established.

Clause D., in the words of the ballot means "sale of all liquors by or through Government vendors — beer to be consumed on licensed premises and in private residences; wine and spirits to be purchased in limited quantities under permit issued by the Government, under Government control and regulation." The bill to cover the acceptance of this double principle has yet to be drafted.

Commenting to-day on the result the Calgary Albertan, which supported prohibition, says: "The people are tired of prohibition. They have lost patience with it. The re-action has come and for another period, at least, we must return to the liquor traffic."

The paper says the Legislature should meet as soon as possible and that clause D. should be in operation by the opening of the year.

On figures compiled Monday night there was a majority for Government control in Alberta of 25,345 in a total counted vote of 114,935. Slightly more than half of the polls had reported, but they accounted for about 75 per cent of the expected vote and so the result will not be altered appreciably. At 10.30, a total of 1,170 polls, including the majority of those in Calgary and Edmonton, gave the following results: (a) meaning continuance of prohibition, 42,963; (b) meaning sale of beer in hotels, 3,114; (c) meaning sale of beer by the Government, 2,348; (d) meaning Government control, plus sale of beer in licensed premises, 66,508.

Edmonton, Alta, Nov. 6th.—It is altogether likely that the Alberta Government will decide upon a December session of the Legislature to deal with the problem of enacting a law to regulate Government control of sale of liquor in accordance with the verdict of the people in yesterday's referendum.

Neither Premier Greenfield nor Attorney-General Brownlee would comment on the result late last night. "I have absolutely nothing to say until the final returns are in," the Premier said.

That a December session will be held was indicated by private members of the United Farmers' Party in official statements during the last two weeks. It was apparently realized that enforcement of the present prohibition law could not be successfully carried on for any considerable length of time if the system of Government control was endorsed by the people.

Ask Referendum in Saskatchewan.

Regina, Sask., Nov. 7th.—The petition asking for a referendum on the liquor question as it affects Saskatchewan will be presented to the Government early next week, it is announced by officials of the Saskatchewan Moderation League.

According to the same source, the petition will carry approximately 80,000 signatures. It is possible, according to men concerned in the circulation and final presentation of the petition, that pressure will be brought to bear on the Government to repeal the Saskatchewan Temperance Act and substitute some measure of Government control without putting the Province to the expense of a referendum vote, the cost of which is estimated at $200,000.

A meeting of the committee charged with the affairs of the recent O. R. E. C. Convention was held in the Council Chamber on Tuesday morning, President MacGregor in the chair.

The meeting was opened with prayer by Rev. W. R. Tanton, after which reports were heard from all the sub-committees. In every case they reported the kindly public spirit which had enabled them to accomplish their tasks with pleasure and ease.

The treasurer's report showed that the economical management of the convention had enabled the committee to keep well within its budget. On motion, duly made and carried, the treasurer was instructed to remit the balance, after all expenses had been met, to the head office of the O. R. E. C. to be applied on the deficit.

The committee then put itself on record to the effect that:

"We, the committee charged with the local arrangements in connection with the recent O. R. E. C. Convention, desire to express to the boards of management of the various churches in the town and through them to the members and adherents, our gratitude for the generous and unselfish manner in which the church buildings and equipment were placed at the disposal of the conventions and of the courteous and kindly way in which the delegates were received and entertained.

"We express our appreciation of the very full and careful reports of the convention appearing in the local papers.

"To the business men of the town for the whole-hearted and liberal manner in which they contributed to the success of the gathering the committee is deeply grateful.

"To the organists who provided the music, and to all others who kindly gave of their time and talents to the end that the three days' meetings might be harmoniously conducted, we extend our gratitude."

It was decided that a copy of the above resolutions be sent to the ministers of the churches to be read from the pulpits on Sunday.

The business having been concluded, the committee was disbanded and dismissed with prayer by Rev. A. J. Terrill.

BIG INCREASE IN PATIENTS AT KINGSTON HOSPITAL

At the annual meeting of the Kingston General Hospital on Wednesday the report showed the total days' stay of patients in the institution was 59,094, being an increase of 7,000 days over previous years. Patients admitted 3,712; average days' stay, 16; cost per day per patient, $2.32.

The number of operations performed during the year was 2,335, as compared with 2,157 last year.

The financial statement shows receipts amounting to $1,360,089.03; expenditures, $1,36,854.33. Both receipts and expenditures are the highest in the history of the institution. A considerable sum has been spent on repairs and the general upkeep of the hospital.

The officers elected are: R. E. Kent, chairman; F. G. Lockett, vice-chairman; A. F. Cowan, honorary secretary; William Jackson, Harold Davis, R. J. Carson, members of the committee of management.

WILTON.

We have been enjoying very fine weather for the last few days.—The vesper service in the Methodist Church on October 21st, under the direction of the men, was a decided success, Mr. G. W. Gibbard, of Napanee, being the speaker for the afternoon. A number from here attended the vesper service at Odessa last Sunday.—The October meeting of the W. M. S. was held at the home of Mrs. A. M. Babcock, and a large number of ladies were present. — "A great success" was the verdict of the delegates and visitors at the district convention of the Ladies' Aid Societies held at Wilton. The delegates endorsed the idea of organizing a District Ladies' Aid, and the following are the district officers for the year: Hon. President, Rev. A. J. Terrill, Napanee; President, Mrs. A. Earl Perry, Wilton; 1st Vice President, Mrs. D. Richmond, Roblin; 2nd Vice President, Mrs. J. D. Wells, Tamworth; Secretary, Mrs. Norman Boyce, Colebrook; Treasurer, Mrs. Alpine Woods, Napanee. The officers, with Mrs. B. M. Black, Napanee; Mrs. Geo. Ruttan, Dorland, and Mrs. T. D. Creighton, Bath, constitute the executive. — The girls' softball team, under the management of Rev. A. L. Blacklock, held a masquerade party and dance on Tuesday evening, Oct. 30. —Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Mills have returned from visiting their daughters in the west, and report a very pleasant trip.—Mrs. (Rev.) Dixon entertained the members of the Wilton Ladies' Aid at the parsonage, Odessa, on Wednesday afternoon.

For Rheumatic Pains.—The pains and aches of Sciatica and Rheumatism should be treated with Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. The soothing and healing properties of this famous remedy have been demonstrated for fifty years. Use it also for inflammatory pains, cuts, scratches, bruises and sprains, either in human beings or the lower animals.

The Sunday School lady saw several of her pupils engaged in some interesting game.

"What are you doing," she inquired.

"We're seeing who can tell the biggest fib," replied Susy. "The winner is to get this piece of pie."

"Oh," said the shocked Sunday School lady, "I never told a lie!"

The little girls looked at one another. "Give her the pie," said Susy.

They have proved their power in numberless cases and have given relief to many children, who, but for the good offices of this compound, would have continued weak and enfeebled.

A farmer's mule had just balked in the road when the country doctor came by. The farmer asked him if he could give him something to start the mule. The physician said he could, and reaching into his medicine case, gave the mule some powder. The mule switched his tail, tossed his head, and started on a mad gallop up the road. The farmer looked first at the flying mule and then at the doctor.

"How much did that medicine cost?" he asked.

"Oh, about fifteen cents", said the physician.

"Well, give me a quarter's worth, quick—I got to catch that mule."

"Tell me," he whispered, "just which one of my qualities was it that finally convinced you that you loved me? Was it my superb playing of the violin, my rich, 'cellolike voice; or perhaps it was one of the exquisite poems that I wrote you?"

"Hector," she said softly, "it was the perfectly intoxicating stuff the barber put on your hair. What is it about me that convinced you beyond the shadow of a doubt that we were made for each other? The intangible, indefinable beauty of my eyes? My adorable profile? Tell me."

"It was the cunning little sound you make when you eat celery," he confessed.

And, both vaguely displeased, they refrained from speaking to each other for at least five minutes.

Grand Old Man of Army

Celebrates 97th Birthday

Some Early Reminiscences

The grand old man of the British army, the oldest living officer of the Grenadier Guards, Gen. Sir George Wentworth Higginson, G.C.B., celebrated his 97th birthday lately at his house at Gyldernescroft, Maidenhead, Thames, England, where he lives in happy retirement.

Notwithstanding his years, he is alert mentally and physically, and is probably Great Britain's most wonderful link with the past.

He has moved in the royal circle all his life, and was recently sponsor to Princess Elizabeth's son. As a child he was patted on the head by King George IV. (who died in 1830), and was later one of a picnic party in Kensington Gardens, when King William IV. stopped to admire. As he has also received personal honors at the hands of Queen Victoria, King Edward VII., and King George V., it is safe to say that he is the only person now alive who has lived in the reigns of five sovereigns and been honored by their personal notice.

As a boy he took a stage-coach journey from London to Shropshire to take part in the festivities of his grandfather's eighty-fourth birthday. This grandfather was Lord Kinnaird, who was born in 1747 and died in 1822. It is a remarkable thing to be able to say in 1923 that there is living in Great Britain one who knew and talked with a man born only a year after Culloden, and who was over forty years of age when the Young Pretender died.

Gen. Higginson's grandfather lived in the days of Clive, who made secure the foundations of British India, and he had reached to man's estate when Warren Hastings was appointed Governor of Bengal, which was fourteen years before Hastings was impeached.

Young Higginson went to Eton two years before Queen Victoria ascended the throne, and his career started in an Eton cheer when Queen Victoria and Prince Albert drove through College on their way to Windsor Castle. He witnessed the procession to St. George's Chapel, of the notable people who attended the christening of King Edward VII.

When he left Eton and presented himself as an ensign in the Grenadier Guards at the Tower of London, in 1845, he was welcomed by the veteran Quartermaster, who said, "Glad to meet you, very glad! I was your father's colour-sergeant at the Battle of Corunna." He served in the regiment for thirty years, and was with it during the whole of the Crimean War.

Beginning his official career as a Grenadier at the Tower of London in 1845, he concluded it at the ancient fortress in 1895, when he was Lieutenant-Governor of the Tower for several years. He commanded the Brigade of Guards, and the Home District from 1879 to 1884. Although he has been thirty years on the retired list, Sir George Higginson has not been idle. As a Governor of Wellington Barracks, directing the affairs of the Golden Boys' Home, and as chairman of the Royal United Kingdom Beneficent Association, he has found useful avenues of service. He still sits on the Bench.

A correspondent who recently had a talk with Sir George Higginson found quite marvel in the vitality and the wonderful memory of a man whose lifetime has seen so many changes. His voice is clear and resonant, and he spoke of events of his boyhood days as though they were but yesterday.

"Even in his old age," he said, "my grandfather was devotee to hunting. I can see him now in his long, red frock-coat and huntsman's cap, sitting on a chair in his saddle as any young man. I can also see now the dinner-table brightened, by the red coats of all the guests, except the rector of the parish. My grandfather insisted on my having a red jacket made by the village tailor, so that I might not spoil the fox-hunting tradition of the house. I have worn a discarded many a red coat since then, but that little red jacket is still in my wardrobe."

"There must be few persons alive to-day who saw the Houses of Parliament destroyed by fire in 1834. I was at school at Cheam," said Sir George, "and in the night we were awakened to see the fire. From that distance we could see the flames quite plainly. They were from the fire were blown in our direction, and there was alarm among the farmers of the district lest the sparks should set their stacks alight.

"I don't suppose there are many people now living who saw Queen Brunhmell, the famous Arbiter elegantiarum in the days of the Regency. My father and I had been on a visit to my uncle, Gen. Campbell, then Lieutenant-Governor of Jersey. In returning home through Normandy, we passed a night at Caen, where Brunhmell ended his days. She sat at the table d'hote. My father and I spent the evening in his company, although I, for one, being a small boy, was largely a listener."

Great Traffic Problem.

One hundred million dollars is wasted every year through traffic congestion in London, the motor buses, old days of horse busses and hansom cabs, traffic got terribly congested about twenty years ago. Now motor buses and taxies and underground tubes and new artery streets to solve the problem have all been conceived but has again appeared. On one normal day recently 35,500 vehicles passed Hyde Park corner for instance. This means over 221 miles of continuous traffic. The church is only the City—a square mile—has power to elect its main roads to heavy traffic. Elsewhere, steam tractor engines with trailers, and slow moving horse-drawn lorries may wander.

"Seen any mysterious strangers around here lately?" casually inquired the detective from the city.

"Waal", answered Uncle Eben, "there was a fellow over to town with three pints last week what took a pair o' rabbits out o' my whiskers."

RUNNING THE EMPIRE.

Enormous Amount of Work Devolves on Premier.

It is hard to realize the enormous amount of toil and trouble involved in running the British Empire — the job carried out by the Prime Minister of Great Britain.

When Parliament is in session, something like a thousand letters a day arrive at the Premier's official residence; and though the majority of these are dealt with by his private secretaries, there are quite a considerable number that demand his personal attention.

In addition, there are telegrams and cablegrams from all over the world, and, of course, telephone calls. These latter are well-nigh incessant, but unless a call is prefixed by a certain code word known only to the initiated, the caller is not switched on into personal communication with the Prime Minister. He is answered by one of the secretaries, who deals with the message at his discretion.

The Premier's real work consists in interviewing almost continuously a procession of heads of departments and high officials of state. It is impossible to exaggerate the arduousness of this. He is constantly called upon to make, at a moment's notice, decisions of the utmost importance—decisions that may possibly affect vitally not only the British Empire, but the world at large.

And for all this nerve-racking work he gets paid—nothing! The Prime Minister's job is a purely honorary one. His salary — roughly about $25,000 a year—comes to him in his capacity of First Lord of the Treasury.

On the other hand, however, he tastes to the full the sweets of power. He can make or mar careers. He can create peers at will. With him rests the appointment to vacant sees of archbishops and bishops, and many high state offices are in his gift; such as, for example, ambassadorships to foreign courts, and the governorships of the various colonies and dependencies comprising Britain's far-flung Empire.

Finally, he himself, although he may be only a humble commoner, takes precedence before all others of the King's subjects, save only princes of the Blood Royal, the Lord High Chancellor, and the Archbishops of Canterbury and York. While on his retirement, when handing the seals of office to his sovereign, a peerage is his for the asking.

Service Is "Washed Out."

Being a butler is not what it used to be, according to complaints made by London agencies for supplying servants. Although it is probable that the best butlers "must be born, and not made," many of them now voice the wish that they had not been born to post-war conditions of service. The salary of first-class butlers now is $600, compared with $400 before the war, but they are complaining that tips amount to nothing like the former total. Before the war, a tenner at the great houses of England fourthly reminded the departing guests that they accepted "nothing but paper." As at that time the smallest British unit of currency was a £5 note, tips from the large house-party reached quite an appreciable total. The "new rich," however, according to the butlers, take advantage of the fact that £1 paper notes are now in use and give nothing at all if the servants won't accept them. The service is "washed out," is the motto of lordly butlers.

May Day and May Baskets.

The celebration of May day is an English custom which originated with the Druids. The Floralia, or floral games of the Romans, which began on April 28 and continued several days, were festivals of similar character. In mediaeval and Tudor England the first day of May was a great public holiday. The young people started at an early hour to gather flowers and hawthorn branches, with which they decorated every door and window-frame in the large. In Northamptonshire it was the custom for the young men early on May day morning to bestow a large bunch of flowering hawthorn at the door of the prettiest girl in the village; later the hawthorn gave place to the May basket. In some places in the United States May baskets are hung on the evening of April 30, but there is no authority for the custom.

Famous Surrey School.

There are few more noted English preparatory schools than that at Cheam, Surrey, Eng., through which have passed several members of the royal family and many of the most distinguished men in the Old Country. Lord Milford Haven is an old boy of Cheam School, and on July 4 he unveiled a memorial to commemorate old boys who died in the war. This Surrey private school, whose headmaster, Mr. A. S. Tabor, was succeeded a year or two ago by Mr. H. M. S. Taylor, has a waiting list of "old boys." It includes Lord Burnham, Lord Esher, Lord Edward Gleichen, Lord Willingdon, Lord Hardinge, Lord Donoughmore, Lord Randolph Churchill, Gen. Seely and his brother, Sir Charles, Gen. Sir Ian Hamilton, and Admiral of the Fleet Sir Hedworth Meux.

British Women on Railroads.

Nearly 20,000 women are employed by the railways of the United Kingdom. Of this total the majority, of course, are employed in clerical work. A considerable number, however, are engaged in work not usually done by women. Nearly 100 are employed as laborers and a thousand more are classed as "mechanics and artisans." There are women signalmen-shunters, foremen platelayers, engine cleaners, oilers and greasers, and at least one who is engaged in the dangerous and arduous work of a switchman.

Aliens In London.

Among aliens in London, Russians, with 29,748, are most numerous, closely followed by Poles with 26,923. French are a bad third with 11,104, and Germans only 6,743.

Man is like a tack—useful if he has a good head on him and is pointed in the right direction, but even though he is driven, he can only go as far as his head will let him.

Mount Snowdon Is Known As the Summit of Wales

Experiences of a Climber

Most folk who go to the summit of Snowdon do so by the little mountain tramway which starts from Llanberis.

The true tourist, the man who desires really to grasp what such a mountain is like, climbs it on foot, goes through all the experiences and difficulties which such a climb entails, and then feels he has at least done a good day's work. He (or she) can afterwards legitimately boast of the expedition. The other sort, of "climbers" are merely "also rans."

It is not so easy a task to climb Snowdon as the guide-books or some people say. The ascent itself may be made from five places — Llanberis or Snowdon Ranger, Beddgelert, Capel Curig, or by Watkins' Path. Of these the first is the easiest, and it is the one the writer recommends.

If it were merely a matter of the path from Llanberis to the top of the mountain, 3,500 feet above the climb might not be at all difficult. Indeed, ponies, and even carts, could get up most of the distance. But there are several other factors to be taken into account.

There is the uncertain mountain mist. It may be as sunny as you ever saw it when you are looking at Snowdon from Llanberis, or till you get half way up the mountain. Then a thick mist comes on with disconcerting speed—you never know from where. It wets you to the skin in a few minutes, and your clothes are wringing with moisture. You will never dreamt of bringing an overcoat on such a fine warm day. This mist may safely be reckoned on to come at least three days out of any five, so if you are wise you will be prepared for it.

There may come heavy rain, which makes the easiest path on such a big hill greasy and slippery, causing much danger to those climbing or descending who are not used to it, especially if they are wearing unsuitable boots or shoes.

One can afford to smile, as one sits comfortably at home, at the talk of danger; from such a cause; but I saw one climber nearly killed from slipping at such a time, and gaining momentum as he descended towards a deep precipice. Only catching hold of a tree in his descent saved him.

The writer once nearly lost his own life from being overtaken by fog while about three-parts up the mountain. A friend and he were collecting rare flowers, and in the mist they strayed from the beaten track. Walking carefully along what seemed to be a mountain torrent's dry bed, the writer saw an unknown flower on one side, and went to pick it. Luckily, he had the good sense to let that while he stretching his hand to it.

The mist suddenly lifted at that moment, and the flower-gatherer found himself hanging partly over a very deep cliff, to have fallen down which must have meant a terrible death.

The difficulty of climbing Snowdon, even by the Llanberis route, the easiest, may be understood when it is stated that, while the distance to the summit is about five miles, it takes quite a good climber at least three hours to get there.

You go through woods, up cart-tracks, under the tram-road, past the inevitable "Halfway House," the track getting steeper and rougher all the time. There are splendid views of the passes, lakes, and hills all around, and the higher you climb the finer they become.

At about 2,000 feet high you come to a spot where the Capel Curig and Llanberis Ranger routes join the Llanberis one, and then a steep ascent for a quarter of an hour or so brings you to the summit, where you find a post office, a telegraph office, the tramway station, and a telephone to certain hotels.

The Snowdon Ranger route is but four miles, and takes just over two hours; but it is not so easy, nor does it afford such glorious views as the Llanberis. The Beddgelert one is still shorter, being only three and a half miles. But what steepness and what rough work, compared with the Llanberis climb!

The Watkins' Path is longer, and very awkward and dangerous to descend. The Capel Curig one is the longest by far, nearly nine miles, but its scenery is much the wildest and its views the finest, although the last part of the climb is extremely steep.

A Duck Lake.

Recent explorations in the very center of Australia have resulted in the discovery of a hitherto unknown fresh water lake. During the rainy season it has a circumference of 20 miles. The area was described as an "moving mass of ducks." At Alice Springs in the MacDonell ranges, the settlements have already been made many miles beyond the terminus of the railway, and in June, July and early August is described as ideal. There are frosts at night and sometimes ice in the pools. Fruits and vegetables are excellent and surprisingly prolific. The white children of the pioneers in this remote district look like English children and the adults are described as "fine specimens of the eyes of Australia's enthusiastic explorers.—Living Age.

Milton's Comeback.

No one has ever called John Milton a wit, but the great poet could on occasion say a snappy thing, as an old letter, recently discovered, shows. A friend, it seems, desired to meet Milton, and when he did he made this bitter remark, "Glad hath punished thee your malice toward my father by taking away your eyesight."

"Aye," said Milton, "but before I lost my eyes he lost his head."

THE LADY AND HER AGE.

It is not an ordinary lawyer who can overcome a woman's reluctance to tell her age, as was illustrated in a case recently tried in a Pennsylvania court.

"And what is your age, madam?" asked the attorney.

"My own," she answered, promptly.

"I understand that, madam, but how old are you?"

"I am not old, sir," with indignation.

"I beg your pardon, madam. I mean how many years have you passed?"

"None; the years have passed me."

"All?"

"I never heard of them stopping."

"Madam, you must answer my question. I want to know your age."

"I don't know that the acquaintance is desired by the other side."

"I don't see why you refuse to answer my question," said the attorney, coaxingly. "I am sure I would tell you how old I was if I were asked."

"Well, nobody would ask you, for everybody knows you are old enough to know better than to be asking a woman her age, so there."

And the attorney passed on to the next question.

WAS IT DRINK, FATHER?

The late Archbishop Ireland of St. Paul, Minnesota, in the course of a sermon to one of his rural parishes, found it necessary on one place to ride with a country drayman.

As they were passing through a small village, the Archbishop pointed to a tiny frame Catholic Church and said to his companion:

"I was the pastor of that church thirty-two years ago."

The drayman had no idea of the identity of his distinguished guest, for it was a raw day and the Archbishop had his great fur buttoned high. The driver turned and gazed at him curiously. Then he asked sympathetically:

"And what caused your downfall, Father? Was it drink?"

The Archbishop used to tell this story on himself, and with no little glee.

A Bootblack, who each year visits a certain section of the "swell and wooly" West, inquired on one of his visits what had become of a well-known character named Farmer Bill that he had often seen.

"Well," was the reply, "Bill's dead. Came to his end through contributory negligence."

"Contributory negligence. Why, what do you mean?"

"He showed down four aces and two of 'em was diamonds."

A farmer's mule had just balked in the road when the county editor came by. The farmer asked him if he could give him something to start the mule, as he explained he could, and reaching into his medicine case, gave the mule some powders. The mule switched his tail, tossed his head, and started on a mad gallop up the road. The farmer looked first at the flying mule and then at the doctor.

"How much did that medicine cost?" he asked.

"Oh, about fifteen cents", said the physician.

"Well, give me a quarter's worth, quick—I got to catch that mule."

They had been wife and man for three blissful days. She looked wonderful that afternoon in a morning robe of trilled nougatine, and he gazed at her adoringly.

"Tell me," he whispered, "just which one of my qualities was it that finally convinced you that you loved me? Was it my superb playing of the violin, my rich, 'cellolike voice; or perhaps it was one of the exquisite poems that I wrote you? Tell me!"

"Hector," she said softly, "it was the perfectly intoxicating stuff the barber puts on your hair. What is it about me that convinced you beyond the shadow of a doubt that we were made for each other? The intangible, indefinable beauty of my eyes? My adorable profile? Tell me.

"It was the cunning little sound you make when you eat celery," he confessed.

And, both vaguely displeased, they refrained from speaking to each other for at least five minutes.

Grand Old Man of Army

Celebrates 97th Birthday

Some Early Reminiscences

The grand old man of the British army, the oldest living officer of the Grenadier Guards, Gen. Sir George Wentworth Higginson, G.C.B., celebrated his 97th birthday lately at his home at Gyldenscroft, Marboro-on-Thames, Maidenhead, where he lives in happy retirement.

Notwithstanding his years, he is alert mentally and physically, and is proudly keeping Napoleon's most wonderful link with the past.

He has moved in the royal circle all his life, and was recently sponsor to Princess Alexandra's eldest child. He was patted on the head by King George IV. (who died in 1830), and was later one of a picnic party in Kensington Gardens, when King William IV. stopped to admire. As he has also received personal honors at the hands of Queen Victoria, King Edward VII., and King George V., it is safe to say that he is the only person living who has lived in the reigns of five sovereigns and been put to the test by their personality.

As a boy he took a stage-coach journey from London to Shropshire to take part in the christening of his grandfather's eighty-fourth birthday. This grandfather was Lord Kilnorley, who was born in 1747 and died in 1822. It is a remarkable thing to be able to say in 1923 that there is living in Great Britain one who knew and talked with a man born only a year after Culloden and who was over forty years of age when the Young Pretender died.

Gen. Higginson's grandfather lived in the days of Clive, who made secure the foundations of British India, and he had reached to man's estate when Warren Hastings was appointed Governor of Bengal, which was fourteen years before Hastings was impeached.

Young Higginson went to Eton two years before Queen Victoria ascended the throne, and his view point as an Eton cheer when Queen Victoria and Prince Albert drove through College on their way to Windsor Castle. He witnessed the procession to St. George's Chapel, of the notable people who attended the christening of King Edward VII.

When he left Eton and presented himself as an ensign in the Grenadier Guards at the Tower of London, in 1845, he was welcomed by the veteran Quartermaster, who said, "Glad to meet you, very glad. I was your father's room-servant at the Battle of Corunna." He served in the regiment for seven years, and was with it during the whole of the Crimean War.

Beginning his official career as a Grenadier at the Tower of London in 1845, he concluded it at the ancient fortress in 1892, after having lieutenant-Governor of the Tower for several years. He commanded the Brigade of Guards who had Home District from 1879 to 1884. Although he has now thirty years on the retired list, Sir George Higginson has not been idle. As a Governor of Wellington College, as director of the affairs of the Gordon Boys' Home, and as chairman of the Royal United Kingdom Beneficent Association, he has found useful avenues of service. He still sits on the Bench.

A correspondent who recently had a talk with Sir George Higginson found much marvel in the vitality and the wonderful memory of a man whose lifetime has seen so many changes. His voice is clear and resonant, and he spoke of events of his boyhood days as though they were but yesterday.

"Even in his old age," he said, "my grandfather was devotee to hunting. I can see him now in his long, red frock-coat and huntsman's cap, sitting bravely in his saddle as any young man. I can also see now the dinner-table brightened by the red coats of all the guests, except the rector of the parish. My grandfather detested the idea of a red jacket made by the village tailor, so he might not spoil the fox-hunting tradition of the Squire. I have often discarded many a red coat since then, but that little red jacket is still in my wardrobe."

"There must be few persons alive to-day who saw the Houses of Parliament reduced by fire in 1834. I was at school at Cheam," said Sir George, "and in the dark we were awakened to see the fire. From that distance we could see the flames quite plainly. Early from the fire were blown in our direction, and there was alarm among the farmers of the district lest the sparks should set their stacks alight.

"I don't suppose there are many people now living who saw Beau Brummell, the famous Arbiter elegantiarum in the days of the Dandies. My father and I had been on a visit to my uncle, Gen. Campbell, then Lieutenant-Governor of Jersey. In returning home through Normandy we passed a night at Caen, where Brummell ended his days. He was at the table d'hote. My father and I spent the evening in his company, although I, of course, being a small boy, was largely a listener."

Great Traffic Problem.

One hundred million dollars is wasted every year through traffic congestion in London streets. In the old days of horse busses and hansom cabs, traffic got terribly congested about twenty years ago. Then motor busses and taxies and underground tubes and new surface streets helped the problem. But now congestion has again appeared. On one normal day recently 55,500 vehicles passed Hyde Park corner for instance. This meant over 221 miles of continuous traffic. The trouble is only the City —a square mile—has power to close its main roads to heavy traffic. Elsewhere, even at busiest seasons, wide drawn lorries may wander.

"Seen any mysterious strangers around here lately?" casually inquired the detective from the city.

"Wal", answered Uncle Eben, "there was a feller over to town with the circus last week what took a pair o' rabbits out o' my whiskers."

RUNNING THE EMPIRE.

Enormous Amount of Work Devolves on Premier.

It is hard to realize the enormous amount of toil and trouble involved in running the British Empire — the job carried out by the Prime Minister of Great Britain.

When Parliament is in session, something like a thousand letters a day arrive at the Premier's official residence; and though the majority of these are dealt with by his private secretaries, there are quite a considerable number that demand his personal attention.

In addition, there are telegrams and cablegrams from all over the world, and, of course, telephone calls. These latter are well-nigh incessant, but unless a call is prefixed by a certain code word known only to the initiated, the caller is soon switched on into personal communication with the Prime Minister. He is answered by one of the secretaries, who deals with the message at his discretion.

The Premier's real work consists in interviewing almost continuously a procession of heads of departments and high officials of state. It is impossible to exaggerate the arduousness of this. He is constantly called upon to make, at a moment's notice, decisions of the utmost importance, decisions that may possibly affect vitally not only the British Empire, but the world at large.

And for all this nerve-racking work he gets pelf—nothing! The Prime Minister's job is a purely honorary one. His salary — roughly about £25,000 a year—comes to him in his capacity of First Lord of the Treasury.

On the other hand, however, he tastes to the full the sweets of power. He can make or unmake careers. He can create peers at will. With him rests the appointment to vacant seats of archbishops, bishops, and many high state offices are in his gift; such as, for example, ambassadorships to foreign courts, and governorships of the various colonies and dependencies comprising Britain's far-flung Empire.

Finally, he himself, although he may be only a humble commoner, takes precedence before all others of the King's subjects, save only princes of the Blood Royal, the Lord High Chancellor, and the Archbishops of Canterbury and York. While on his retirement, when handing the seals of office to his sovereign, a peerage is his for the asking.

Service Is "Washed Out."

Being a butler is not what it used to be, according to complaints made by London agencies for supplying servants. Although it is probable that the best butlers "must be born, and not made," many of them now voice the wish that they had not been born to post-war conditions of service. The salary of first-class butlers now is $600, compared with $400 before the war, but they are complaining that tips amount to nothing like the former total. Before the war a butler in the great houses of England usually reminded visiting guests that they accepted "nothing but pay." As at that time the smallest British unit of currency was a £5 note, tips from the large house parties ran into many pounds sterling total. The "new rich," however, according to the butlers, take advantage of the fact that £1 paper notes are now in use and give nothing at all if the servants won't accept them. The service is "washed out," is the motto of lordly butlers.

May Day and May Baskets.

The celebration of May day is an English custom which originated with the Druids. The Floralia, or floral games of the Romans, which began on April 28 and continued several days, were festivals of similar character. In mediaeval and Tudor England the first day of May was a great public holiday. The young people started at an early hour to gather flowers and hawthorn branches, with which they decorated every door and window in the village. In Northamptonshire it was the custom for the young men early on May day morning to give each large bunch of flowering hawthorn at the door of the prettiest girl in the village; later the hawthorn gave place to the May basket. In some places in the United States May baskets are hung on the evening of April 30, but there is no authority for the custom.

Famous Surrey School.

There are few more noted English private country schools than that at Cheam, Surrey, Eng., through which have passed several members of the royal family and many of the most distinguished men in the Old Country. Lord Milford Haven, is an old boy of Cheam School, and on July 4 he unveiled a memorial to commemorate the old boys who died in the war. This Surrey private school, whose headmaster, Mr. A. S. Tibor, was succeeded a year or two ago by Lt. H. M. S. Taylor, has a wonderful list of "old boys." It includes Lord Burnham, Lord Esher, Lord Edward Gleichen, Lord Willingdon, Lord Hardinge, Lord Dunsany, Lord Randolph Churchill, Gen. Seely and his brother, Sir Charles, Gen. Sir Ian Hamilton, and Admiral of the Fleet Sir Rodworth Meux.

British Women on Railroads.

Nearly 20,000 women are employed by the railways of the United Kingdom. Of this total the majority, of course, are employed in clerical work. A considerable number, however, are engaged in work not usually done by women. Nearly 100 are employed as laborers and a thousand more are classed as "mechanics and artisans." There are women signalmen, station-masters, foremen, policemen, engine cleaners, oilers and greasers, and at least one who is engaged in the dangerous and arduous work of a switchman.

Aliens In London.

Among aliens in London, Russians, with 29,768, are most numerous, closely followed by Poles with 26,923. French are a bad third with 11,104, and Germans only 4,742.

Man is like a tack—useful if he has a good head on him and is pointed in the right direction, but even though he is driven, he can only go as far as his head will let him.

Mount Snowdon Is Known

As the Summit of Wales

Experiences of a Climber

Most folk who go to the summit of Snowdon do so by the little mountain tramway which starts from Llanberis.

The true tourist, the man who desires really to grasp what such a mountain is like, climbs it on foot, goes through all the experiences and difficulties which such a climb entails, and then feels he has at least done a good day's work. He (or she) can afterwards legitimately boast of the expedition. The other people, the "climbers" are merely "also rans."

It is not so easy a task to climb Snowdon as the guide-books or some people say. The ascent itself may be made from five places — Llanberis, Snowdon Ranger, Beddgelert, Capel Curig, or by Watkins' Path. Of these the first is the easiest, and it is the one the writer recommends.

If it were merely a matter of the 4½ miles from Llanberis to the top of the mountain, 3,500 feet above the climb might not be at all difficult. Indeed, Penlen, and even parts, could go for most of the distance. But there are several other factors to be taken into account.

There is the uncertain mountain mist. It may be as sunny as you ever saw it when you are looking at Snowdon from Llanberis, or till you get half way up the mountain. Then a thick mist comes on with disconcerting speed—you never know from where. It wets you to the skin in a few minutes, and your clothes are writing with moisture. For you never dreamt of bringing an overcoat on such a fine warm day. This mist may safely be reckoned on to come at least three days out of any five, so if you are wise you will be prepared for it.

There may come heavy rain, which makes the easiest path on such a hill greasy and slippery, causing much danger to those climbing or descending who are not used to it, specially if they are wearing unsuitable boots or shoes.

One can afford to smile, as one sits comfortably at home, at the talk of danger from a mountain, but I saw one climber nearly killed from slipping at such a time, and gaining momentum as he descended towards a deep precipice. Only catching hold of a tree in his descent saved him.

The writer once nearly lost his own life from being overtaken by fog while about three-parts up the mountain. A friend and he were collecting rare flowers, and in the mist they strayed from the beaten track. Walking carefully along what seemed to be a mountain torrent's dry bed, the writer saw an unknown flower on one side, and went to pick it. Luckily, he had the good sense to tie that while stretching his hand to it.

The mist suddenly lifted at that moment, and the flower-gatherer found himself hanging partly over a very deep cliff, to have fallen down which must have meant a terrible death.

The difficulty of climbing Snowdon, even by the Llanberis route, the easiest, may be understood when it is stated that, while the distance to the summit is about five miles, it takes quite a good climber at least three hours to get there.

You go through woods, up cart-tracks, under the tram-rails past the inevitable "Halfway House," the track getting steeper and rougher all the time. There are splendid views of the passes, lakes, and hills all around, and the higher you climb the finer the scene.

At about 2,000 feet high you come to a spot where the Capel Curig and Snowdon Ranger routes join the Llanberis one, and then a steep ascent for a quarter of an hour or so brings you to the summit, where you find a post office, a telegraph office, the refreshment station, and a telephone to certain hotels.

The Snowdon Ranger route is but four miles long, and takes just over two hours; but it is not so easy, nor does it afford such glorious views as the other. The Beddgelert one is still shorter, being only three and a half miles. But what steepness and what hard work, compared with the Llanberis climb!

The Watkins' Path is longer, and very awkward and dangerous to descend. The Capel Curig one is the longest by far, nearly nine miles, but its scenery is much the wildest and its views the finest. Although the last part of the climb is extremely steep.

A Duck Lake.

Recent explorations in the very center of Australia have resulted in the discovery of a large and deep fresh water lake. During the rainy season it has a circumference of 20 miles. The surface was described as "a moving mass of ducks." At Alice Springs in the Macdonell Ranges, where settlements have already been made many miles beyond the terminus of the railway, the climate in July and early August is described as ideal. There are fruits at night and sometimes ice in the morning. Fruits and vegetables are excellent and surprisingly prolific. "The white children of the pioneers in this remote district look like English children and the adults are pictures of health"—at least in the eyes of Australia's enthusiastic explorers.—Living Age.

Milton's Comeback.

No one has ever called John Milton a wit, yet the great poet could on occasion say a snappy thing, as an old letter, recently discovered, shows. Charles II. desired to meet Milton, and when he did he made the bitter remark, "God hath punished you for your malice toward my father by taking away your eyesight."

"Aye," said Milton, "but before I lost my eyes he lost his head."

THE LADY AND HER AGE.

It is not an ordinary lawyer who can overcome a woman's reluctance to tell her age, as was illustrated in a case recently tried in a Pennsylvania court.

"And what is your age, madam?" asked the attorney.

"My own," she answered, promptly.

"I understand that, madam, but how old are you?"

"I am not old, sir," with indignation.

"I beg your pardon, madam. I mean how many years have you passed?"

"None; the years have passed me."

"All?"

"I never heard of them stopping."

"Madam, you must answer my question. I want to know your age."

"I don't know that the acquaintance is desired by either side."

"I don't see why you refuse to answer my question," said the attorney, coaxingly. "I am sure I would tell you how old I was if I were asked."

"But nobody would ask you, for everybody knows you are old enough to know better than to be asking a woman her age, so there."

And the attorney passed on to the next question.

WAS IT DRINK, FATHER?

The late Archbishop Ireland of St. Paul, Minnesota, in the course of a round of the rural parishes, found it necessary at one place to ride with a country drayman.

As they were passing through a small village, the Archbishop pointed to a tiny frame Catholic Church and said to his companion:

"I was the pastor of that church thirty-two years ago."

The drayman had no idea of the identity of his distinguished guest, for it was a raw day and the Archbishop had his top-coat buttoned high. The driver turned and gazed at him curiously. Then he asked sympathetically:

"And what caused your downfall, Father? Was it drink?"

The Archbishop used to tell this story on himself, and with no little glee.

A STORY OF AN OPERATION.

There are several distinctly good stories in the recently published "Reminiscences" of George H. Hanl. Here is one of them. He underwent a serious operation, and on losing consciousness his last thought was, "This is eternity." When I awoke out of from the effects of the opiate, I found myself in a darkened room, and wondered where I was and what it was all about. The kindly-featured nurse quickly discovered that my consciousness had returned, and came to my bedside, and then I remembered everything. "But why this dark room? It was early morning, when they operated on me, but now it can't be night." "No it isn't," she pithily responded, "but we were afraid of the shock you might get." "Why, what shock?" "Well, there was a big fire just across the street, and we were afraid if you awoke, and saw the flames, you might think that the operation hadn't been successful."

THE HORSE'S SPEED LIMIT.

Before an agrarian population had talk was enthusiastically to the automobile, two farmers drove into town in an old spring wagon pulled by a very bony nag. The little bang had not been long unharnessed, and among the evidences of this was a broad-tired set of wheels, "Speed limit, Ten Miles an Hour." Observing this, the driver began walking up his steed via grass by. "What's the hurry?" demanded his companion in quiet astonishment. "Slow and steady wins," returned the other. "But I dunno if I can make it that way," he added.

Ten Lawyer—I have succeeded in making a settlement with your husband that is eminently fair to both of you.

Mrs. Triplewed—Fair to both! I said have done that myself. What do you think I hired you for?

"Only on one thing is there general agreement about Henry Ford: he is the richest man in the world. Perhaps there never was such a rich man with the exception of John D. Rockefeller, who has given away half a billion dollars and is supposed to have nearly as much left. Despite his gifts, which never before were equalled or approached by a philanthropist, John D. Rockefeller is reckoned the second richest man. A writer in the New York Times after much inquiry among men likely to be well informed, compiles the list of the richest ten men which places Ford and the Rockefeller second, and eight others as follows:—

The Duke of Westminster—$150,000,000 to $200,000,000.

Sir Basil Zaharoff—$100,000,000 to $125,000,000.

Hugo Stinnes—$100,000,000.

Percy Rockefeller—$100,000,000.

Baron H. Mitsui—$100,000,000.

Hard to Estimate.

To find the precise fortune of men of great wealth is extremely difficult, and the greater the wealth the greater the difficulty. Few of them are in the position of Henry Ford in that they cannot tell within a quarter of a million the extent of their fortune. Three months ago a statement showed that the Ford Motor Company had assets of $356,331,939 besides $159,695,687 in cash. The stock is all owned by Henry Ford and his son, Edsel. Nobody knows the precise wealth of T. B. Walker, of Minnesota, because it is mostly in lumber, some of which will not be marketed for many years." One can but guess at what it will fetch when sold, nor is income a sure guide, for a shrinkage in an expension in securities might cut it two or double it in time in a year. It has been noted that few men of supposedly fabulous wealth ever leave as much as had been expected; and that many men almost unheard of have tremendous fortunes. Generally it is assumed that the men who have gradually accumulated their millions and have lived in a ripe age make a considerable distribution of their property before they die in order that inheritance taxes may be avoided. J. P. Morgan was supposed to be one of the wealthiest men in the world, but his will was proved at slightly more than $78,000,000.

The Great Families.

Still more difficult to estimate is the wealth of families, but the Times writer offers the following educated guesses:—

The Rothschilds—$250,000,000 to $300,000,000.

The Guggenheims—$200,000,000.

The Vanderbilts — $75,000,000 to $100,000,000.

The Mellons — $75,000,000, two-thirds of which is credited to Andrew W. Mellon, Secretary of the U. S. Treasury.

It is curious to note that only one of these families, and that the poorest, was originally of English-speaking stock. The Rothschilds, whose name has for generations been a synonym for fabulous wealth, are scattered all over Europe. There are five families of them in England alone. The two Japanese multimillionaires might properly be included in the family group because each of them is the head of a clan.

Land Poor.

In one respect the poorest of the rich men is the Duke of Westminster. It is known that he was forced to sell such treasures as Gainsborough's "Blue Boy" and Reynolds' picture of Mrs. Siddons as "The Muse of Tragedy" to raise funds to pay his taxes. He chose to part with these heirlooms rather than sell any of his real estate, for to the evidences of this was a broadcloth suit of the town line—"Stroll down Ten Miles an Hour." Observing this, the driver began walking up his steed via grass by.

Sources of Wealth.

To assess the wealth of the Gaekwar of Baroda or of half a dozen great Indian potentates is impossible. For instance, his income has been variously computed at $5,000,000, $12,500,000 and $50,000,000 a year. Much of the wealth of native rulers is in jewels and perhaps hidden gold, whose value must be a matter of wild surmise.

It is the only man on the entire list whose fortune was produced by manufacture, without the profits having been used for financial purposes. J. B. Duke is the head of a tobacco king, who started life with his family's tobacco handling firm. He has also banking interests and still broader ventures in electric power. George F. Baker has been long identified with railroads, fire insurance and gas. The wealth of the Guggenheims comes from mining and metallurgy; that of the Mellons from timber. Stinnes is in all kinds of enterprises in Germany, and is one of those whose wealth was doubled or trebled, in a year by the fall in the value of the mark, since some of his greatest industries were paid for when the mark had almost ceased to have any value, except in the payment of debts previously contracted.

Asmodeus Is Said to Have Usurped Throne of Solomon for a Time.

In Jewish demonology Asmodeus was an evil spirit who was said to have possessed what to-day would be called an X-ray eye. Asmodeus is sometimes jocularly spoken of as destroying matrimonial happiness. In the apocryphal book of Tobias, the Detroit News states, he is represented as loving Sara, the daughter of Raguel and Edna, and causing the death of seven husbands on the bridal night. Tobias, instructed by the angel Raphael, burned the heart and liver of a fish that he caught in the Tigris, and the smell drove the demon into Egypt, where Raphael bound him, leaving Tobias and Sara in peace.

According to the testament of Solomon, Asmodeus brought to Solomon's service the magic worm Shamir, whose touch split stones; he then for a time usurped the throne of Solomon, performing many of the evil deeds attributed to Solomon. Le Sage has made Asmodeus the title character of his "Le Diable Boiteux" ("The Limping Devil, or Devil on Two Sticks"). Asmodeus being fabled as having become lame by breaking his leg. He is released from prison, a bottle, by Don Cleofas, a young Spanish scholar whom Asmodeus carries in his flight over Madrid, giving him the power of seeing through the roofs and walls of the houses.

Origin of Familiar Phrases.

The expression, "a pig in a poke," originated in Northampton Market, when some wags put a cat in a bag or poke, and sold it as a pig to a countryman. When the buyer opened the bag, out jumped the cat. This also gave rise to the expression, "letting the cat out of the bag."

"Kicking the bucket" is a phrase that owes its conception to the days of the great gold rush to California and Australia in 1849-51. Many unfortunate seekers after gold, losing their all in an unavailing effort to find the precious "dust," committed suicide. The suicide tied a rope to a beam in his hut. Then, standing on an upturned bucket, he would adjust the other end of the rope round his neck. When all was ready he simply kicked the bucket from under his feet.

"Worth a Jew's eye" probably came from the fact that King John extorted large sums of money from Jews under threats of mutilation. All the teeth of one Jew in Bristol were extracted to satisfy the King's rapacity.

From a corruption of the Anglo-Saxon we get the phrase, "as mad as a hatter." It has nothing to do with a "hatter," really. The word "mad" in Anglo-Saxon meant furious, angry, or even venomous, and "atter" meant an "adder or viper." Thus the whole expression really means "as venemous as an adder."

Marrying Ages.

In Britain the age at which parties may legally bind themselves in marriage is fourteen in the case of boys and twelve in that of girls.

In Germany a man must be at least eighteen years of age before he may marry. In Portugal a boy of fourteen is considered marriageable, and a girl of twelve.

In Greece a youth must have seen at least fourteen summers and the girl twelve. In France the man must be eighteen and the woman sixteen, and in Belgium the same ages.

In Spain the intended husband must have passed his fourteenth year and the wife her twelfth. In Switzerland boys from the age of fourteen and girls from the age of twelve are allowed to marry.

In Turkey any youth and maiden who can walk properly and can understand the necessary religious service are allowed to be united for life.

Bamboo Reinforces Concrete.

Bamboo, which has been chemically treated, is used as a reinforcement for concrete in Japan, according to the magazine Concrete. Henry C. Hitchcock, American consul at Nagasaki, states that the chemicals used in treating the bamboo are apparently known only to the few who have made use of them.

"Bamboo is occasionally used without chemicals to protect it from decay in the construction of concrete ditches, small culverts and the like in districts where there is a great deal of sulphur in the soil and sulphur gas in the air," says the writer. "This is done because it is believed that bamboo is not so quickly destroyed by the sulphur as ordinary reinforcing would be."

Potato Appropriately Honored.

The lowly potato has at last been given just recognition. Poets may sing the praises of pomegranates and other tropical fruits, but the potato now has a monument erected in its honor. The granite tablet, erected by farmers on a piece of land in the Hartz Mountains, bears the inscription, "Here was made the first experiment in growing potatoes in 1741." The experiment was tried just 175 years ago. At that time few people consented to eat the food. The cultivation of potatoes had started in Bohemia more than a century before the experiment was tried in Prussia.

Her Only Flight Through Air.

Little Nellie's mother was entertaining a famous aviator. After he had finished a thrilling story, little daughter sighed deeply and said:

"I've clear forgot how it feels to sail through the air."

"Why, Nellie," said her mother in a shocked voice, "you were never in the air in your life."

"Gracious, mamma! Have you forgotten that the stork brought me?"—Everybody's Magazine.

EDWARD LAWLER DIES SUDDENLY.

Well Known Horticulturist Passes Away at Age of Sixty-two.

Edward Lawler, 62, ror thirty-three years a well known, and beloved citizen of Butte county, died suddenly yesterday at his home three miles north of Chico, California.

Ed. Lawler, as he was familiarly known, was born May 15th, 1861, near Kingston, Ontario, one of ten children of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Lawler. Ed. Lawler received his education in the public schools and spent his spare time at work on the farm. In 1881, at the age of 21 he engaged in lumbering at Mascosta, Michigan. On April 7th, 1882, Mr. Lawler came to Humboldt county in the employ of the California Redwood Company. In 1890 he came to Butte county and was employed by the late Barney Cus. sick in his lumber camps until 1895, when he was placed in the charge of a camp for the Sierra Lumber Company. While foreman for that company at Smokey Creek, in June, 1901, he was caught between a trail of logs in a chute, with six horses hooked on, crushing his left leg.

Lawler was taken to the Lane hospital in San Francisco. After a period of nine months he returned to Chico on crutches and in another year returned to his position. Still using crutches Lawler was assigned to work of firing a stationary engine, and remained in that position until 1906, when the company was sold to the Diamond Match Company. Lawler then purchased the Lowe store on Second street and sold stationery, cigars and confections for nine months, when he decided to devote his time to horticulture.

In 1900, Lawler had purchased twenty acres on the Bidwell tract from Cussick. For many years the acreage yielded excellent fruit crops. In addition Lawler leased a twenty-five acre prune orchard. Lawler was an advocate of the sanitary method of curing and caring for the fruit. Each spring he washed and cleaned his trays. Lawler managed and supervised his own business and was considered an authority on horticultural production.

The deceased was the second member to be placed on the lists of the California Peach Growers' Association in Chico.

OBITUARY.

Alexander Hewitt.

On Thursday, October 25th, 1923, occurred the death of a highly respected resident of Richmond Township, in the person of Alexander Hewitt, at the home of his son, Edward.

Although in his 82nd year, he was quite active, and was in his accustomed place at church three weeks before his death. His wife, whose maiden name was Harriett Fennell, predeceased him a little over a year ago. He is survived by two sons, Edward on the homestead, and Nelson on a farm near by. Two children, William who died in young manhood and Emma dying a number of years ago. In early life deceased taught school, finally settling on the farm where he died. For a number of years he was salesman for Kingsford and Forest Mills cheese factories.

In religion he was an Anglican, for many years a delegate to General Synod and Secretary-Treasurer of the home church since the time it was built. Indeed there was no department of church work that was too arduous for him. For him it was a labor of love.

The funeral service was conducted in St. John's Church, Selby, on Saturday, Oct. 27th, by Rev. J. H. H. Coleman, Napanee, who spoke very feelingly of the loss the church had sustained in the death of so loyal a member.

In politics he was a staunch Conservative, and since early boyhood a member of the Orange Order. The beautiful ritual of that Order was conducted at the graveside by Mr. Harold McCullough and Mr. Jay Doyle.

He lived quiet, unostentatious gentle the world a little better where his feet had trod. It is on such a life as this no matter how unknown to the world they may be that the angels love to smile.

NORMAL WINTER AHEAD.

Neither Unusually Cold Nor Mild.—Influence of the Gulf Stream.

Worcester, Mass., Nov. 6.—A normal winter, neither unusually cold nor mild over the eastern half of the United States seems more probable than an exceptional season, says Dr. Charles F. Books, Professor of meteorlogy at Clark University, as a result of studies made of the temperature of the Gulf Stream and adjacent water during the past several months.

The dry, stormless summer was due, Dr. Brooks says, to a relatively cool Gulf Stream and accompanying high air pressure over the western Atlantic. The Gulf Stream is now showing signs of warming up, as a result of studies made of the temperature of the Gulf Stream and adjacent water during the past several months.

NAPANEE RUGBY TEAM PLAY WITH BELLEVILLE

The Napanee Rugby Team journeyed to Belleville and played against the Belleville High School, last Saturday, the game ending in a tie, 2-2. Owing to the weather conditions, the game was not so interesting as it might have been under favorable weather. The Napanee team consisted of the following players—Howard, Perry, Harry Babcock, Clifford Cowie, Wallace Perry, Willie Proctor, Douglas Fraser, Fred Bentley, Percy Stewart, Fred Huffman, Arnold Rogers, Aubrey Garrison, Russell Grass.

Robert Blakely, one of the stars, is ill in the Kingston Hospital, and therefore the team was at a loss without Blakely's services.

EDWARD LAWLER DIES SUDDENLY.

Well Known Horticulturist Passes Away at Age of Sixty-two.

Edward Lawler, 62, for thirty-three years a well known and beloved citizen of Butte county, died suddenly yesterday at his home three miles north of Chico, California.

Ed. Lawler, as he was familiarly known, was born May 15th, 1861, near Kingston, Ontario, one of ten children of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Lawler. Ed. Lawler received his education in the public schools and spent his spare time at work on the farm. In 1881, at the age of 21 he engaged in lumbering at Mascosta, Michigan. On April 7th, 1882, Mr. Lawler came to Humbolt county in the employ of the California Redwood Company. In 1890 he came to Butte county and was employed by the late Barney Cussick in his lumber camps until 1895, when he was placed in the charge of a camp for the Sierra Lumber Company. While foreman for that company at Smokey Creek, in June, 1901, he was caught between a trail of logs in a chute, with six horses hooked on, crushing his left leg.

Lawler was taken to the Lane hospital in San Francisco. After a period of nine months he returned to Chico on crutches and in another year returned to his position. Still using crutches Lawler was assigned to work of firing a stationary engine, and remained in that position until 1906, when the company was sold to the Diamond Match Company. Lawler then purchased the Lowe store on Second street and sold stationery, cigars and confections for nine months, when he decided to devote his time to horticulture.

In 1900, Lawler had purchased twenty acres on the Bidwell tract, from Cussick. For many years this acreage yielded excellent fruit crops. In addition Lawler leased a twenty-five acre prune orchard. Lawler was an advocate of the sanitary method of curing and caring for the fruit. Each spring he washed and cleaned his trays. Lawler managed and supervised his own business and was considered an authority on horticultural production.

The deceased was the second member to be placed on the lists of the California Peach Growers' Association in Chico.

OBITUARY.

Alexander Hewitt.

On Thursday, October 25th, 1923, occurred the death of a highly respected resident of Richmond Township, in the person of Alexander Hewitt, at the home of his son, Edward.

Although in his 82nd year, he was quite active, and was in his accustomed place at church three weeks before his death. His wife, whose maiden name was Harriett Fennell, predeceased him a little over a year ago. He is survived by two sons, Edward on the homestead, and Nelson on a farm near by. Two children, William who died in young manhood and Emma dying a number of years ago. In early life deceased taught school, finally settling on the farm where he died. For a number of years he was salesman for Kingsford and Forest Mills cheese factories.

In religion he was an Anglican, for many years a delgate to General Synod and Secretary-Treasurer of his home church since the time it was built. Indeed there was no department of church work that was too arduous for him. For him it was a labor of love.

The funeral service was conducted in St. John's Church, Selby, on Saturday, Oct. 27th, by Rev. J. H. H. Coleman, Napanee, who spoke very feelingly of the loss the church had sustained in the death of so loyal a member.

In politics he was a staunch Conservative, and since early boyhood a member of the Orange Order. The beautiful ritual of that Order was conducted at the grave-side by Mr. Harold McCullough and Mr. Jay Doyle.

He lived quiet, unostentatious gentle the world a little better where his feet had trod. It is on such a life as this no matter how unknown to the world they may be that the angels love to smile.

NORMAL WINTER AHEAD.

Neither Unusually Cold Nor Mild.—Influence of the Gulf Stream.

Worcester, Mass., Nov. 6.—A normal winter, neither unusually cold nor mild over the eastern half of the United States seems more probable than an exceptional season, says Dr. Charles F. Books, Professor of meteorlogy at Clark University, as a result of studies made of the temperature of the Gulf Stream and adjacent water during the past several months.

The dry, stormless summer was due, Dr. Brooks says, to a relatively cool Gulf Stream and accompanying high air pressure over the western Atlantic. The Gulf Stream is now showing signs of warming up a bit, but the warmth will be only temporary and of a moderate character and a continuation of the relatively quiet weather of the past several months is looked for during the winter season. This, says Dr. Brooks, means that there is no basis for expecting a winter out of the ordinary in eastern North America.

BICKNELL'S CORNERS

The weather continues very nice, which gives the farmers a good chance to get their fall ploughing finished.—The social evening of the Mission Circle was held last Friday evening at Mr. George Scott's, and all had a very nice time.—The masquerade concert was held in the town hall, at Camden East, on Nov. 3rd, Miss Marion Simmons taking first prize in costume. — Quite a number from here attended the anniversary service at Newburgh last Sunday.—Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Simmons spent Friday evening at Desmond teamstering; also Mr. and Mrs. Jack Fairbairn.—Mr. and Mrs. Bert. Teomans spent a day last week at Odessa, visiting Mrs. Fred. Caton, who is ill.—Mr. Delbert Sexsmith has his new driveshouse completed, which is a fine looking one.—Hallowe'en passed off very good, and not very many went out.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. William Hayes.

On November 1st, 1923, an esteemed resident of Erinsville, Mrs. William Hayes, passed to her eternal rest. Deceased had been in failing health for the past two years, but about two weeks previous to her decease, alarming symptoms of heart trouble began to develop which appalled the sufferer that the end was fast approaching. Although at times her sufferings were intense, her great patience and cheerful resignation were marvellous. Being of a bright, genial disposition she had always hosts of admiring friends. Fortified with the rites of the holy church and surrounded by her grandchildren and her daughter with whom she lived, she passed peacefully away. The funeral was held from her late residence on Saturday morning at 9 o'clock. A long cortege of sorrowing relatives and friends followed the remains to the R. C. Church, Erinsville, where a solemn requiem mass was sung by Rev. Father O'Reilly for the repose of her soul. She leaves to mourn her loss, three sons and two daughters, Mrs. Joseph Kidd, Erinsville, and Mrs. Ray Gray, of Nashwaak, Maine, and John A. Hayes, of Boston; Ont., and James, of British Columbia.

BETHEL.

A number from here attended the sale of Mrs. Eliza Freeburn, on Tuesday.—Messrs. Albert and Jay Hamilton, Johnnie Bonnet and Jay Hamilton are among the hunters in the township.—Mrs. H. Howard Galbraith, of Deer Lake, visited her father, Mr. Robert Galbraith, and family, recently.—Mr. and Mrs. Charles Adair, of Calumquir, Mr. and Mrs. G. Hicks, Mr. Simeon and Miss Isabella Affrey, of Erinsville, had dinner at Mrs. Curtis Affrey's on Sunday.—At this writing are fairly regulated again with rather more than the usual number of additions. Quite a few have suffered and tried at the home of Perry Allenbrand.—Mrs. Lamb Allenbrand visited at Mrs. Curtis Affrey's on Saturday last week.—Mrs. Myrtle McWilliams spent a couple of days last week with Mrs. Andy Brown, Harrington.—Carman Salisbury, Queen's, Kingston, is at home for a few days, to spend Thanksgiving at their home here.—Mrs. Huffman, Moscow, with her daughter, Mrs. J. Hamilton.

"OP-O-ME-THUME" — AN ANALYSIS.

Judging by the comments heard at the close of the play which the Faculty players put on the other night at the Town Hall, it would seem as though a good many of those who heard and saw that very capable piece of work had not properly understood its purpose and real meaning. "A poor play well acted", "Women may be fools but they are never such fools as that", "What an unsatisfactory ending". These and many other comments one caught on leaving the hall. Without ever having read the play or having seen it acted before, but depending wholly on the impression made, let us see if these comments were justified. The story is of life among the lower working class girls in England. The mistress of the laundry, a married worker who supports a worthless husband, three unmarried working girls and the man constitute the caste. The mistress and the married worker are there merely to round out the play. Two of the other girls are the victims of variously with younger men friends who take them to various places of amusement and especially to Hampstead on the holidays. The other girl, Clem, was reared in the Union or workhouse, is under-sized and under-nourished and feels keenly the stigma of her early years. But she has been able to forget the others guessing as to her younger days and her relation to Mr. Horace Greensmith, the man in the play. The girls, with the exception of Clem, leave the factory on a certain Saturday night, with the arrangement to meet there on Monday at nine o'clock preparatory to going to Hampstead with their young men. The stage is cleared of all but Clem when Greensmith comes on. And by a clever piece of acting Clem makes him understand she would like him to take her to Hampstead like the other girls. He promises to do so, and is to meet her at the laundry at nine o'clock. But when he finds that the other girls are to be there at the same time he asks Clem to meet him at a place two blocks away. At first she scorns, and then refuses to go at all. He leaves the stage and the plays ends.

Why did she not go with him and thus make some future time become his wife, and the audience's desire for a happy ending be fulfilled? The way in which that question is answered constitutes the meaning and the purpose of the play.

There are three motives which may have been operative in the action of Clem in first refusing to go, namely, an injured pride, and the third, a real love for Greensmith.

With respect to the first. She had not seen Greensmith for a long time, he had become the hero of her ideals, he was in fact her dream man. And when he appeared the reality shattered her ideals and she could not bring herself to go with him. That is a possible motive. But for one who was as clever as Clem it would not have been necessary for her to proceed as far as she did before she found out that he was not the man she supposed him to be. We may dismiss this as a real factor in the action.

With respect to the second. For a long time Clem had made the other girls feel that there was a real relation of some kind existing between herself and Greensmith. If only she could have him at the laundry at the same time they were there and be seen by them going on a holiday with him all would be vindicated and her pride satisfied. But the disappointment at not being able to do this caused her to refuse to have anything more to do with him. Again this is a possible motive. But Clem had she really wanted to, could have easily arranged it that they could meet somewhere during the day, and if not that day, then some other. So that this must be dismissed as well.

There then remains what to me is the true motive for her action, that is, her love with Greensmith. There are plenty of evidences of this in the play, in the first place she was afraid of losing his character by being in his company. Only love could prompt a statement like that. In the second place the statement, "You have broken my heart and have stuck a pin through it" is not elegant language, but it is the most reasoned that the play is not with people that use elegant language, and the sentiment is surely one of love. Consideration in which she kept such a simple thing as a shirt waist more than a mere whim. And then too the line "He has given me a kiss and cannot take that away" is conclusive proof of a real affection.

When he suggested that they go to some other place than Hampstead, and when he refused to meet her with the other girls, she realized her position more keenly than ever. When your friends see me with you they will say, 'Where did you get her? Where did you pick up the little Up-O-Me-Thumb?' He would be ashamed of her, and shame and love do not coinhabit. She tells him she was pretending all the time, whereas this is the only piece of pretending in the whole play. She sends him off and goes on alone.

One cannot escape the conviction that the motive in the mind of the writer was to uphold the ideal of womanhood and to show that even amongst the lowest classes women are willing to sacrifice their own feelings rather than have another hurt or injured in any least bit.

Clem was not a fool by any means, but rather from a lower strata of society and in a rather crude form she reveals what is one of the highest traits in women the willingness to sacrifice themselves for the fulfilment of their deepest desires, that the object of those desires should be free and untrammelled.

Near the end of the programme the following address was read by Miss Minnie Interment.—We look for a number leaving our community for Toronto, where she will train for a nurse.

Dear Kathleen:—We, the members of the Mission Circle, are met this evening, as we have often met before, to enjoy our Circle gathering; that we may in our small way do something to promote the Kingdom of God. But in this we have spent the time of sadness in our hearts as we take a forward look. In the days to come we shall meet but you will not be with us. We shall miss very much, Kathleen, your pleasant face and agreeable manner. Your cheerful readiness to accept any task, and the characteristic energy with which you performed it, were always much appreciated, and we shall only realize what we owe to you when we are looking elsewhere for the assistance you were wont to give.

As you have left a noble profession which calls you from our community to a field of great service, we wish to assure you that we pray for your best wishes for your future. We hope that in your new surroundings, among new Endeavorers, you will not forget the old-tried ones of Strathcona. Please accept this Testament as a remembrance and a daily reminder that we love you, and as you pursue its, may it prove a light to your path to guide you in leaving service wherever He may lead.

LEAH FOX,
President.
HAROLD HOARE,
Secretary.
RUTH FINLAY,
Hon. President.

In a few chosen words Miss Wilson thanked the members of the Circle for their gift, and the remainder of the evening was spent in social intercourse. Refreshments were served, and a very enjoyable evening was experienced by all.

The Mission Circle concert will be held this Friday evening, Nov. 16th, in the Library Hall. The programme will begin at 8 o'clock, and will be one so be on time. A good programme is being provided. Admission 25c. and 10c.

NEWBURGH.

No correspondence has appeared from Newburgh for the last three or four weeks, and of course many items that were once current news, have gone to swell the list of past events. There are, however, a few things that may still be interesting news to readers of the Beaver outside, who were at one time residents of the place and are still interested in the happenings in the old town.

Mr. James Wales has sold his home in the east end of the village to Captain Slade, and is now looking for another place to rest the sole of his foot.

Mr. Zack Milligan and family have bought the house in which they have lived for some years. This house was part of the estate of the late Dr. E. O. Lanfear. Suitable houses for homes are scarce in Newburgh, and prices are not yet sufficiently high to induce building, with the cost of material so high.

Thanksgiving time brought nothing special. The services in the churches on Sunday were of a nature to suit the occasion, and some of our teachers and others whose homes are outside took advantage of the holiday to visit their friends. Whether there was the usual consumption of viands associated with Thanksgiving Day we do not know, but in what we do know is that communities like Newburgh, of which there are hundreds in the Province of Ontario, have much reason to be thankful. Having an opportunity of seeing as much of life as is necessary to make them happy, daily opportunity of knowing what is going on in the world, plenty to eat and wear, nothing of a harrowing or generally disappointing nature in which they are forced to concentrate their thoughts which are allowed to run untrammeled and free without undue restraint or unnecessary contradiction. So one is led to shout "Hurrah, for Ontario", or to be more specific "Hurrah, for Newburgh", and one is reminded that he is only the country correspondent of a respectable weekly newspaper and must not get too exuberant or chatty. All the same we should be thankful.

Dr. H. R. Lonsmore and his daughter, Josephine, made a flying visit to the home of T. A. Dunnewell, on Saturday afternoon.

Dr. Mounce's brother and some other young people spent the week end with the Doctor and his mother.

Mr. Aller Switzer, of Oshawa, is spending a few days with his mother and sister.

Mrs. Garrigan, better known in Newburgh as Florence Fox, is visiting her grandmother, Milligan.

The pulpit of the Union Church will be occupied by strange ministers for the first four weeks. The central theme will be Missions, and the ministerings are expected.

The young ladies' class of the Union Sunday School entertained the young men's class to a delightful social evening on Friday last. Dr. Mounce, who is teacher of the young men's class, expressed their thanks in most felicitous terms.

The Misses Nickle, of Brantford and Toronto, spent Thanksgiving at the parsonage.

The teachers and pupils of the public school celebrated Hallowe'en by spending a pleasant social hour from 3 to 4, on Wednesday, October 31st. A very fine treat of candy was given to the children by Mrs. T. I. Winter, the wife of the Chairman of the Board of Education.

We do not like to criticise, but there is room for improvement in the singing of the High School Cadets class on parade, rather too much jazz.

The report runs have not raised the water much in the wells, and the fall season for getting busy to dig for water.—Mr. and Mrs. Wm. OBITUARY.

Mrs. William Hayes.

On November 14th, 1923, an esteemed resident of Erinsville, Mrs. William Hayes, passed to her eternal reward. Deceased had been in failing health for the past two years, but about two weeks previous to her decease, alarming symptoms of heart trouble began to develop which appeared to suffocate that the end was fast approaching. Although at times her sufferings were intense, her great patience and cheerful resignation were marvellous. Being of a bright, genial disposition she had always hosts of admiring friends. Fortified with the rites of the holy church and surrounded by her grandchildren and her daughter with whom she lived, she passed peacefully away. The funeral was held from her late residence on Saturday morning at 9 o'clock, A long cortege of sorrowing relative and friends followed the remains to the R. C. Church, Erinsville, where a solemn requiem mass was sung by Rev. Father O'Reilly for the repose of her soul. She leaves to mourn her loss one son, Alfred Hayes, Jr., two daughters, Mrs. Jos. Ridd, Erinsville, and Mrs. Percy Gay, Nashwauk, Minn., and John A. Hayes of Darling Ones, and Jones, of British Columbia.

ARDEN.

"OP-O-ME-THUME" — AN ANALYSIS.

Judging by the comments heard at the close of the play which the Faculty players put on the other night at the Town Hall, it would seem as though a good many of those who heard the play capable piece of work had not properly understood its purpose and real meaning. "A poor play well acted", "Women may be fools but they are never such fools as that", "What an unsatisfactory ending", these and many other comments one caught on leaving the hall. Without ever having read the play or having seen it acted before, but depending wholly on the impression made, let us see if these comments were justified. The story is of life among the lower working class girls in England. The mistress of the laundry, a married worker who supports a worthless husband, three unmarried working girls and the man constitute the caste. The mistress and the married worker are there merely to round out the play. Two of the other girls are bright and vivacious young women (Florence and Ida) take them to various places of amusement and especially to Buckingham Palace. The other girl, Clem, was reared in the Union or workhouse, is under-sized and undernourished and feels keenly the stigma of her early years. But she has been able to keep the others guessing as to her younger days and her relation to Mr. Horace Greensmith, the man in the play. The girls, with the exception of Clem, leave the factory on a certain Saturday night, with the arrangement to meet there on Monday at nine o'clock preparatory to going to Hampstead with their young friend. The stage is cleared of all but Clem when Greensmith comes on. And by a clever piece of acting Clem makes him understand she would like him to take her to Hampstead like the other girls. He promises to do so, and is to meet her at the laundry at nine o'clock. But when he finds that the other girls are to be there at the same time he asks Clem to meet him at a place two blocks away. At first she agrees, and then refuses to go at all. He leaves the stage and the plays ends.

Why did she not go with him and then at some future time become his wife, and the audience's desire for a happy ending be fulfilled? The way in which that question is answered constitutes the meaning and the purpose of the play.

There are three motives which may have been operative in the action of Clem.—First a shattered ideal, second an injured pride, and the third, a real love for Greensmith.

With respect to the first. She had not seen Greensmith for a long time, he had become the herself her ideals, he was in fact her dream man. And when he appeared the reality shattered her ideals and she could not bring herself to go with him. That is one possible motive. But for one who was as clever as Clem it would not have been necessary for her to proceed as far as she did before she found out that he was not the man she supposed him to be. We may dismiss this as a real factor in the action.

With respect to the second. For a long time Clem had made the other girls feel that there was a real relation of some kind existing between herself and Greensmith. If only she could have him at the laundry at the same time they were there and be seen by them going on a holiday with him all would be vindicated and her pride satisfied. But the disappointment in being able to do this caused her to refuse to have anything more to do with him. Again this is a possible motive. But Clem has been really wanted to, could have easily arranged it that they could meet somewhere during the day, and on Monday, then some other. So that this must be dismissed as well.

The true reason which to me is the true motive for her action, that she was in love with Greensmith. There are plenty of evidences of this in the play, in the first place she was not afraid of losing her good name by being in his company. Only love could prompt a statement like that. In the second place the expression "You have broken my heart and have left a pin through it" is not elegant language. But one must remember that the play is not with people that are elegant language, and the sentiment is surely one of love. The veneration in which she kept such a simple thing as a shirt was more than a mere whim. And then too the line "He has given me a kiss and cannot take that away" is conclusive proof of a real affection.

When he suggested that they go to some other place than Hampstead and when he refused to meet her with the other girls, she realized her position more keenly than ever. "When your friends see me with you they will say, 'Where did you get it?' Where did you pick up the little Up-O-Me-Thumb?'" He would be ashamed of her and she knew that she do not coinhabit. She tells him she was pretending all the time, whereas this is the only piece of sincerity in the whole play. She sends him off and goes on alone.

One cannot escape the conviction that the motive in the mind of the writer was to uphold the ideal of womanhood and to show that even amongst the lowest classes women are willing to sacrifice their deepest feelings rather than have another hurt or injustice in any least bit.

Clem was not a fool by any means, but rather from a lower strata of society and in a rather crude form she reveals what is one of the loveliest traits in women the willingness to sacrifice themselves and the fulfilment of their deepest desires, that the object of those desires should be free and untrammelled.

STRATHCONA.

The weather has been quite unsettled this week and coughs and colds seem to be very prevalent. — Miss Marguerite McGuire, who is attending school in Toronto, spent the week-end under the parental roof. — Mrs. John Meeks and family, of Syracuse, N.Y., are visiting at the home of Mr. Fred Robinson.—Mr. Jordan, of Tordenville, spent a few days this week visiting his daughter, Mrs. Frank Tompkins.—Mrs. Frank Haines spent Sunday at Mr. Ed. Wilson, who is leaving our community for Toronto, where she will train for a nurse.

Dear Kathleen:—We, the members of the Mission Circle, are met this evening, as we have often met before, to enjoy our Circle gathering, that we may in our small way do something to promote the Kingdom of God. But to-night there is a tinge of sadness in our hearts as we take a forward look, for in the near future we shall miss but you will not be with us. We shall miss very much, Kathleen, your pleasant face and agreeable manner. Your cheerful readiness to accept any task, and the characteristic energy with which you performed it, were always much appreciated, and we shall only realize what we owe to you when we are looking elsewhere for the assistance you were wont to give.

As you enter this noble profession which calls you from our community to a field of great service, we wish to express our thanks to you and our best wishes for your future. We hope that in your new surroundings among new friends, you will not forget the old-tried ones of Strathcona. Please accept this Testament as a remembrance and a daily reminder that we love you, and as you pursue its pages may it prove a light to your path to guide you in loving service wherever He may lead.

LEAH FOX,
President.
HAROLD HOARE,
Secretary.

RUTH FINLAY,

In a few chosen words Miss Wilson thanked the members of the Circle for their gift, and the remainder of the evening was spent in social intercourse. Refreshments were served, and a very enjoyable evening was enjoyed by all.

NEWBURGH.

No correspondence has appeared from Newburgh for the last three or four weeks, and of course many items that were once current news, have gone to swell the list of past events. There are, however, a few things that may still be interesting news to readers of the Beaver outside, who were at one time residents of the place and are still interested in the happenings in the old town.

Mr. James Wales has sold his home in the east end of the village to Captain Slack and is now looking for another place to rest the sole of his foot.

Mr. Zack Milligan and family have bought the house in which they have lived for some years. This house was part of the estate of the late Dr. E. O. Lanfear. Suitable houses for homes are scarce in Newburgh and prices are not yet sufficiently high to induce building, with the cost of material so high.

Thanksgiving time brought nothing special. The services in the churches on Sunday were of a nature to suit the occasion, and some of our teachers and other workers are quite outside look advantagee of the holiday to visit their friends. Whether there was the usual consumption of turkey associated with Thanksgiving Day we do not know, but this we do know is that communities like Newburgh, of which there are hundreds in the Province of Ontario, have much reason to be thankful. Having an opportunity of seeing as much of life as is necessary to make them happy, daily opportunities of knowing what is going on in the world, plenty to eat and wear, nothing of a harrowing or generally disappointing nature on which they are forced to concentrate their thoughts which are allowed to run untrammelled and free without undue restraint or unreasonable contradiction. So one is led to shout "Hurrah, for Ontario", or to be more specific "Hurrah, for Newburgh". But one is reminded that he is only the country correspondent of a respectable weekly newspaper and must not get too exuberant or chesty. All the same we should be thankful.

Dr. H. R. Longmore and his daughter, Josephine, made a flying visit to the home of T. A. Dunkowsky, on Sunday afternoon.

Dr. Mount's brother and some other young people spent the week end with the Doctor and his mother, Mrs. Allen Switzer, of Oshawa, is spending a few days with his mother and sister.

Mrs. Garrigan, better known in Newburgh as Florence Fox, is visiting her grandmother Milligan.

The pulpit of the Union Church will be occupied by strange ministers for the next four weeks. The central theme will be Missions. Interesting gatherings are expected.

The young ladies of the Union Sunday School entertained the young men's class to a delightful, social evening on Friday last. Dr. Mabee, who is teacher of the young men's class, expressed their thanks in most felicitous terms.

The Misses Nickle, of Brantford and Toronto, spent Thanksgiving at the parsonage.

The teachers and pupils of the public school celebrated Hallowe'en by spending a pleasant social hour, from 8 to 9, on Wednesday, October 31st. A very nice Treat of candy was given to the children by Mrs. T. I. Winter, the wife of the Chairman of the Board of Education.

We do not like to criticise, but there seems to be a lack of discipline with the High School pupils on parade, rather too much just.

WILSON'S CROSSING.

Quite a few hunters have passed through here recently, in search of deer and partridges. The report rabbits are not raised. The water mains in the wells, and the ice is now commencing busy to dip for water.—Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Allport spent Sunday last at Mr. Cyrus Wagar's, Enterprise.—Mr. H. Wagar at Mr. R. Potter's on Sunday last.—Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hall and family at Mr. J. Switzer's, on Sunday.—Mr. Wm. Dopking, of Hunter, has been spending the past two weeks at his home here.—Mrs. Amos Storey at Mrs. R. Potter's, a few days last week.—Mr. J. Fenwick and son, Donald, of Deseronto, spent Monday at Mrs. M. Fenwick's.—Mrs. Fannie French is spending a week at Roblin and Napanee.—Mr. R. Potter and family at Mr. A. Cousins', Moscow, on Sunday.—Mr. and Mrs. T. Breen at Mr. Eugene Dillon's, on Tuesday. — Mrs. H. Hitchcock has returned to her home in Enterprise, after spending some time at her brother, Mr. E. Wilson.—Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Weese spent Thursday in Kingston.—Mrs. O. Kellar and Leon spent Thanksgiving at Mr. R. Potter's.—Mr. G. Rush called at Mr. Fred Wagar's, on Friday last.—Mr. and Mrs. Weese are spending a few days with her mother, Mrs. E. Clancy, Enterprise.—Messrs. Jay and Walter Switzer spent the week end at Mr. H. Switzer's. Mr. M. Switzer has presented himself with a new Baby Grand.

DESERONTO.

The services and proper prayers at St. Mark's Church, Deseronto, Armistice Sunday, Nov. 11th, were very impressive and reverent. The two minutes silence at the morning service gave time for prayer and meditation. The Rector's sermons voiced the spirit of the day, viz., sorrow for the loss of our gallant dead, and pride in the poor fellows who so nobly sacrificed their lives for the liberty of the great Empire, of which we Canadians form so important a part. The organist and surpliced choir rendered the musical portions of the services well. Rudyard Kipling's "Recessional" sounded the true note of the Day, "Lord God of hosts be with us yet. Lest we forget". and the "Te Deum" at evening, just before the Benediction, brought to a close services during the day that must have been an uplift to all who attended them in the right spirit.

PEOPLE MOVE OUT AS TIMBER FAILS.

Ottawa, Canada, Nov. 13th. — The loss of population in numerous districts of Eastern Canada, the decadence of towns and villages forced to surrender their lumber industries, forms the basis of an interesting study by the Canadian Forestry Association. The basic reason for this 'evicted population' is the ruin of forests on which the workers depended for their living. One community in Ontario held 5,000 people twenty years ago and the count to-day is under 1,700. The exodus is accounted for entirely by the destruction of the timber resources of the district and the inability of the land to attract farming population. Flourishing lumber mills and subsidiary plants have been driven away by lack of timber and were it not for the incoming of a few new industries in later years the present 1,700 population would dwindle to the proportions of a village.

New Brunswick furnishes illustrations of the reduction of population in large areas through misuse of the forests. There is an erroneous belief abroad, says the Canadian Forestry Association, that the riddance of the forests has meant the arrival of a farming population. This applied quite generally seventy-five years ago and is true in some districts to-day, but the general rule now is that timber is growing on non-agricultural lands and the destruction of a forest destroys all hope of human activity. One section of Quebec has steadily dwindled in population, villages have been closed up, farm houses abondoned because of the loss of timber and no other population can arrive until the forests have grown again, a matter of at least a hundred years.

PENN. STATE SETS PACE TO ONTARIO IN FORESTRY ZEAL.

Pennsylvania, one of the most advanced in forestry practice, is a small state, slightly less in size than Old Ontario (south of Lake Nipissing), with a population of nearly 9 million people. In the central portion of the state exists an area of 5 million acres of forest land called by its Governor, "Pennsylvania's Desert". The people of the state early recognized that their past methods were a mistake, and that timber shortage was coming. Purchase of land was begun, and in 1921 totalled 1,126,236 acres, at a cost of $2,346,407 in cold cash, an average price of $2.26 per acre. To date they have spent on administration and development over 5 million dollars, making a total investment of nearly $7,750,000. They have 4 large and 22 small nurseries, and their planting program has covered about 23,000 acres at an average cost of $9.29. The yearly budget is around 1 million dollars and they employ 60 foresters. At the last session of the legislature a bill was introduced to borrow 25 million dollars for forestry purposes. Quite evidently Pennsylvania is in a serious frame of mind.

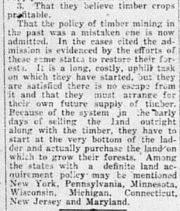
The same movement towards forest recuperation is to be found all through the New England, Middle Atlantic, and Lake States—regions once famour for their lumber production. Their actions prove:—

1. That they believe timber mining a mistaken policy.

2. That they blieve the growing of timber crops be necessary as a solution to the problems of timber supply and the use of forest land.

3. That they believe timber crops profitable.

That the policy of timber mining in the past was a mistaken one is now admitted. In the cases cited the admission is evidenced by the efforts of these same states to restore their forests. It is a long, costly, uphill task on which they have started, but they are satisfied there is no escape from it and that they must arrange for their own future supply of timber. Because of the system in the early days of selling the land outright along with the timber, they have to start at the very bottom of the ladder and actually purchase the land on which to grow their forests. Among the states with a definite land acquirement policy may be mentioned New York, Pennsylvania, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Michigan, Connecticut, New Jersey and Maryland.



GETTING THE EVIDENCE.

The Editor was frightfully busy. When an old friend sent in a card he sighed and decided not to see him.

"Look here," he said to the office boy, "you must tell the gentleman I'm out. I can't see him and I wouldn't offend him for the world. So be sure to convince him that I really am out, you see?"

"Yes, sir," said the boy. "Don't you think I'd be more likely to convince him you are out if I went to him smoking one of your cigars?"

THE COW, THE MOTHER OF PROSPERITY.

Valuable Illustrated Treatise on Dairy Farming Being Distributed by the Bank of Montreal.

"Where the cow is kept and cared for, civilization advances, lands grow richer, homes grow better, debts grow fewer."

The above is an extract from the preface of a book entitled "The Cow, the Mother of Prosperity", copies of which are being distributed by the Bank of Montreal. This book is probably the best popular treatise on dairy farming which has ever been published. It has been written with a view not only to guiding the farmer in the selection and breeding of the best and most profitable types of dairy cows, but also to guiding him in the care and feeding of dairy cows in every condition of climate and soil throughout the continent of North America. The author, Mr. Ralph A. Hayne, of the Agricultural Extension Department, International Harvester Company, in his foreword, describes the cow as one of the greatest blessings to the human race. "No nation or people", he says, "has become highly civilized without her. She produces the best human food on earth. She makes this health-building, strength-giving food from grass and coarse plants. Without her agriculture is not permanent or prosperous, people are not healthy or happy. Wherever the cow has taken her rightful place, and man has done his part we find farms furnishing an income every week of the year. We find homes with conveniences. We find intelligent, thrifty, debt-free people with minds and hearts alert from steady employment. We find a good citizenship, a good agriculture. Truly the cow is the mother of prosperity."

He proceeds to describe typical localities to which the cow would bring prosperity. Then he tells how to select the right kind of cows, describing in detail the good and bad points of cows from head to tail. The breeding, care, and feeding of cows, the best kind of feeds in various localities, the construction of barns, the making of silage, the testing of cows and their milk, methods of milking and the type and care of dairy utensils, the best methods of marketing milk, the care of calves, either for rearing or for the production of veal, the use of manure, the best breeds for varying conditions and the treatment of diseases are all dealt with fully and in plain language that anyone can understand.

A valuable feature of the book is the fact that every point dealt with is illustrated by photographs specially taken for the purpose or by diagrams. Over 250 photographs are reproduced.

The Bank of Montreal is doing a splendid work for farmers by having a special edition of many thousands of this valuable book printed for free distribution throughout farming districts in Canada. We understand that the demand for the book has exceeded all expectations, but that a reserve supply has been secured, so that a limited number is still available free of cost. Application for the book should be made to the local branch of the Bank of Montreal.

LUCKY LANDLORD.

A landlord in a certain town found it no easy matter to collect his rent with unfailing regularity.

One woman was particularly trying in this respect, and he thought himself lucky if he only received from her part of the rent due.

One morning when he called at her house she offered him half a dollar.

"Is that all you've got for me?" he inquired with a scowl. "You're so much in arrears."

"Go on, now, and be satisfied," was the reply. "You wouldn't have that by old man hadn't sold the back door."

AN EYE ON THE ODDS.

A farm hand was taken ill, and his employer sent him with a note to a doctor. Next morning the patient returned. "You're looking much better," said the employer. "Did you have any trouble in finding the doctor?"

"No," said the man, "his name was on the door. But I didn't go to the one you sent me to."

"You didn't? Why not?"

"Because, under his name on the door, it said ten to one, while the name of the other doctor had under it eight to five."

"Well," asked the employer, "what on earth has that to do with it?"

"Everything," answered the man. "Eight to five is a lot better chance than ten to one, isn't it?"

ABOUT TILE DRAINING

It Will Pay to Underdrain the Average Field.

Approximate Cost of Tiling — Loans Provided for by Tile Drainage Act—How Underdraining Increased the Yields of Grain, Alfalfa and Hay—Within Reach of All.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

Just how far drainage can be carried and made to pay has always been an open question with farmers. Nearly every farmer has seen a swamp area, a low, flat, "sour" field or odd corner of his own or his neighbor's farm tiled and made into valuable productive land, and he is quite ready to agree that possibly for such high-priced crops as onions, celery, tomatoes, tobacco or sugar beets it might pay to pretty thoroughly drain a whole area. But the idea of giving as careful treatment to land that year after year gives fairly average yields of ordinary crops—grain, corn, potatoes or hay—especially at present prices for these commodities, looks altogether out of reason. Besides, it has often argued, it was all very well years when we were bringing two to three dollars a rod to think of drainage, but with wheat scarcely meeting the cost of production, it looks altogether to throw good money after bad.

Approximate Cost of Tiling.

One important item to be taken into the drainage are the purchase price of the tile, the freight charges and the laying. A fair reading of the costs in Western Ontario at the present time could not get far wrong for those considering underdraining. Five cents per rod for digging, and setting, at these rates amount of land tiled at regular distances between lines would cost:—

$40.11 per acre at 20 feet
30.09 " " 26 "
24.07 " " 33 "
20.05 " " 40 "
17.19 " " 46 "

At the interest rates and according to the terms under which loans are made to farmers under the Tile Drainage Act, the total cost of tile drainage, data principle and interest, could be repaid to the investor in twenty equal yearly payments as:—

$3.20 per acre tiled at 20 feet
2.40 " " " 26 "
1.92 " " " 33 "
1.60 " " " 40 "
1.38 " " " 46 "

This means that in order to meet the cost of draining land in such distances these various amounts would need to be found although the increased crops grown would tend to offset.

Underdraining Improves Yields of Grain.

Based on average production per acre and average prices received, farmers in this vicinity, it is said, would take very good care of their land, if by underdraining the cost of tiling at these rates could be met and the increased yields of grain, at any rate, would be sufficient to pay for the tiling in from five to seven years. It would take very good care of this land, if by underdraining the cost of tiling at these rates could be met and the increased yields of grain, at any rate, would be sufficient to pay for the tiling in from five to seven years. It would take very good care of this land, if by underdraining the cost of tiling at these rates could be met and the increased yields of grain, at any rate, would be sufficient to pay for the tiling in from five to seven years.

Yields of Alfalfa and Hay Increased.

The question of underdraining, undertaking and using tiles is one of the first matters surveyed as was pointed out, with alfalfa and other crops, the yields of hay would be increased by underdraining. Farmers would take care of their drainage as a result. With ordinary mixed crops, an extra half a ton increase with hay, the cost of a 20-foot system, would only increase of 25¢ and 20¢ per acre to take care of the tile for ten years. When it is remembered that drainage permits the breaking up of the regular rotation of many permanent hay and pasture areas, giving opportunity for the successful growing of our heavier yielding cultivated grasses, low pounding and curing the required increased amounts to meet the drainage costs are not such as to cause any worry.

Loans Made Under the Tile Drainage Act.

The drainage is within the reach of all through the loans made possible by the Tile Drainage Act. It is one of the safest and best paying investments the farmer can make. It is common for a system of tile drains to pay for itself in three or four years, and often in much less time than that. In other words, it is an investment that will pay 20% to 25% on every dollar invested, over and over year after year, turning a money losing or no profit crop into one showing a balance on the right side of the ledger.—V. C. Sewell, District Supervisor, Chatham.

Give Pigs an Early Start.

A pig once stunted is not very apt to recover from it sufficiently to make the gains required for profit. Keep the youngsters growing right along. With the hog market conditions as they are at present it requires very good management to keep the hog raising venture showing a balance on the right side of the ledger. That farmer is wise who provides plenty of good pasture for his pigs and feeds a growing ration, of corn, middlings, tankage and minerals.

PEOPLE MOVE OUT AS TIMBER FAILS.

Ottawa, Canada, Nov. 13th. — The loss of population in numerous districts of Eastern Canada, the decadence of towns and villages forced to surrender their lumber industries, forms the basis of an interesting study by the Canadian Forestry Association. The basic reason for this "evicted population" is the ruin of forests on which the workers depended for their living. One community in Ontario held 5,500 people twenty years ago and the count to-day is under 1,700. The exodus is accounted for entirely by the destruction of the timber resources of the district and the inability of the land to attract farming population. Flourishing lumber mills and subsidiary plants have been driven away by lack of timber and were it not for the incoming of a few new industries in later years the present 1,700 population would dwindle to the proportions of a village.

New Brunswick furnishes illustrations of the reduction of population in large areas through misuse of the forests. There is an erroneous belief abroad, says the Canadian Forestry Association, that the riddance of the forests has meant the arrival of a farming population. This applied quite generally seventy-five years ago and is true in some districts to-day, but the general rule now is that timber is growing on non-agricultural lands and the destruction of a forest destroys all hope of human activity. One section of Quebec has steadily dwindled in population, villages have been closed up, farm houses abandoned because of the loss of timber and no other population can arrive until the forests have grown again, a matter of at least a hundred years.

PENN. STATE SETS PACE TO ONTARIO IN FORESTRY ZEAL.

Pennsylvania, one of the most advanced in forestry practice, is a small state, slightly less in size than Old Ontario (south of Lake Nipissing), with a population of nearly 9 million people. In the central portion of the state exists an area of 5 million acres of forest land called by its Governor, "Pennsylvania's desert". The people of the state early recognized that their past methods were a mistake, and that timber shortage was coming. Purchase of land was begun, and in 1921 totalled 1,126,236 acres, at a cost of $2,546,407 in cold cash—an average price of $2.26 per acre. To date they have spent on administration and development over 5 million dollars, making a total investment of nearly $7,750,000. They have 4 large and 22 small nurseries, and their planting program has covered about 25,000 acres at an average cost of $9.29. The yearly budget is around 1 million dollars and they employ 60 foresters. At the last session of the legislature a bill was introduced to borrow 25 million dollars for forestry purposes. Quite evidently Pennsylvania is in a serious frame of mind.

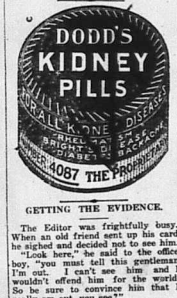
The same movement towards forest recuperation is to be found all through the New England, Middle Atlantic, and Lake States—regions once famous for their lumber production. Their actions prove:—

1. That they believe timber mining a mistaken policy.

2. That they believe the growing of timber crops to be necessary as a solution to the problems of timber supply and the use of forest land.

3. That they believe timber crops profitable.

That the policy of timber mining in the past was asmistaken one is now admitted. In the cases cited the admission is evidenced by the efforts of these same states to restore their forests. It is a long, costly, uphill task on which they have started, but they are satisfied there is no escape from it and that they must arrange for their own future supply of timber. Because of the profit in the early days of selling the land outright along with the timber, they have to start at the very bottom of the ladder and actually purchase the land on which to grow their forests. Among the states with a definite land acquirement policy may be mentioned New York, Pennsylvania, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Michigan, Connecticut, New Jersey and Maryland.



GETTING THE EVIDENCE.

The Editor was frightfully busy. When an old friend sent up his card he sighed and decided not to see him. "Look here," he said to the office boy, "you must tell this gentleman I'm out. "Yes, sir," said the office boy. "Don't you think I'd be more likely to convince him you are out if I went in and smoking one of your best cigars?"

THE COW, THE MOTHER OF PROSPERITY.

Valuable Illustrated Treatise on Dairy Farming Being Distributed by the Bank of Montreal.

"Where the cow is kept and cared for, civilization advances, lands grow richer, homes grow better, debts grow fewer."

The above is an extract from the preface of a book entitled "The Cow, the Mother of Prosperity", copies of which are being distributed by the Bank of Montreal. This book is probably the best popular treatise on dairy farming which has ever been published. It has been written with a view not only to guilding the farmer in the selection and breeding of the best and most profitable types of dairy cows, but also to guiding him in the care and feeding of dairy cows in every condition of climate and soil throughout the continent of North America. The author, Mr. Ralph A. Hayne, of the Agricultural Extension Department, International Harvester Company, in his foreword, describes the cow as one of the greatest blessings to the human race. "No nation or people", he says, "has become highly civilized without her. She produces the best human food on earth. She makes this health-building, strength-giving food from grass and coarse plants. Without her agriculture is not permanent or prosperous, people are not healthy or happy. Wherever the cow has taken her rightful place, and man has done his part we find farms furnishing an income every week of the year. We find homes with conveniences. We find intelligent, thrifty, debt-free people with minds and hearts alert from steady employment. We find a good citizenship, a good agriculture. Truly the cow is the mother of prosperity."

He proceeds to describe typical localities to which the cow would bring prosperity. Then he tells how to select the right kind of cows, describing in detail the good and bad points of cows from head to tail. The breeding, care, and feeding of cows, the best kind of feeds in various localities, the construction of barns, the making of silage, the testing of cows and their milk, methods of milking and the type and care of dairy utensils, the best methods of marketing milk, the care of calves, either for rearing or for the production of veal, the use of manure, the best breeds for varying conditions and the treatment of diseases are all dealt with fully and in plain language that anyone can understand.

A valuable feature of the book is the fact that every point dealt with is illustrated by photographs specially taken for the purpose or by diagrams. Over 250 photographs are reproduced.

The Bank of Montreal is doing a splendid work for farmers by having a special edition of many thousands of this valuable book printed for free distribution throughout farming districts in Canada. We understand that the demand for the book has exceeded all expectations, but that a reserve supply has been secured, so that a limited number is still available free of cost. Application for the book should be made to the local branch of the Bank of Montreal.

ABOUT TILE DRAINING

It Will Pay to Underdrain the Average Field.

Approximate Cost of Tiling — Loans Provided for by Tile Drainage Act—How Underdraining Increased the Yields of Grain, Alfalfa and Hay—Within Reach of All.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

Just how far drainage can be carried and made to pay has always been an open question with farmers. Nearly every farmer has seen a swamp area, a low, flat, "sour" field or odd corner of his own or his neighbor's farm tiled and made into valuable productive land, and he is quite ready to agree that possibly for such high-priced crops as onions, celery, tomatoes, tobacco or sugar-beets it might pay to pretty thoroughly drain a whole area. But the idea of giving as careful treatment to land that year after year gives fairly average yields of ordinary crops—grain, corn, potatoes or hay—especially at present prices for these commodities, looks altogether too expensive. Readers, it has often happened that it was all very well when wheat was bringing two to three dollars a bushel to think of drainage, but with settled wheat prices ranging from 60 cents of production, it looks anything but throw good money after bad.

Approximate Cost of Tiling.

The important main items to be met in the drainage are the purchase price of the tile, the freight on same and the laying. A fair estimate of the costs in Western Ontario at the present time would be as follows, for three or four-inch tile and tiling. Five cents per rod for hauling and tiling. At these rates all of the land tiled at regular distances before mentioned would cost:—

$10 ft per acre at	20 feet
30	40
40	50
50	60
60	70

At the interest rates and according to the terms under which loans are made to farmers under the Tile Drainage Act, the total cost of tiling drainage, this principle also holds, could be returned to the municipality in twenty equal yearly payments as:—

$5.20 per acre tiled at	20 feet
7.80	30
10.40	40
13.00	50
15.60	60
18.20	70

This means that in order to meet the cost of draining lands at these distances those various amounts would need to be added to the increased crops grown on the land so drained.

Underdraining Improves Yields of Grain.

Based on average yields and prices and average prices of crops, the farmers in this vicinity could profitably afford to spend not more than $10 per acre for tiling if the land required tiling at 30 feet apart. Where the conditions are favorable it would pay to spend $15 per acre for tiling at 30 feet apart, and where the land is of a very heavy nature it would pay to spend $20 per acre for tiling at 30 feet apart. Such land as this would not require tiling at 40 feet, unless it were very heavy, but would require tiling at 30 feet. Land of a very light nature would require tiling at 40 feet, and perhaps 50 feet. Where tiling at 40 feet, and perhaps 50 feet, would require tiling at 30 feet, would not pay to spend more than $10 per acre for tiling at 40 feet, and perhaps 50 feet. Where tiling at 40 feet, and perhaps 50 feet, would require tiling at 30 feet, would not pay to spend more than $15 per acre for tiling at 40 feet, and perhaps 50 feet. Where tiling at 40 feet, and perhaps 50 feet, would require tiling at 30 feet, would not pay to spend more than $20 per acre for tiling at 40 feet, and perhaps 50 feet.

Right acres of drained land gave a balance of fall wheat per acre, while grain showed 10 bushels per acre more than the undrained land. This was the result of the drainage of the land. The land was drained by the Tile Drainage Act, and the land was drained by the Tile Drainage Act, and the land was drained by the Tile Drainage Act.

Yields of Alfalfa and Hay Increased.

The question of economizing, underdraining may prove to be of no benefit but an increase of crop produced on drained soil never amounted to more than 10 per cent. Where the land was drained by the Tile Drainage Act, and the land was drained by the Tile Drainage Act, and the land was drained by the Tile Drainage Act.

Loans Made Under the Tile Drainage Act.

Tile drainage is within the reach of all through the loans made possible by the Tile Drainage Act. It is one of the safest and best paying investments the farmer can make. It is common for a system of tile drains to pay for itself in three or four years, and often in much less time than that. In other words, it is an investment that will pay 20% to 25% on every dollar invested, over and over, year after year, turning a money losing or no profit crop into one showing a balance on the right side of the ledger.—V. Sir John Leader Maffey Rules the Indian Frontier Ablest Man in That Region

The Chief Commissioner of the Northwest Province of India, Sir John Leader Maffey, who has come into prominence through the part he played in the rescue of Miss Mollie Ellis from the Afridis, is the strongest man in that region.

Afridi bluff and threats of "ransome or we kill" have no terrors for him. Times without number he has called their bluff, and in the case of Miss Ellis he steadily refused to make any promises whatever, thereby incurring the responsibility for her safety.

But he knew what he was doing, for Sir John has been twenty years on the frontier and what he does not know about the wily Afridi and his ways is really not worth knowing.

Wazir, Afridi, Mohmand — he knows them all. He has probably more experience and more knowledge of the frontier tribesmen than any other living man.

Maffey began his work "up there" as Assistant Commissioner twenty years ago, and with brief exceptions he has been on the frontier ever since. Fifteen years ago he was Political Officer with the Mohmand Field Force, and for three years he was Political Agent in the Khyber.

When the late Sir George Roos-Keppel retired, four years ago, there was only one possible successor to him, and Maffey left his appointment as private secretary to the Viceroy for his old home in Government House, Peshawar.

It is said that he knows the tribesmen better than they know themselves. He certainly knows more than they do of their family feuds, and he is better acquainted than the sleuths with the indispensible tribal bedlycot.

He speaks their tongue and thinks their thoughts. His name is a password from Quetta to Chitral. Powerful chiefs, sheikhs, and emirs hang upon his slightest word, and the Government of India is guided by his judgment and acts upon his advice.

Tall and debonair, he holds himself as straight as the tribesmen with whom he deals. His gaze is keen and cold, and always he is unruffled, imperturbable, cool.

When one has spent the best twenty years of one's life in an atmosphere of excursions and alarms, coolness counts for a great deal. Furthermore, Sir John has the unique faculty of retaining his energy and freshness throughout the infernal heat of hot weather in Peshawar. Only those who have endured the fiftrace heat of the Punjab can realize what it means to pass through a succession of hot weathers when the nights are as bad as the days.

When he returned to Peshawar Sir John Maffey stepped into the shoes of a man who had made the North-west Frontier peculiarly his own. Sir George Roos-Keppel built the corridon round the frontier, and Maffey guards it. As "Warder of the Marches" he is a terror to the evil-doer, and the fact that Miss Ellis is safely back is due in no small measure to the strong, silent man who rules the frontiers with a rod of iron.

Although he has weathered twenty-three Indian summers, he is still young and vigorous at 45, and when the occasion calls for it he can travel a little farther and a little faster than the tribesmen. That is the secret of his success, for Sir John Maffey can beat the Afridi at his own game, as the tribesmen have once again found to their cost.

But it has taken him twenty years to learn how to do it!

Luck at Cards.

Some superstitious card players are particular what clothes they wear, especially among woman players. Some will not sit down to the card table in frocks in which they have had particularity bad luck. Or they connect good fortune with some piece of apparel—it may be a veil or a sleeve or a certain article of jewelry. One woman always sits on her handkerchief when things are going badly, and she asserts it always brings her good luck. Another changes her luck by touching the poker or walking around her chair. Many men as well as women are superstitious about their partners, in changing seats, move in the wrong direction. They must go the "way of the sport"—that is, to the left. To go to the right is fatal.

"Essoign" Day.

In the reign of Henry II. the day first mentioned in each term of court was called "essoign" day, because the court then took the essoigns or excuses of those who did not appear according to the summons of the writ. But as—by a custom traced by Blackstone to the Germans of the days of Tacitus—three days of grace are allowed every defendant in which to appear, the courts did not sit for the despatch of business until the fourth day after that time. On the other hand, they continued to sit till the fourth day after the last return.

The rule allowing three days of grace in Canada and the United States was adopted from the English

Volcanic By-Products.

Boiling lava is not the deadliest by-product of an eruption at Etna or Vesuvius. More mischief is done by the outpour of ashes, or "bombs," as the hardened lava drops are called. Thus 23 feet of ashes from the Etnas, not the lava, that settled the fate of Pompeii. Only a few years ago Vesuvius sent out a rain of ashes that crushed the roofs of houses miles away from the cone. Pumice-stone, charged with solid stones, charged with bubbles of gas—are flung out in vast quantities, and, floating upon the sea, may become a serious danger to navigation, as happened in the great outburst at Krakatoa in 1883.

On the occasion of Prince Bismarck's eightieth birthday, Professor Lenbach congratulated him and said he trusted that Bismarck might have many happy years in store for him. To this came the reply: "My dear Lenbach, the first eighty years of a man's life are always the happiest."

CUT OUT PEAR BLIGHT

A Disease That Is Threatening Many Orchards.

Treatment Recommended — Pruning Tools Should Be Disinfected—Control Is Only by Prevention—Dead Arm Disease of Grapes.

Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

Pear blight is caused by microscopic bacteria spread by insects from diseased wood to healthy shoots and blossoms where it grows and develops beneath the bark. For this reason spraying as a control is worthless. The only remedy is to cut out the infected parts.

Treatment Recommended.

During the winter, at pruning all infected parts should be removed. The symptoms of this disease are: on the trunk or branches a blackish color of the bark on twig discoloration and shriveling; also probably some leaves will still be attached. To make sure that the blackened areas on the trunk are really caused by blight take a knife and cut down the bark. If there is a reddish or brown appearance beneath the surface, the trouble is blight. Unless these infected parts are removed the disease will spread very rapidly and in two or three years at the most the tree will be dead or useless. In the meantime it will lose vigor in growing as a source of infection to all healthy pear and apple trees in the vicinity.

Pruning Tools Should Be Disinfected.

The bacteria winter over at the lower margin of the infection, and while the trees are dormant cuts can be safely made two inches below the diseased part because the presence of unattacking bacteria at the trunk has been arrested, the whole tree should be examined thoroughly after each cut with corrosive sublimate, 1-1,000. (See bul., Ontario Dept. of Agriculture.)

Conditions in Spring.

In the spring, insects and other prevailing pests on the orchard cause by the bacteria and then carry it to the flowers and from there to succeeding or spreading young growths, pests. 10,000 bacteria could lead soon on a pin-head, and each is capable of increasing to a million or more in twenty-four hours. Shortly after infection, takes place the watersoak spurs will wilt and droop, and through the orchard soon after blossoming and break off with the wind, all such drooped parts before the disease can penetrate to the main branches.

Control Is Only by Prevention.

Control therefore is only by prevention. Cut out all diseased parts during the dormant period. Again after blossoming, look up all drooped spurs and remove and inter the portions. Disinfect the tools with corrosive sublimate 1-1,000 after each cut. Burn all infected branches and cultivate just sufficiently to keep the tree in moderate vigor.—E. A. Parnell, Horticultural Inspection Station, Vineland Station.

Dead Arm Disease of Grapes.

This disease is apparently becoming more serious each year in Ontario vineyards, especially on the Concord variety, and growers would do well to examine their vines carefully for any sign of it.

Concerning its appearance, control, etc., L. C. Hoffius, of the Central Experiment Station, says: "A troublesome disease of recent appearance is now doing considerable damage in the Chautauqua grape-belt, being first noticed on the Concord variety. From the fact that it is usually found on one arm of the vine it is called 'dead arm disease.' (Ampelopsis glandulicola). The disease is caused by a fungus which passes the winter in the bark, black fruiting bodies on the dead parts on the vine. Early in the spring the fungus appears by forming a spore by the young tissues and later in the season produces infinite myriads of minute spores, which are borne by the wind to the young shoots, leaves, tendrils, fruit, etc., producing a spore-dry rot which eventually kills the affected part. Furthermore, the presence of the disease is quickly detected by small yellowish leaves, much crimped about the margin, and fungus is easily controlled by burning the diseased dead wood and first symptoms appear and cutting these off at pruning time. In the vine in mere latitudes by such pruning, usually suckers can be brought up from beneath the surface of the ground to renew the vine. The applications of bordeaux mixture, recommended for black-rot, are valuable in preventing the dead-arm disease. The disease is largely prevented by renewing the old wood of the vine as soon as the trunk begins to show a gnarled appearance."

For control, we are advising the immediate cutting out of diseased areas. Father than burning them and cutting out at pruning time. Cut the arm well below any shoots showing evidence of the disease. — Horticultural Exp. Station, Vineland Station.

Chasing Cattle.

A little money placed in fencing may save some sick cattle. Many cattle die every year from going through weak spots in the corn field fence and gorging with fodder. Much time is lost in driving cattle from fields where they should not range. One hour of chasing cattle is harder on the legs and the temper than half a day of hard work in the field.

Let the sow and pigs have access all of the time to a good mineral mixture.

"Does your landlord use hot air?" "Yes, but not to heat the house."

CUT OUT PEAR BLIGHT

A Disease That Is Threatening Many Orchards.

Treatment Recommended — Pruning Tools Should Be Disinfected—Control Is Only by Prevention—Dead Arm Disease of Grapes.

Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture. (Abridged.)

Pear blight is caused by microscopic bacteria spread by insects from diseased wood to healthy shoots and blossoms where it grows and develops beneath the bark. For this reason spraying as a control is worthless. The only remedy is to cut out the infected parts.

Treatment Recommended.

During the winter, at pruning all infected parts should be removed. To make sure that the blackened areas on the trunk are really caused by blight take a knife and cut down the bark. If there is a reddish or brown appearance beneath the surface, the trouble is blight. Unless these infected parts are removed the disease will spread very rapidly and in two or three years at the most the tree will be dead or useless. In the meantime it will also serve as a prolific source of infection to the surrounding pear and apple trees in the vicinity.

Pruning Tools Should Be Disinfected.

The bacteria winter over at the lower margin of the lesion, and while the trees are dormant cuts can be safely made two inches below the diseased part. Much the best way of disinfecting the tools, if the trunk has been attacked, is to have them soaked for a minute in a 1-1000 solution of bichloride of mercury. Many growers should be interested in this growth bearing, cuts must be made six to eight inches below any outward signs of injury. At this time the pruning tools must be disinfected thoroughly after each cut with corrosive sublimate, 1-1,000, (See bul. 247, Ontario Dept. of Agriculture.)

Conditions in Spring.

In the spring, insects and also peculiarly bred on the cankers caused by the bacteria and find entry into the flowers and from there the disease is spread by honey seeking insects. 10,000 bacteria could find room on a pin-head, and even a single one increasing a million in more in twenty-four hours. Shortly after infection takes place the immediate spurs will fall and drop, and through the orchard again after blossoming and break off with the lesions. Disinfect the tools with corrosive sublimate 1-1,000 after each cut. Burn all infected branches and cultivate just sufficiently to keep the tree in moderate vigor.—H. G. Parker, Horticultural Exp. Station, Vineland Station.

Dead Arm Disease of Grapes.

This disease is apparently becoming more serious each year in Ontario Vineyards, especially on the Concord variety, and growers would do well to examine their vines carefully for any sign of it.

Concerning its appearance, control, etc., U. P. Hedrick, of the Geneva Experiment Station, says: "A number of some disease or recent appearance is now doing considerable damage to the Chautauqua grape-belt, being most common on the Concord. Prof. Bur. fact that it is usually found on one arm of the vine is called 'dead arm disease.'" (Phytopathology, viii-104). The disease is caused by a fungus which passes the winter in the soil, black fruiting bodies on the dead parts of the vine. Early in the spring the fungus spreads to the young spurs in the form of a white mould, later in the season attacking tendrils, fruiting heads, blades, and young spots of fruit-rot. Instead of fleecy, it the diseased shoot is not rotted, the fungus appears to die after or frank on the vine, producing a stony, dry rot which eventually ends the affected parts. Fortunately, the presence of the disease is quickly detected by small pinhead-like specks, much crimped about the borders. The fungus is easily controlled by means the diseased areas when the first symptoms appear and cutting these off at pruning time. If the time is spent unbroken by such pruning, usually suckers can be brought up from beneath the surface of the ground to renew the vine. The applications of bordeaux mixture, recommended for black-rot, are valuable in preventing the dead-arm disease. The disease is largely prevented by renewing the old wood of the vine as soon as the trunk begins to show a gnarled appearance."

For control, we are advising the immediate cutting out of diseased arms, rather than marking them and cutting out at pruning time. Cut the arm well below any shoots showing evidence of the disease.—Horticultural Exp. Station, Vineland Station.

Skinned alive, is the way you feel after using ordinary mustard plasters. Williams' Camphorated Mustard Cream has all the good qualities of mustard without the burn and blister. At druggists', 35c. a jar. It's wonderful, too, for the children.

AT THE END OF THE DAY.

We sit and watch the fading sun
Sink at the ending of the day,
When all our busy work is done
And sorrow put away.

No more we riddles try to guess,
We fold our problems by—
The Master of all quietness
Is waiting nigh.

We close the door and lock it fast
On pain and every olden hurt,
And gather happiness as last
And fold it in the heart.

Some of Your Winter Requirements are Listed Below In All Departments Our Stocks are Wonderfully Complete

HEAVY KIMONOS BRING THOUGHTS OF COMFORT.
Choose From Wool Eiderdown or Figured Kimono Cloth.

It is the woman who owns one of these very practical garments that really appreciates its worth. For this season of the year, when fires are low during the night, they are absolutely indispensable for health or comfort. No woman can afford to be without one.

Our heavy Kimonos are made from superior materials that will stand the test of service and constant wear. They are cut in a range of sizes that are ample and large. Sleeves and collars have been styled with thought to comfort as well as style.

Satin facings on collars and pockets, embroideries and girdles constitute the trimmings deemed necessary. Obtainable in shades of Tan, Apricot, Mauve, Red, Grey and Copen Blue. All sizes. Priced $8.50, $9.50 and $10.75.

FOR THE SCHOOL GIRL. NOTHING COMPETES WITH THE "FLANNEL MIDDY" FOR ALL ROUND POPULARITY.

The "Admiral" Middy is by long odds the best middy made in Canada. It meets with all the requirements of the average school girl. It is cut on good-fitting lines, it is finished with the finest and strongest of workmanship, while the materials used are absolutely reliable.

At present we are featuring the "Admiral" in a range of admirable shades with "Navy Blue" leading the field.

Styles favor the long regulation middy with sailor collar. Colored braid is the chief means of ornamentation. Priced from $2.95 to $4.00.

WHAT ABOUT A NEW WINTER HAT? BRIGHT SHADES GO "WELL" WITH FUR COATS.

The sombre hues of a winter's costume can be wonderfully brightened by a small, smart bright hat. For street wear, particularly, the small hat is still "very much the vogue". It does not appear to be in the way when combined with a voluminous collared coat.

Metallic ornaments, frosted fruits with gold and silver laces constitute the trimming.. At present we are showing a very diversified range of shades such as Red, Henna, French Blue, Flame, Golden Brown, Seal Brown, Leaf Green and Black. Priced from $5.00 to $12.75.

DOLLS THAT ARE ALMOST HUMAN! THEY WALK AND TALK! AND OF COURSE THEY ARE VERY HARD TO BREAK AND PRICED $1.50, $2.25 AND $2.95.

The $1.50 Walking and Talking Doll is a very lovable little dolly, 14 inches tall, chubby and smiling, serviceably dressed with rompers, shoes and stockings and bonnet.

At $2.25 this lovely Dolly is 18 inches high and has a new expression, dressed much the same as the one described above.

The $2.95 Dolly is quite grown up, being 20 inches high and proportionately larger every way. She is dressed in a lovely white organdie, lace trimmed dress with bonnet to match. Her patent leather shoes, white stockings and pink bonnet ribbon, make her quite all dressed up and nowhere to go.

Now wouldn't you just love to have her for your very own?

THERE IS NO DOUBT ABOUT THE POPULARITY OF SILK VELVET FOR DRESSES.
And of Course a Splendid Quality is Procurable at Robinson's. Especially Priced at $4.50 Yard.

Ancestors of the Necktie.

The necktie came into use as something with which to warm the neck in cold weather. The ruff was the forerunner of the bit of color that is knotted at a man's throat to-day.

After the ruff came the evolution of Brussels lace, which were at one time worn so long that the ends were tucked in the waistcoat. Later a broad silk ribbon was worn and the grandfather of the cake eater wore a cravat which passed twice around the collar. The modern scarf made its appearance about forty years ago.

Making Hay Quickly.

Curing stacks of hay with an electric blower fan could, described in the Popular Mechanics Magazine, is the method employed by an English farmer-scientist, which enables him to treat his large crops without having to depend upon the sun's assistance. The grass is stacked as quickly as it can be hauled to the selected spot, the stacks being built in the usual manner but having in their centre an air chamber to which the fan is connected.

Thunderbolt's Pranks.

A severe electric storm in Easton, Md., played some queer pranks in the farmhouse of Charles Jeamson while he and his wife were chasing chickens to shelter. A bolt entered by the front door, moved the parlor furniture out into the kitchen, pushed all the kitchen furniture out through the back door and then went upstairs and tossed the bedroom furniture out through the windows.

Skinned alive, is the way you feel after using ordinary mustard plasters. Williams' Camphorated Mustard Cream has all the good qualities of mustard without the burn and blister. At druggists', 35c. a jar. It's wonderful, too, for the children.

AT THE END OF THE DAY.

We sit and watch the fading sun
Sink at the ending of the day,
When all our busy work is done
And sorrow put away.

No more we riddles try to guess,
We fold our problems by—
The Master of all quietness
Is waiting nigh.

We close the door and lock it fast
On pain and every olden hurt,
And gather happiness at last
And fold it in the heart.

HEAVY KIMONOS BRING THOUGHTS OF COMFORT.
Choose From Wool Eiderdown or Figured Kimono Cloth.

It is the woman who owns one of these very practical garments that really appreciates its worth. For this season of the year, when fires are low during the night, they are absolutely indispensable for health or comfort. No woman can afford to be without one.

Our heavy Kimonos are made from superior materials that will stand the test of service and constant wear. They are cut in a range of sizes that are ample and large. Sleeves and collars have been styled with thought to comfort as well as style.

Satin facings on collars and pockets, embroideries and girdles constitute the trimmings deemed necessary. Obtainable in shades of Tan, Apricot, Mauve, Red, Grey and Copen Blue. All sizes. Priced $8.50, $9.50 and $10.75.

FOR THE SCHOOL GIRL, NOTHING COMPETES WITH THE "FLANNEL MIDDY" FOR ALL ROUND POPULARITY.

The "Admiral" Middy is by long odds the best middy made in Canada. It meets with all the requirements of the average school girl. It is cut on good-fitting lines, it is finished with the finest and strongest of workmanship, while the materials used are absolutely reliable.

At present we are featuring the "Admiral" in a range of admirable shades with "Navy Blue" leading the field.

Styles favor the long regulation middy with sailor collar. Colored braid is the chief means of ornamentation. Priced from $2.95 to $4.00.

WHAT ABOUT A NEW WINTER HAT? BRIGHT SHADES GO "WELL" WITH FUR COATS.

The sombre hues of a winter's costume can be wonderfully brightened by a small, smart bright hat. For street wear, particularly, the small hat is still "very much the vogue". It does not appear to be in the way when combined with a voluminous collared coat.

Metallic ornaments, frosted fruits with gold and silver laces constitute the trimming. At present we are showing a very diversified range of shades such as Red, Henna, French Blue, Flame, Golden Brown, Seal Brown, Leaf Green and Black. Priced from $5.00 to $12.75.

DOLLS THAT ARE ALMOST HUMAN! THEY WALK AND TALK! AND OF COURSE THEY ARE VERY HARD TO BREAK AND PRICED $1.50, $2.25 AND $2.95.

The $1.50 Walking and Talking Doll is a very lovable little doll, 14 inches tall, chubby and smiling, serviceably dressed with rompers, shoes and stockings and bonnet.

At $2.25 this lovely Dolly is 18 inches high and has a new expression, dressed much the same as the one described above.

The $2.95 Dolly is quite grown up, being 20 inches high and proportionately larger every way. She is dressed in a lovely white organdie, lace trimmed dress with bonnet to match. Her patent leather shoes, white stockings and pink bonnet ribbon, make her quite all dressed up and nowhere to go.

Now wouldn't you just love to have her for your very own?

THERE IS NO DOUBT ABOUT THE POPULARITY OF SILK VELVET FOR DRESSES.

Ancestors of the Necktie.

The necktie came into use as something with which to warm the neck in cold weather. The ruff was the forerunner of the bit of color that is knotted at a man's throat to-day.

After the ruff came neckcloths of Brussels lace, which were at one time worn so long that the ends were tucked in the waistcoat. Later a broad silk ribbon was worn and the grandfather of the cake eater wore a cravat which passed twice around the collar. The modern scarf made its appearance about forty years ago.

Makes Hay Quickly.

Curing stacks of hay with an electric blower fan outfit, described in the Popular Mechanics Magazine, is the method employed by an English farmer-scientist, which enables him to treat his large crops without having to depend upon the sun's assistance. The grass is stacked as quickly as it can be hadled to the selected spot, the stacks being built in the usual manner but having in their centre an air chamber to which the fan is connected.

Thunderbolt's Pranks.

A severe electric storm in Easton, Md., played some queer pranks on the farmhouse of Charles Asamson while he and his wife were chasing chickens to shelter. A bolt entered by the front door, moved the parlor furniture out into the kitchen, passed all the kitchen furniture out through the back door and then went upstairs and tossed the bedroom furniture out through the windows.

For which bit of writing the advertising manager of the company, when the copy reached him, substituted two words: "It floats."

GREATEST OF TEACHERS.

Mme. Marchesi Was Also a Famous Prima Donna.

Mme. Blanche Marchesi gives generously of her wealth of experience as a teacher and a great prima donna as well as many intimate pictures of great artists and composers in the book she has just published. "A Singer's Pilgrimage."

Mme. Marchesi's mother was the celebrated Mathilde Marchesi, who taught Melba and a score or other first-rate nineteenth-century prime donne. Her father, an Italian by birth, was a baritone who sang in the first English performances of Gounod's "Faust" (1864).

Mathilde Marchesi was a German singer named Graumann, who studied in London with Garcia, taught in Vienna and then Paris, and was the most celebrated woman teacher of singing there has ever been.

The fame of most of her pupils is now a-days much overshadowed by time, but what a galaxy they were! Gabrielle, Kraus, Frieri, Etelka Gerster, Emma Nevada, Emma Eames, Sybil Sanderson, Lilma de Murska, and, among those still singing, Calve, Melba, Frances Alda, Ada Crossley!

With what a name and what traditions, then, did Blanche Marchesi come on the scene," she was born in 1864. From babyhood she lived in the singing studio. As a child she learnt the violin from no one less than Nikisch. Her girlhood was spent in France and she considers herself French. Her London success of 1896 decided her to adopt London, and she sang and taught there for a quarter of a century.

Mme. Blanche Marchesi has not had pupils as brilliant as her mother's, but still she has succeeded in adding to the fame of her family name. This assiduously and strong-minded woman has assuredly made a mark on the musical history of her generation.

Mme. Marchesi was a great favorite at Queen Victoria, and to this great lady's musical taste she pays many tributes.

"The British Queen Victoria," she writes, "loved music for music's sake, and singing appealed specially to her. It was a joy, a necessity to her to hear music every day, and to keep in contact with the musicians of her time. Artists met with the most charming and graceful reception, and the Queen always entertained herself for a long time with them about the works and their performance."

On one occasion when Mme. Marchesi sang to the Queen, when she was in Scotland, she was asked by the Duchess of Connaught what return could be made to her for the pleasure she had given her Majesty. To which the great singer answered: "Oh, that is very simple. I would like to hold a King of England on my knee."

The duchess laughed and said: "Well you shall have your wish. I will invite the royal children to tea to-morrow, and you shall give them their tea." Says Mme. Marchesi—

"The next day I had the most delightful tea-party I ever possessed. At the table were seated the eldest, Prince Edward, about two and a half, Prince Albert, sixteen months—in a high chair—and Princess Mary on the knee of her nurse.

"The most delightful moment appeared to me the end of the tea, when the head nurse said, 'Prince Eddie, say your grace,' and the little prince religiously closed his eyes, lifted his two little hands up and said, 'Oh, my good Lord, I thank you for my good tea,' and turning round to the nurse added: 'Can I have a little more?' To which the nurse answered, 'No, Prince Eddie, you have had quite enough. You must not say that.'"

Red Coral Long Traded In.

Trade in red coral with the Far East began in very remote times. It is mentioned in a poem by the Chinese poet Tsing Fau, who died in 117 B.C., and in the time of the Ptolemy dynasty. About 200 years later a traveller was sent from China to report on the coral fishery of the Mediterranean Sea. At a later date it was introduced into the Chinese materia medica.

Reinach described the trade with the Celtic races in pre-Roman times. Specimens have been found in Britain and Ireland. The Romans stopped the trade with the Celtic races, however, in order to send the coral to India in exchange for frankincense, myrrh, and precious stones.

NAMES OF PLANTS.

Most of Them Have Come From European Sources.

Of the many thousands of enthusiastic amateur gardeners how few know anything whatever about the plants they raise and tend so carefully?

Who, for instance knows that most of our tree fruits originally came from Southern Europe? Yet, studying their names, we find that many are derived from the Greek and Latin —peach, pear, apricot, damson, and plum. Apples, however, always grew in the north, and the word "apple" is Teutonic in origin.

There are few names handed down to us from pre-Saxon days, although in Ireland, Wales, and Cornwall they are sometimes found. In the North of England names sometimes come from the Norse or Danish. "Rowan" is one, and it is connected with rune, a charm, thus called because in these superstitious days it was supposed to avert the evil eye.

It is generally known that the name dandelion comes directly from the French "dent-de-lion" (lion's teeth), and that mushroom is derived from the French "mousseron," which came from the Latin "musena" (moss), referring to a moorland where mushrooms grow.

The discovery of America greatly stimulated the art of gardening in England, for many new plants were brought over by those who sailed across the Atlantic to see the new country. Anne of Cleves, one of Henry VIII.'s wives, took up gardening as a hobby, and made it fashionable. At that time, however, the medicinal values of plants was of primary consideration, and herbalists flourished exceedingly.

Sometimes plants are called after the countries or districts from whence they first came. Carnations are called after Cornith, a Greek city; arabis was an Arabian plant; while pampas grass comes from South America.

It may be possible that some people think gooseberries and strawberries to do with geese. Not at all, it is a corruption of the old French "grosse," hairy; while fraxinus, used by rural poultry-keepers in certain districts. In many areas it is a firm belief that if the first primroses taken into the house be fewer than thirteen in number all hens "set" will only hatch out as many eggs as there are primroses in the bouquet. So fixed is this belief that on one occasion a Norfolk clergyman was called upon to intervene in a quarrel which had arisen between two women because one had given the child of the other a single primrose, so as to ensure that the mother's hens should only hatch one egg each. Daffodils are also said to be unlucky.

Is Ancient Secret Order.

The actual origin of the name is as obscure as that of Freemasonry. Oddfellowship, concerning which all that is known is that the earliest lodge was the Loyal Manchesa, which met in London in 1745. To this source may be traced the Manchester Unity, founded in 1813, and now the largest friendly society in the world.

At the outset the order adopted a rule: "That any brother of the independent order who shall be guilty of assisting any secret society of women or attending their meetings shall be suspended for twelve months for the first offence and for the second shall be expelled from the order forever."

The Odd Fellows, like other friendly societies, was illegal prior to 1850, and on many occasions was robbed with impunity. One of its officials, applied to his own use about $30,000, which had been subscribed for the relief of sufferers through the Irish famine, and yet the society had no legal redress.

WINTER COVERING FOR STRAWBERRIES.

(Experimental Farms Note.)

Strawberry plants may be injured by alternate freezing and thawing, which tends to lift them out of the soil and thus injure or break the roots. They may be injured during the cold of winter by the frost drying out the crown of the plant and the leaves. Heaving of the plants seldom occurs on a well drained soil, but on soils poorly drained the plants are likely to suffer considerably, particularly during the very early spring after the snow has melted. In certain situations there may be little loss from cold, as the drying effect of the cold may be lessened because of the natural protection afforded, or the snow may give the protection required.

In order to make sure of the plants carrying through the winter successfully it is wise to protect them with a mulch. A mulch of any material tends to hold the soil under it as a more uniform temperature. The soil will not freeze so quickly under a mulch and is slower in thawing than where no covering is given. Thus with a mulch the plants are better able to avoid the alternate freezing and thawing of spring, with its consequent disastrous results. If the injury is due to drying out, which often happens in exposed situations, the mulch will overcome this trouble. Plants exposed to the cold, and unprotected from driving winds may be completely dried out. Under such conditions, if the air is dry, a heavy mulch may be necessary than where the atmosphere is humid and the consequent loss from evaporation less.

In situations with a fairly moderate climate a light mulch is all that is necessary, as too heavy a mulch may cause injury because of the plants being kept damp and mould developing. In the colder sections a good blanket of snow can usually be depended upon, and under such conditions a heavy mulch with the snow above may also produce great injury conditions for the plants.

Of all mulch materials, none is better than straw free from weed seeds is the best. This is scattered evenly over the plants at the rate of 2½ to 3 tons per acre. A covering thick enough so that the plants are nicely hidden from view is usually ample, and care is taken not to give an even light covering. Marsh hay may be used, but more care is necessary to give a better covering than with straw, as this compact hay may hold dampness in the spring and result in decay of the plant. Spruce boughs make a good covering, but it takes considerable time to gather and place them.

The mulch should be placed in November when the ground is nicely frozen, and is removed in the spring during the last week in April or early in May. It may be scattered when dry and used or bedding, or may be placed between the rows to serve as a summer mulch, thus conserving moisture and keeping the fruit along the edge of the rows clean from sand.

What a Happy Disposition And Muskoka Can Do

Mary was one of those popular girls. Happy and busy, day and night—just hadn't time to do anything but dance and skate and frolic, no time at all to take care of her cough. Mary's father was dead—the family half suspected he died of consumption. Suddenly and tragically, Consumption again stalked into the home. Two sisters were taken and within a few months both rested in the family plot on a high hill overlooking Lake Erie. Mary's cold developed into bronchitis—it grew worse, her temperature rose, and she became very weak indeed. She was sent to the Muskoka Hospital for Consumptives, where skilled treatment, fresh air and nourishing food are restoring her strength.

The Doctors say her youth and happy disposition will help her in the battle against Tuberculosis. Now and again her mother visits the hospital and she is very thankful indeed for the progress her only girl is making. Contributions to aid Muskoka Hospital in its work may be sent to Hon. W. A. Charlton, 223 College Street, Toronto.

GREATEST OF TEACHERS.

Mme. Marchesi Was Also a Famous Prima Donna.

Mme. Blanche Marchesi gives generously of her wealth of experience as a teacher and a great prima donna as well as many intimate pictures of great artists and composers in the book she has just published, "A Singer's Pilgrimage."

Mme. Marchesi's mother was the celebrated Mathilde Marchesi, who taught Melba and a score or other first-rate nineteenth-century prima donnas. Her father, an Italian by birth, was a baritone who sang in the first English performance of Gounod's "Faust" (1863).

Mathilde Marchesi was a German singer named Graumann, who studied in London with Garcia, taught at Vienna and then Paris, and was the most celebrated woman teacher of singing there has ever been.

The name of most of her pupils is now a days much overshadowed by time, but what a galaxy they were! Gabrielle, Kraus, Frieci, Etelka Gerster, Emma Nevada, Emma Eames, Sybil Sanderson, Ilma de Murska, and, among those still singing, Calve, Melba, Frances Alda, Ada Crossley!

With what a name and what traditions, then, did Blanche Marchesi come on the scene! She was born in 1864. From babyhood she lived in the singing studio. As a child she learnt the violin from no one less than Nikisch. Her girlhood was spent in France and she considers herself French. Her London success of 1896 decided her to adopt London, and she sang and taught there for a quarter of a century.

Mme. Blanche Marchesi has not had pupils so brilliant as her mother's, but still she has succeeded in adding to the fame of her family name. This musicianly and strong-minded woman has assuredly made a mark on the musical history of her generation.

Mme. Marchesi was a great favorite of Queen Victoria, and to this great lady's musical taste she pays many tributes:

"The British Queen Victoria," she writes, "loved music for music's sake, and singing appealed powerfully to her. It was a joy, a necessity to her to hear music every day, and to keep in contact with the musicians of her time. Artists met with the most charming and graceful reception, and the Queen always entertained herself for a long time with them about the works and their performances."

On one occasion when Mme. Marchesi sang to the Queen, when she was in Scotland, she was asked by the Duchess of Connaught, that in turn could be made to her for the pleasure she had given her Majesty. To which the great artist replied: "Oh, that is very simple. I would like to hold a King of England on my knee."

The duchess laughed and said: "Well you shall have your wish. I will invite the royal children to tea to-morrow, and you shall give them their tea."

"The next day I find the most delightful tea-party I ever witnessed. At the table were seated the eldest, Prince Edward, about two and a half, Prince Albert, sixteen months—in a high chair—and Princess May on the knee of her nurse.

"The most delightful moment appeared to me the end of the tea, when the head nurse said, 'Prince Eddie, say your grace,' and the little prince religiously closed his eyes, lifted his two little hands up and said, 'Oh, my good Lord, I thank you for my good tea,' and turning round to the nurse added: 'Can I have a little more?' To which the nurse answered, 'No, Prince Eddie; you have had quite enough. You must not say that.'"

Red Coral Long Traded In.

Trade in red coral with the Far East began in very remote times. It is mentioned in a poem by the Chinese poet Yung Pai, who died in 117 B.C., and in the time of the Han dynasty. About 200 years later a traveller was sent from China to report on the coral fishery of the Mediterranean. The ultimate trade was introduced into the Chinese materia medica.

Reinach described the trade with the Celtic races in pre-Roman times. Specimens have been found in Britain and Ireland. The Romans stopped the trade with the Celtic races, however, in order to send the coral to India in exchange for frankincense, myrrh, and precious stones.

NAMES OF PLANTS.

Most of Them Have Come From European Sources.

Of the many thousands of enthusiastic amateur gardeners how few there are anything whatever about the plants they raise and tend so carefully?

Who, for instance knows that most of our tree fruits originally came from Southern Europe? Yet, studying their names, we find that many are derived from the Greek and Latin—Peach, pear, apricot, damson, and plum. Apple, however, always grew in the north, and the word "apple" is Teutonic in origin.

There are few names handed down to us literally from the days although in Ireland, Wales, and Cornwall traces are sometimes found. In the North of England names sometimes come from the Norse or Danish. "Rowan" is one, and it is connected with rune, a charm, thus called because in those superstitious days it was supposed to avert the evil eye.

Is it generally known that the name dandelion comes directly from the French "dents-de-lion" (lion's tooth), and that mushroom is derived from the French "mousseron," which came from the Latin "mussa" (moss), referring to a mossland where mushrooms grow.

The discovery of America greatly stimulated the art of gardening in England, for many new plants were brought over by those who sailed across the Atlantic to see the new country. Anne of Cleves, one of Henry VIII.'s wives, took up gardening as a hobby, and made it fashionable. At that time, however, the medicinal values of plants were of primary consideration, and herbalists flourished exceedingly.

Sometimes plants are called after the countries or districts from whence they first came. Currants are called after Corinth, a Greek city; arabis was an Arabian plant; while pampas grass comes from South America.

It may be possible that some people think gooseberries had something to do with geese. Not at all. It is a corruption of the old French "groise," hairy; while frankincense was used as a hand governor for oxen, but was probably Folk's Glove, or the glove of the folks or fairies.

Flower names and their meanings are equally interesting. Daisy is, of course, Day's eye, or sun. Daffodil, again is the flower of love, and aster is a star. Daffodil is derived from Asphodel, which means the unsurpassed; while mignonette, sweet smelling and unobtrusive, means little darling. And no one would think of calling it Reseda odorata.

Some flowers are regarded as unlucky. Primrose, for instance, are the belief that if the first primroses taken into the house be fewer than thirteen in number all hens "set" will only hatch out as many eggs as there are primroses in the bouquet. So fixed is this belief that on one occasion a Norfolk clergyman was called upon to intervene in a quarrel which had arisen between two women because one had given the child of the other a single primrose, so as to ensure that the mother's hens should only hatch one egg each. Daffodils are also said to be unlucky.

Is Ancient Secret Order.

The actual origin of the name is as obscure as the foundation of Odd Fellowship, concerning which all that is known is that the earliest lodge was the Loyal Aristarchus, which met in London in 1745. To this source may be traced the Manchester Unity, established in 1813, and now the largest friendly society in the world.

At the outset the order adopted a rule: "That any brother of the independent order who shall be guilty of assisting any secret society of women or attending their meetings shall be suspended for twelve months for the first offence and for the second be expelled from the order forever."

The Odd Fellows, like other friendly societies, was illegal prior to 1850, and on many occasions was robbed with impunity. One of its officials, applied to his own use about $20,000, which had been subscribed for the relief of sufferers through the Irish famine, and yet the society had no legal redress.

WINTER COVERING FOR STRAWBERRIES.

(Experimental Farms Note.)

Strawberry plants may be injured by alternate freezing and thawing, which tends to lift them out of the soil and thus injure or break the roots. They may be injured during the cold of winter by the frost drying out the crown of the plant and the leaves. Heaving of the plants seldom occurs on a well drained soil, but on soils poorly drained the plants are likely to suffer considerably, particularly during the very early spring after the snow has melted. In certain situations there may be little loss from cold, as the drying effect of the cold may be lessened because of the natural protection afforded, or the snow may give the protection required.

In order to make sure of the plants carrying through the winter successfully it is wise to protect them with a mulch. A mulch of any material tends to hold the soil under it as a more uniform temperature. The soil will not freeze so quickly under a mulch and is slower in thawing than when no covering is given. Thus with a mulch the plants are better able to avoid the alternate freezing and thawing of spring, with its consequent disastrous results. If the injury is due to drying out, which often happens in exposed situations, the mulch will overcome this trouble. Plants exposed to the cold, and unprotected from dry, cold winds may be completely dried out. Under such conditions, if the air is dry, a heavier mulch may be necessary than where the atmosphere is damid and the consequent loss from evaporation less.

In situations with a fairly moderate climate a light mulch is all that is necessary, as too heavy a mulch may cause injury because of the plants being kept damp and mould developing. In the colder sections a good blanket of snow can be depended upon, and under such conditions a heavy mulch would be unnecessary than where the atmosphere is damid and the consequent loss from evaporation less.

In the colder sections a good blanket of snow can be depended upon, and under such conditions, if the air is dry, a heavier mulch may be necessary than where the atmosphere is damid and the consequent loss from evaporation less.

Of all mulch material perhaps clean straw free from weed seed is the best. This is scattered evenly over the plants at the rate of 2 or 3 tons per acre. A covering thick enough so that the plants are nicely hidden from view is usually ample, and care should be taken in giving an even light covering, as most satisfactory. A light covering of clean marsh hay may be used, but more care is necessary to give a light covering than with straw. A compact hay may hold dampness in the spring and result in decay of the plant. Spruce boughs make a good covering, but it takes considerable time to gather and place them.

The mulch should be applied in November when the ground is nicely frozen, and removed in the spring during the last week in April or early in May. It may be gathered when dry and used or bedding, or may be placed between the rows to serve as a summer mulch, thus conserving moisture and keeping the fruit also the edge of the rows clean from sand.

What a Happy Disposition And Muskoka Can Do

Mary was one of those popular girls. Happy and busy by day and night—just loads of time for everything but dance and skate and flirt—no time at all to take care of her cough. Mary's father was dead—the family half suspected he died of consumption. Suddenly and tragically, consumption again stalked into the home. Two sisters were stricken and within a few months both rested in the family plot on a high hill overlooking Lake Erie. Mary's cough wouldn't be shaken—it grew worse, her temperature rose, and she became very weak indeed. She was sent to the Muskoka Hospital for consumptives, where skilled treatment, fresh air and nourishing food are restoring her strength.

The Doctors say her youth and happy disposition will help her in the battle against Tuberculosis. Now and again her mother visits the hospital and she is very thankful indeed for the progress her only girl is making.

Contributions to aid Muskoka Hospital in its work may be sent to Hon. W. A. Charlton, 315 College Street, Toronto.

CHANCE FOR THEM.

During the week certain members of the flock had been paying overmuch attention to sampling the local whiskey and the minister took advantage of his position in the pulpit to administer reproof.

"An' I tell ye, one an' all, ye're on the way to perdection," he cried.

At that moment a fly settled on the book before him. He raised his fist, "Ye're gaoin' tae the bottomless pit!" he shouted. "And ye'll all get there just sae sure as one sure as I ding the life out o' this flee."

His fist crashed down as he uttered the words; then he looked to see the results of his handiwork.

"Missed!" he ejaculated. "Ah, weel, maybe there's a chance for some o' ye yet!"

STILE AND STYLE.

Some years ago Mr. Balfour explained a bound-up ankle by saying: "I was crossing my brother's grounds when, coming to a gate, I had to climb over it, by which I came in contact with the first bar and grazed the epidermis of my leg, which has caused a slight extravasation of blood."

"You may thank your lucky stars," said his friend, "that your brother's gate was not as lofty as your style, or you might have broken your neck."

NEW LAMP BURNS 94 PER CENT AIR

BEATS ELECTRIC OR GAS

A new oil lamp that gives an amazingly brilliant, soft, white light, even better than gas or electricity, has been tested by Dept. U. S. Government and 35 leading universities and found to be superior to all ordinary oil lamps. It burns without odor, smoke or noise—no pumping up—simple, clean, safe. Burns 94 per cent air and 6 per cent common kerosene (coal oil).

The inventor, F. N. Johnson, 246 Craig St. W., Montreal, is offering to send a lamp on 10 days' FREE trial, or even to give one FREE to the first user in each locality who will help him introduce it. Write him to-day for full particulars. Also ask him to explain how you can get the agency, and without experience or money make $250 to $500 per month. 39-04

"My dear man," said the wife, who was beginning to be exasperated as she undertook to teach her husband the new dance steps, "you learn to drill in the army; why can't you pick this up? It's a perfectly simple step. Any one would think you were mentally deficient."

"Almost the sergeant's own words, my dear," answered the man.

BALLOON-SHAPED TIRE HAS BEEN INTRODUCED.

Is Said to Offer No Resistance to Inequalities of Road Surface.

Much interest has recently been excited among motorists by the introduction of a new type of tire known as the balloon shape. This type of tire is constructed with about half as many plies of cords as the regular cord tire, has a thick, tough tread and is intended to be used with an air pressure of only 25 to 30 pounds, or approximately one-half the pressure employed commonly in cord tires.

It offers no resistance to the inequalities of the road and, therefore transmits no jars or bumps to the car. It is said that a balloon tire can be driven over a brick and will envelop the brick without causing any shock to the car. Whether such a tire would be less injurious to a person who had the misfortune to be run over by a car than would other types has not yet been determined.

This tire has a large surface in contact with the road and consequently is less likely to skid, and it is claimed that with the car moving, steering is no harder than with the regular cord tire, although it is admitted to be somewhat harder to swing the wheels when the car is at a standstill.

Claims have been made that a set of balloon tires would give 35,000 miles of service, but whether this contention will prove correct has still to be demonstrated.

No man or woman should hobble painfully about because of corns when so certain a relief is at hand as Holloway's Corn Remover.

"I envy the river," sighed the first hobo.

"Why so?" asked number two.

"Because it so seldom is forced to get out of its bed."

"How did you come to choose a political career?"

"I didn't choose it," replied Senator Sorghum. "The first time I was elected to office it was because everybody else was too busy to be a candidate."

Drives Asthma Like Magic. The immediate help from Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Asthma Remedy seems like magic. Nevertheless it is only a natural remedy used in a natural way. The smoke or vapor, reaching the most remote passage of the affected tubes, brushes aside the trouble and opens a way for fresh air to enter. It is sold by dealers throughout the land.

"Our most prominent citizen," explained the native.

"Indeed?" said the visitor. "And what has he done?"

"Nothing at all; that's it," said the native. "He is positively the only man in this town whose opinion has never been asked, who has never had one to express and who is not looking forward to a monument."

Use Miller's Worm Powders and the healthy child is assured. These powders correct the morbid conditions of the stomach which permit worms to exist. Destructive parasites cannot exist after they come in contact with the medicine. The worms are speedily evacuated with other refuse from the bowels. Soundness is imparted to the organs and the health of the child steadily improves.

"I'm glad Henrietta has learned to take such an intelligent interest in public affairs," remarked Mr. Meekton.

Excellent for Croupy Children.—When a child is suffering with croup it is a good plan to use Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. It reduces the inflammation and loosens the phlegm giving speedy relief to the little sufferer. It is equally reliable for sore throat and chest, earache, rheumatic pains, cuts, bruises and sprains. Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil is regarded by many thousands as an indispensable of the family medicine chest.

Powerful Medicine.—The healing properties in six essential oils are concentrated in every bottle of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, forming one of the most beneficial liniments ever offered to the use of man. Many can testify as to its power in allaying pain, and many more can certify that they owe their health to it. Its wonderful power is not expressed by the small price at which it sells.

A young man who was leaning against the entrance of a large city building smoking a cigarette was approached by a stranger.

"Young man", said the latter, "smoking is a vile habit. Why don't you stop and become industrious? Why, if you practice self-denial during your life, some day you might own this building."

"Have you practiced self-denial?" said the young man.

"I certainly have."

"Do you own this building?"

"No."

"Well, I do," said the young man.

RAISING THE PIGS RIGHT

How to Get a Fair Profit Out of Swine.

Avoid Extremes of Heat and Sun—Using the Self-feeder—A Corrective for Winter Use — Farm Bookkeeping — Roughage: Have It Good.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

Swine are profitable when given abundant sunshine and exercise, fed on well selected feeds, gently handled, given proper sanitation and housing, kept free from worms and lice, and protected against cholera and other diseases. Much can happen a pig between birth and old age, but it is an easy animal to keep in the straight and narrow path leading to successful and profitable development if you go the right way about it.

Pigs frequently suffer more from the heat of the sun during the summer than they do from the cold of the winter period. If possible, make full use of any available shade trees when making your plans for swine pastures, feed lots or colony house locations.

The Self-feeder for Pigs.

Young pigs having access to a self-feeder may neglect the pasture portion of their rations, so must be watched from time to time. The self-feeder can be used with mature breeding stock, providing the ration given is bulky and contains good roughage as ground alfalfa. Mature breeding stock ought to become used for it given the freedom of helping themselves. The self-feeder is intended as an aid to feeding operations during the grazing season, and as such, it will reduce the labor requirement of feeding over fifty per cent.

Corrective for Winter Use.

The use of a suitable corrective is strongly recommended by all successful swine feeders. One that is low in cost and fully efficient, and easy to prepare may be provided as follows:

100 pounds of ground lime stone or slacked lime.

100 pounds of hard wood ashes or coal cellar coll to which 10 pounds of bone flour has been added.

200 pounds of charcoal.

50 pounds of salt.

20 pounds of sulphur.

2 pounds of iron sulphate.

Mix all the dry material together excepting the iron sulphate. When all are mixed, dissolve the iron sulphate in a gallon of hot water and sprinkle over the entire mass. Shovel over a few times and then store in sacks or barrels for use as wanted.

Pigs should be given free access to a trough or box containing the above mixture.—L. Stevenson, O.A.C., Guelph.

Farm Bookkeeping.

Two dairy farms were selected for a study of the cost of producing milk. It was found that on one the cost of production was 21.65 per hundredweight of milk; on the other farm the cost was 86 per hundredweight.

If both these farms were selling milk at $2.50 per hundredweight, what would you say about the comparative prosperity of the two farms?

It is quite usual to see two farms side by side, one of which appears prosperous while the other seems to be slowly going down. It doesn't mean that one farmer is a worker while the other is lazy, not at all. We have all seen hard-working farmers who have failed to make a success. We explain it by saying he had poor luck, or things somehow seemed to go against him.

After all brain is about as important as muscle, if not more so, in this farming business. And a farmer can work as profitably at his desk as he can in the field.

That is why it pays a farmer to be educated. It is a matter of money returns whether the farmer shall know how to keep his books or not.

It takes only a few minutes to jot down items of town and various crops in a time-book, once or twice a week. And items of expense can be entered in a column or two apart, to be distributed at leisure in winter evenings. The date of sale and the price received are more than mere items of curiosity to be remembered for awhile then forgotten.

Really there is no excuse for a farmer not knowing his production costs. And it should be considered as much of a slur of poor farming as the growth of weeds along the roadside or the tumbling of fences.

Roughage—Have It Good.

A good cow must be capable of handling large amounts of roughage. Provided with plenty of high quality forage she will produce much more economically than when the grain to balance poor hay and stover.

Silage added to a ration has been found to reduce the cost of producing 100 pounds of milk from twenty-five cents to twenty-five cents. In an American experiment, twelve cows were divided into two groups. One group received grain and legume hay, the other the same roughage allowance with grain in addition. The second group produced more milk but in the first case did very well and easily excelled the first from the standpoint of commercial production.

Thoughts are not meant to indicate that it does pay to feed grain but to show the importance of plenty of good roughage.

The World's Biggest Hog.

New Zealand has produced the biggest hog on record, "Billy, the World's Wonder Pig," as the animal is advertized, in a two-year-old Tamworth-Berkshire cross, weighing 1,058 pounds; height, 3 feet 9 inches; length, 8 feet 9 inches; girth, 6 feet, and he is still growing.

Keep those lambs a-coming. Feed the ewes something to make milk.

"No, how?"

"They ring dumb-bells, of course."

EIGHTY MILES AN HOUR.

Speed of Express Train Little Understood by Laymen.

The announcement made in London that the Great Western Railway's newest engines are capable of running at eighty miles an hour does not mean that the passengers will be given the opportunity of travelling by express trains booked at so high a speed.

If that were the case the result would be a world's record, since not even in the United States, where extraordinary speeds have been claimed on special occasions, has any regular train ever attained even seventy miles an hour from start to finish.

On the other hand these new Great Western engines, like a 60-h.p. motor car, are so designed that when they are "let out" they will be capable of tackling gradients or heavy loads more easily, and in this way it will be possible to increase average train speeds.

This difference between actual railway speeds and the average rate at which an express is timed to travel throughout its journey is very little understood by the layman, with the result that quite fantastic fables have gained credence, says a writer in a London paper.

The "booked speed" represents the average rate of travel over the entire journey. For instance, the "booked" average of the "Sunny South Special," which runs from London to Brighton in exactly sixty minutes, is a shade over fifty miles an hour. But the average speed is very much higher, and bursts of seventy miles an hour are quite common.

The reason is that the steam engine takes a relatively long time to get into its stride, while it has also to slow down on the last lap of the journey, when it may be running with the steam cut for several minutes. On a short run, the time occupied in getting up speed and slackening corresponds a relatively large proportion of the total journey, so that the speed for the greater part of the distance is well in excess of the "start-to-stop" average.

Moreover, the driver has to observe a number of speed restrictions. Some of these are of a permanent nature, such as on curves and when running through junctions. Others are temporary and are due to track re-laying or other engineering works, of which the driver is daily warned by notices posted up in the engine shed.

A time-table speed of fifty-five miles an hour or over, which is even to-day rare in progress, may thus mean anything up to eighty miles an hour on suitable sections of the line. But that is quite a different thing from an "eighty-mile-an-hour express."

The First Guineas.

The origin of the guinea is generally credited to a company of merchants trading under a special charter granted by the crown. It is said that in 1663 they manufactured gold from gold imported from the Guinea Coast. There bore the representation of an elephant on one side, and were called guineas.

At first the guinea was worth only twenty shillings, but as the silver coinage gradually deteriorated in 1695 the guinea was worth thirty shillings. In 1698 its value fell to twenty-one and sixpence, and to twenty-one shillings in 1717, remaining at this figure until it disappeared from the coinage. The last guinea was coined in 1817, when the sovereign first made its appearance.

It is still customary in Great Britain to estimate professional fees, prices of pictures, complimentary subscriptions, and so on, in guineas.

Keys In Stomach.

A case of the "human ostrich" variety is described in the British Medical Journal by Dr. A. G. Brand, of the Ayr County Hospital. It is unique both for the number of articles found and the strange preference shown for some keys. The following were removed from the woman's stomach:

Seventeen iron keys, the longest being 3¾ inches in length.

Two coins, one with a ring through it.

Three safety pins, one open.

One bottlen.

One engineer's split-pin.

One pencil sharpener.

The patient was 27 years old. She had several operations, and at no time did she give any hint as to her queer diet of door keys. The most amazing part of the story is that she made an uninterrupted recovery.

Gregorian and Julian Calendars.

The length of the mean Gregorian year may be set down at 365 days, 5 hours, 49 minutes, 12 seconds. The Gregorian calendar was introduced by Pope Gregory and his cohorts in 1752, at which time the equinox had retrograded eleven days since the council of Nice in A. D. 325, when the festival of Easter was established for the equinox occurred on March 21; hence September3, -1752, was called September 14, and at the same time the commencement of the legal year changed from March 25 to January 1, so that the year 1751 to the months of January and February and the first 24 days of March. The difference between the Julian and Gregorian calendar is now 12 days. Russia and the Greek church still employ the Julian calendar for civil and ecclesiastical purposes.

New Gas Producing Plant.

The new gas producing plant which was recently started at Birmingham, England, is capable of producing the daily output of gas by 7,000,000 cubic feet, making a total output of 49,000,000 cubic feet. The plant has cost £600,000 and taken two years to erect.

Imperial taxation in Great Britain and Northern Ireland for the current financial year is £16 12s. per head, and local taxation in Great Britain for 1921-22 was £4 9s. 6d. per head.

"Is the boss in?" asked the visitor. The office boy, with his chair tilted back and his legs stretched out on a desk, made no reply.

"I asked if the boss was in," said the visitor.

The office boy glanced at him, but remained silent. "Didn't you hear me?" snapped the visitor.

"Of course, I heard you," answered the boy, scornfully.

"Then why the dickens didn't you tell me if the boss's in?"

"Now, I ask you," retorted the boy, as he recrossed his legs on the desk, "does it look like it?"

ANOTHER KIND.

A young woman, on her first visit to Scotland, was passing a few hours away by attempting to play the national game of golf.

She was not very good, though her style was powerful.

It was the fourth time she had attempted to drive, and for the fourth time the ball was undisturbed, and her driver slipped out of her hands and flew away over the furze bushes.

"If you keep on at that rate", remarked the caddie, "you will soon be champion of Scotland."

"Do you mean that?" she simpered in womanly fashion.

"Aye," replied the caddie, "at throwing the hammer!"

"Young man," stormed the irate father, "I'll cut you off with a dollar for!"

"How about letting me have it now, dad?" inquired the unlucky son.

"The Least Exertion Tired Me," Writes Mr. Benoit

Lack of the proper constituents in the blood is the cause of anemia. This may result from disease, run down condition of the system. The symptoms are, pallor of the skin and mucous membrane, palpitation, weakness, languor, etc. Anemia is sometimes the forerunner of consumption. Everything should be done to build and tone up the system. Carnol relieved Mr. Benoit of his anemia. He says:

"I had been feeling weak and depressed. The least exertion tired me. I had no appetite. I'd got a few hours sleep at night was lucky. I wanted to rest all the time. My nerves were on edge. The slightest thing irritated me. In fact, I was suffering from anemia. Finally I decided I would try my friend, Mr. H. H. Page, the druggist, and see if he could do something for me. He recommended me to take a Course of Carnol (six bottles). After I had taken the fourth bottle I was a different man. I could eat, sleep and do a heavy day's work without feeling tired. I also bought some bottles of Carnol for my mother-in-law and she was greatly benefited."—Rudolph Attitdes Benoit, St. Ludger de Rivière du Loup. 7-9

CHANCE FOR THEM.

During the week certain members of the flock had been paying overmuch attention to sampling the local whiskey and the minister took advantage of his position in the pulpit to administer the reproof.

"An' I tell ye, one an' all, ye're on the way to perdeetion," he cried.

At that moment a fly settled on the book before him. He raised his fist. "Ye're gettin' like the bottomless pit!" he shouted. "And ye'll all get there just sae sure as—see sure as I ding doon oot o' this flee."

His fist crashed down as he uttered the words; then he looked to see the results of his handiwork.

"Missed!" he ejaculated. "Ah, weel, may be there's a chance for some o' ye yet!"

STILE AND STYLE.

Some years ago Mr. Balfour explained a bound-up ankle by saying: "I was crossing my brother's grounds when, coming to a gate, I had to climb over it, by which I came in contact with the first bar and grazed the epidermis of my leg, which has caused a slight extravasation of blood."

"You may thank your lucky stars," said his friend, "that your brother's gate was not as lofty as your style, or you might have broken your neck."

NEW LAMP BURNS - 94 PER CENT AIR

BEATS ELECTRIC OR GAS

A new oil lamp that gives an amazingly brilliant, soft, white light, even better than gas or electricity, has been tested by the U. S. Government and $5 leading universities and found to be superior to all ordinary oil lamps. It burns without smoke, odor or noise—no pumping up—simple, clean, safe. Burns 94 per cent air and 6 per cent. common kerosene (coal oil).

The inventor, F. N. Johnson, 246 Craig St. W., Montreal, is offering to send a lamp on 10 days' FREE trial, or even to give one FREE to the first user in each locality who will help him introduce it. Write him to-day for full particulars. Also ask him to explain how you can get the agency, and without experience or money make $250 to $500 per month. 39-9t

"My dear man," said the wife, who was beginning to be exasperated as she undertook to teach her husband the new dance steps, "you learn to drill in the army; why can't you pick this up? It's a perfectly simple step. Any one would think you were mentally deficient."

"Almost the sergeant's own words, my dear," answered the man.

BALLOON-SHAPED TIRE HAS BEEN INTRODUCED.

Is Said to Offer No Resistance to Inequalities of Road Surface.

Much interest has recently been excited among motorists by the introduction of a new type of tire known as the balloon shape. This type of tire is constructed with about half as many plies of cords as the regular cord tire, has a thick, tough tread and is intended to be used with an air pressure of only 25 to 30 pounds, or approximately one-half the pressure employed commonly in cord tires.

It offers no resistance to the inequalities of the road and, therefore transmits no jars or bumps to the car. It is said that a balloon tire can be driven over a brick and will envelop the brick without causing any shock to the car. Whether such a tire would be less injurious to a person who had the misfortune to be run over by a car than would other types has not yet been determined.

This tire has a large surface in contact with the road and consequently is less likely to skid, and it is claimed that with the car moving, steering is no harder than with the regular cord tire, although it is admitted to be somewhat harder to swing the wheels when the car is at a standstill.

Claims have been made that a set of balloon tires would give 35,000 miles of service, but whether this contention will prove correct has still to be demonstrated.

"Have you practiced self-denial?"

"I certainly have."

"Do you own this building?"

RAISING THE PIGS RIGHT

How to Get a Fair Profit Out of Swine.

Avoid Extremes of Heat and Sun—Using the Self-feeder—A Corrective for Winter Use — Farm Bookkeeping — Roughage: Have It Good.

Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.

Swine are profitable when given abundant sunshine and exercise, fed on well selected feeds, gently handled, provided with proper sanitation and housing, kept free from worms and lice, and protected against cholera and other diseases. Much can happen a pig between birth and eight, but it is an easy animal to keep in the straight and narrow path leading to successful and profitable development if you go the right way about it.

Pigs frequently suffer more from the heat of the sun during the summer than they do from the cold of the winter period. If possible, make full use of any available shade trees when making your plans for raising pigs, feed lots or colony house locations.

The Self-feeder for Pigs.

Young pigs having access to a self-feeder may neglect the pasture portion of their rations, so must be watched from time to time. The self-feeder can be used with mixture breeding stock, providing the ration given is milky and contains much roughage as ground alfalfa. Mature breeding stock are apt to become too fat if given the freedom of helping themselves. The self-feeder is intended as an aid to feeding operations during the grazing season, and as such, it will reduce the labor requirement of feeding over fifty per cent.

Corrective for Winter Use.

The use of a suitable corrective is strongly recommended by all successful swine feeders. One that is low in cost and fully efficient, and easy to prepare may be provided as follows: 100 pounds of ground lime stone or slacked lime.

100 pounds of hard wood ashes or coal cellar coll to which 10 pounds of bone flour has been added.

200 pounds of charcoal.
50 pounds of salt.
20 pounds of sulphur.
2 pounds of iron sulphate.

Mix all the dry material together excepting the iron sulphate. When all are mixed, dissolve the iron sulphate in a gallon of hot water and sprinkle over the entire mass. Shovel over a few times, and then store in sacks or barrels for use as wanted. Pigs should be given free access to a feeder or box containing the above mixture.—L. Stevenson, O.A.C., Guelph.

Farm Bookkeeping.

Two dairy farms were selected for a study of the cost of producing milk. It was found that on one the cost of production was $1.65 per hundredweight of milk; on the other farm the cost was $6 per hundredweight. If both these farms were selling milk at $2.50 per hundredweight, what would you say about the comparative prosperity of the two farms?

It is quite usual to see two farms side by side, one of which appears prosperous while the other seems to be slowly going down. It doesn't mean that one farmer is a success while the other is lazy, not at all. We have all seen hard-working farmers who have failed to make a success. We explain it by saying he had poor luck, or things somehow seemed to go against him.

After all brain is about as important as muscle, if not more so, in this farming business. And a farmer can wor, as profitably at his desk as he can in the field.

That is why it pays a farmer to be educated. It is a matter of money whether the farmer can tell or not know how to keep his books or not.

It takes only a few minutes to jot down items of hours spent on various crops in a time-book, once or twice a week. And items of expense can be entered in a column as they occur, to be distributed at leisure in winter evenings. The date of sale and the price received are more than mere items of curiosity to be remembered a while then forgotten.

Really there is no excuse for a farmer not knowing his production costs. And it should be considered as much of a sign of poor farming as the growth of weeds along the roadside or the tumbling of fences.

Roughage—Have It Good.

A good cow must be capable of handling large amounts of roughage. Provided with plenty of high quality roughage she will produce much more economically than when fed grain to balance poor hay and straw.

Silage added to a ration has been found to reduce the cost of producing 100 pounds of milk from twenty-five to seventy-five cents. In an American experiment, twelve cows were divided into two groups. One group received silage and legume hay, the other the same roughage allowance with grain in addition. The second group produced more milk but the first one did very well and easily justified its first from the standpoint of economical production.

These facts are not meant to indicate that it does not pay to feed grain but to show the importance of plenty of good roughage.

The World's Biggest Hog.

New Zealand has produced the biggest hog on record. "Billy," the World's Wonder Pig, as the animal is advertised, is a two-year-old Tamworth-Berkshire cross, weight, 1,058 pounds; height, 3 feet 9 inches; length, 8 feet 9 inches; girth, 6 feet, and he is still growing.

Keep those lambs a-coming. Feed the ewes something to make milk.

"Say, Esther, do you know how they summon the deaf mutes to dinner at the asylum?"

"No, how?"

"They ring dumb-bells, of course."

EIGHTY MILES AN HOUR.

Speed of Express Train Little Understood by Laymen.

The announcement made in London that the Great Western Railway's newest engines are capable of running at eighty miles an hour does not mean that the passengers will be given the opportunity of travelling by express trains booked at so high a speed.

If that were the case the result would be a world's record, since not even in the United States, where extraordinary speeds have been claimed on special occasions, has any regular train ever attained even seventy miles an hour from start to finish.

On the other hand these new Great Western engines, like a 60-h.p. motor car, are so designed that when they are "let out" they will be capable of tackling gradients or heavy loads more easily, and in this way it will be possible to increase average train speeds.

This difference between actual railway speeds and the average rate at which an express is timed to travel throughout its journey is very little understood by the layman, with the result that quite fantastic fables have gained credence, says a writer in a London paper.

The "booked speed" represents the average rate of travel over the entire journey. For instance, the "booked" average of the "Sunny South Special," which runs from London to Brighton in exactly sixty minutes, is a shade over fifty miles an hour. But the average speed is very much higher, and bursts of seventy miles an hour are quite common.

The reason is that the steam engine takes a relatively long time to get into its stride, while it has also to slow down on the last lap of the journey, when it may be running with the steam cut for several minutes. On a short run, the time occupied in getting up speed and slackening occupies a relatively large proportion of the total journey, so that the speed for the greater part of the distance is well in excess of the "start-to-stop" average.

Moreover, the driver has to observe a number of speed restrictions. Some of these are of a permanent nature, such as the curves and when running through junctions. Others are temporary and are due to track-relaying or other engineering works, of which the driver is daily warned by notices posted up in the engine shed.

A time-table speed of fifty-five miles an hour or over, which is even to-day not in practice, may thus mean anything up to eighty miles an hour on suitable sections of the line. But that is quite a different thing from an "eighty-mile-an-hour express."

The First Guineas.

The origin of the guinea is generally credited to a company of merchants trading under a special charter granted by the crown. It is said that in 1663 they manufactured coins from gold imported from the Guinea Coast. These bore the representation of an elephant on one side, and were called guineas.

Coins were issued to the value of one guinea, two guineas, five guineas, and half a guinea.

At first the guinea was worth only twenty shillings, but as the silver coinage gradually deteriorated, in 1695 the guinea was worth thirty shillings. In 1698 its value fell to twenty-one, and sixpence, and to twenty-one shillings in 1717, remaining at this figure until it disappeared from the coinage. The last guinea was coined in 1817, when the sovereign first made its appearance.

It is still customary in Great Britain to estimate professional fees, prices of pictures, country house subscriptions, and so on, in guineas.

Keys In Stomach.

A case of the "human ostrich" variety is described in the British Medical Journal by Dr. A. G. Barrie of the Ayr County Hospital. It is unique both for the number of articles found and the strange preference shown for iron keys. The following were removed from the woman's stomach by operation: Keys, the longest being 3¾ inches in length.

Two coins, one with a ring through it.

Three safety pins, one open.
One button.
One engineer's split-pin.
One pencil sharpener.

The patient was 27 years old. She had several operations, and at no time did she give any hint as to her diet of door keys. The most amazing part of the story is that she made an uninterrupted recovery.

Gregorian and Julian Calendars.

The length of the mean Gregorian year may be set down at 365 days, 5 hours, 49 minutes, 12 seconds. The Gregorian calendar was introduced into England and her colonies in 1752, at which time the equinox had retrograded seven days since the council of Nice in A. D. 325, when the festival of Easter was established, and the equinox occurred on March 21; hence September3, 1752, was called September 14, and at the same time the commencement of the legal year changed from March 25 to January 1, so that the year 1751 had the months of January and February and the first 24 days of March. The difference between the Julian and Gregorian calendar is now 12 days. Russia and the Greek church still adhere to the Julian calendar for civil and ecclesiastical purposes.

New Gas Producing Plant.

The new gas producing plant which was recently started at Blackburn, England, is capable of increasing the daily output of gas by 7,000,000 cubic feet, making a total output of 49,000,000 cubic feet. The plant has cost £600,000 and taken two years to erect.

Imperial and Local Taxation.

Imperial taxation in Great Britain and Northern Ireland for the current financial year is £1 15s. 10d. per head, and local taxation in Great Britain for 1921-22 was £4 9s. 6d. per head.

"I asked if the boss was in," said the visitor.

The office boy glanced at him, but remained silent. "Didn't you hear me?" snapped the visitor.

"Of course, I heard you," answered the boy, scornfully.

"Then why the dickens didn't you tell me if the boss's in?"

"Now, I ask you," retorted the boy, as he recrossed his legs on the desk, "does it look like it?"

ANOTHER KIND.

A young woman, on her first visit to Scotland, was passing a few hours away by attempting to play the national game of golf.

She was not very good, though her style was powerful.

It was the fourth time she had attempted to drive, and for the fourth time the ball was undisturbed, and her driver slipped out of her hands and flew away over the furze bushes.

"If you keep on at that rate", remarked the caddie, "you will soon be champion of Scotland."

"Do you mean that?" she simpered in wonderment.

"Aye," replied the caddie, "at throwing the hammer!"

"Young man," stormed the irate father, "I'll cut you off with a dollar!"

"How about letting me have it now, dad?" inquired the unlucky son.

"The Least Exertion Tired Me," Writes Mr. Benoit

Lack of the proper constituents in the blood is the cause of anemia. This may result from disease or run down condition of the system. The symptoms are pallor of the skin and mucous membrane, palpitation, weakness, languor, etc. Anemia is sometimes the forerunner of consumption. Everything should be done to build and tone up the system. Carnol relieved Mr. Benoit of anemia. He says:

"I had been feeling weak and depressed. The least exertion tired me. I had no appetite. I got a few hours sleep at night I was lucky. I wanted to rest all the time. My nerves were on edge. The slightest thing irritated me. In fact, I was suffering from anemia. Finally I decided I would get my friend, Mr. H. H. Page, the druggist, and see if he could do something for me. He recommended me to take a Course of Carnol (six bottles). After I had taken the fourth bottle I was a different man. I could eat, sleep and do a heavy day's work without feeling tired. I also bought some bottles of Carnol for my mother-in-law and she was greatly benefited"—Rudolph Aristides Benoit, St. Ludger de Rivière du Loup. 7-9

TOO MANY CHANCES

The country is face to face with a serious problem. There are too many chances being taken and too many people being injured because of the chance-taking habit. The motorist who habitually takes chances is reasonably sure to be involved ultimately in an accident. The same general rule applies to the pedestrian. The worker in industry who has not time, or thinks he has not time to be careful, is hastening the day of his injury, and the employer who prefers to take a chance rather than provide safeguards for his dangerous machinery, is inviting injury to his men and increased compensation costs for himself and other employers in his class.

Too many chances are being taken in a country that needs to conserve all its forces, but more particularly the lives of its citizens. There is a saying that "The chance-taker is the accident-maker" and this has been abundantly proven by the history of accidents in industry in this country. On the other hand, there is a record of a foreman in a wire plant in Hamilton showing sixty years of service, with never an accident to himself, nor a serious accident to anyone in his department. The reason he advances is, "being careful". It sounds simple, but sometimes it is a most difficult role to play. The toll of accidents in and out of industry, however, quite justifies more attention to care and caution, and the curbing of the "take-a-chance" spirit.

PREPARING STOCK FOR WINTER PRODUCTION

(Experimental Farms Note.)

It is high time to think of preparations for the winter. The houses should be thoroughly disinfected and lime washed; leaky roofs, broken glass, torn cottons and cracks in the walls mended and everything put in A1 shape before the pullets are brought in from the range.

This should be done sufficiently early so that the pullets will not receive a check. When they are brought in conditions should be made as much as possible as they were when on range; that is, the houses should be kept as open as possible so that the pullets will not suffer from the confinement,—as no doubt many of them have been used to roosting in the trees.

Feed scratch grain sparingly so as to keep the birds active and give them all the green food you can get them to eat. If a variety of green food is used and it is given in various forms the birds can be induced to eat more of it than if only one kind is used. Sprouted oats, chopped clover, rape, cabbage or anything in the way of green food will prompt the birds should be given them. It may be used both separately and chopped up and mixed in a moist mash.

Unless care is taken when the birds are put in, to feed sparingly with grain and heavily with green feed they are liable to become sluggish; if any tendency to this is noticed Epsom salts should be freely used, about a pound to 100 birds.

The following methods of feeding have given good results:—

A hopper of dry mash composed of equal parts bran, middlings, cornmeal and oat chop and half part tankage is kept before the birds at all times, also water, grit, oyster shell and charcoal. When possible milk is also supplied. When milk is not available additional meat food must be supplied. In the morning the birds are given a very light feed of scratch grain scattered in the litter, green feed is also supplied, at noon a moist mash is given in which is mixed a goodly proportion of chopped greens, at night a full feed of scratch is fed.

Where lights are used, and they add greatly to the early winter production, an extra feed may be worked in.

KITCHEN SINK SERVICE

Where and How to Place This Very Necessary Article.

Hot Water For the Farm Sink—Have One of Generous Size—Location and Height Important—How to Combat Scours In Calves —Lubricant For Farm Machinery.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

The simplest arrangement for a kitchen sink service that supplies cold water only is a small pitcher pump mounted at the edge of a sink. This is the first step in improvement over the outdoor pump and cistern. For the hot water service at the sink, it is necessary to have a heating arrangement which is best supplied by a water front in the range, a water reservoir and a supply of cold water under pressure. The water under pressure may be furnished through the use of a pressure tank system, an attic tank or a gravity supply.

Place the Sink at the Proper Height.

The height of the kitchen sink is of great importance. The location of the most flexible joint in one person's backbone is not a standard for all. The correct height of the sink is a matter that must be determined by the person who is required to work over that particular sink. Every woman knows that working over a low sink is anything but pleasant.

Watch the man who installs the sink, and see that the height is satisfactory. The bottom of the sink should be just six inches below the point of your elbow. Such little attention to detail while the work is being done may save you many a backache. If you do not issue any instructions to those installing the sink, it will, in all probability, be installed at a height of thirty inches, which is correct for a woman only four feet, eight inches tall. You may be taller than that.

Have One of Generous Proportions.

Considerable choice can be had in size, design and material in kitchen sinks — the shape, weight of metal and quality of enamel largely determine the price. If the size of the kitchen will permit it, a sink of generous proportions is to be recommended. The drain board is important and generally desirable, but sometimes a movable flat wire basket or rack suspended over the sink is more desirable. Taps, faucets, or bibcocks of various types and quality are offered by the trade. The ordinary brass or nickel finish compression faucet is generally satisfactory. These may be had in either screw joint or solder joint.

The Location Is Very Important.

The kitchen sink should be located at a convenient point beneath a window or on a wall opposite a large window, so that the lighting may be good. Do not build the sink in with shelving, cupboards or closets unless you are prepared to cover all woodwork that is likely to be splashed with greasy water with copper sheeting. Open plumbing for the sink is to be preferred on the score of accessibility and cleanliness. The cockroach loves wet woodwork and grease, do try to avoid conditions that attract such insects. Locate the sink, if possible, on a wall on which there are no cupboards or cabinets, and do not consider anything but a high back type of sink. It may cost a little more but it is worth it when we consider the added service that such will give.—L. Stevenson, Dept. Extension, O. A. College, Guelph.

How to Combat Scours In Calves.

Like all diseases of cattle, prevention is the best method of combatting scours. Ordinarily scours, as distinguished from white scours or calf cholera, can usually be traced to overfeeding, irregular feeding, dirty pails, cold milk, sour milk, or old milk, and any one or all of these are due to carelessness on the part of the feeder.

Constant vigilance is the price of healthy calves. As soon as trouble is detected, the feed of the calf should be reduced at least half. Administer a dose of castor oil in warm milk by means of a small drenching bottle. This will tend to remove all irritating substances from the bowels. Feed should then be gradually restored to the normal account, and formaldehyde solution should be added to the milk at the rate of one teaspoonful per pound of milk. This solution should be made up of one part of formalin (40 per cent. solution of formaldehyde) to thirty-one parts of water. If prompt improvement does not follow this treatment, repeat the dose of oil, and accompany it with another reduction in the feed.

Calves are always greedy, and for this reason overfeeding should be avoided. This is true particularly when alfalfa is being fed, as it is exceedingly palatable, and the animal is apt to gorge itself.

Lubricants for Farm Machinery.

Heavy oils and greases are used on all bearings where the pressure is great and the movement slow, as on axles and slow turning shafts. Generally speaking, the greater the speed of the turning part the lighter the lubricant used. No oil should be used that has not sufficient body to remain on the surface of shaft and bearing for a reasonable length of time. All farm machines, separating engines and cream separators, can be kept well lubricated with the heavier oils and greases. Cream separators running at high speed require a light high grade oil, while gasoline engines require an oil of medium body and capable of standing a high temperature. Grease or hard oil cups should be attached to all bearings where practicable.—L. Stevenson, O.A.C., Guelph.

Have you given careful attention to the selection of the stallion to which to breed the farm mares.

Stonewall Jackson once found himself surrounded, with only one way to escape and this was over a bridge raked by a battery of the Federal Army. He calmly pulled his cape over his gray uniform, rode up to the battery and said: "Boys, you have this battery in the wrong place; move it to that eminence," pointing to a hill a short distance up, "limber up and he in a hurry." The order was obeyed and while the artillery was taking the new position Stonewall rode safely over the bridge and away.

Famous Chemist & ZAM-BUK

A pure herbal emollient of great healing power in skin diseases and injuries—this is shown in a report on Zam-Buk by that eminent Doctor of Science, Mr. Wentworth Lascelles-Scott.

Zam-Buk has won world-wide repute for its reliability in troubles like eczema, poisoned wounds, ringworm, bad legs, etc., now comes Dr. Scott's evidence.

Scientific Excellence.

"My exhaustive analysis proves that Zam-Buk is possessed of antiseptic and bacteriacidal power which promptly alleviates skin disorders due to parasites and pathogenic organisms. Moreover its astringent and balsamic constituents render Zam-Buk an emollient of rare healing power.

"Zam-Buk's constituents are exclusively of herbal origin, it contains none of the irritating mineral drugs and animal fats commonly found in ordinary ointments.

"In my opinion Zam-Buk, is well adapted for treatment of superficial injuries and prevalent skin disorders."

RUGBY.

NAPANEE 36, PICTON 3.

On Saturday afternoon at the Napanee Driving Park, Napanee Collegiate Rugby team played the Picton Collegiate. Early in the game Beamish, of Picton, had the misfortune to break his leg. The accident came in a most unexpected manner, but it showed his keenness for the game. The minute the ball was put into play for a convert and before the whistle had blown, Beamish rushed to block the kick; he was checked by Perry, and the impact caused a simple fracture of both bones in the right leg.

From the beginning the superiority of the Napanee team was evident. Their signals worked well, their combination was good, and they made yards on line plunges and end runs almost at will. Their weakness seemed to be in their tackling, none of the players showing a willingness to leave their feet, though they did not hesitate to tackle hard when on the ground.

The generalship was clear and brainy. In spite of the demand of the fans for a buck when within a few yards of the opponents' goal line they displayed excellent football judgment in playing safe.

The final score was 36-3 in favor of Napanee, and this justly indicates the difference in the teams. The Picton team played a plucky game all the way through and with more practise and coaching will easily put up a better argument.

LADIES' MUSICAL AND LITERARY CLUB.

The second meeting of the Napanee Musical and Literary Club, held in the Town Hall, Tuesday evening, was a genuine treat for all who were fortunate enough to be present.

The first part of the programme was entirely Canadian in character. Mrs. Smith explaining in a few introductory remarks that the object of the committee was to give some idea of the progress of Canadians in poetry, music and drama. While all the numbers were well worth hearing, the most outstanding were a poem of Drummond's wonderfully interpreted by Mrs. Powell; a quaint old French song given by Master Alan Walters, and the solos by Master Fair, the boy soprano from Kingston, who will be heard again later in the season.

The second part of the programme was "Oh-O-Mc-Taunsh", an English rockney play presented by some members of the Faculty of Queen's University and their performance was so finished and pleasing it was hard to realize one was listening to amateurs. The audience thoroughly enjoyed every minute of the play, while the players felt they had an appreciative and sympathetic audience. It is to be hoped that Napanee will have the pleasure of hearing these gifted performers again during this season.

Edith—Haven't you and Jack been engaged long enough to get married?"

Ethel—Too long! He hasn't got a cent left."

"Here," said the salesman, "is a pair of pajamas you'll never wear out."

"Er—yes, they are rather loud for street wear, aren't they?"

RUGBY.

NAPANEE 36, PICTON 3.

On Saturday afternoon at the Napanee Driving Park, Napanee Collegiate Rugby team played the Picton Collegiate. Early in the game Beamish, of Picton, had the misfortune to break his leg. The accident came in a most unexpected manner, but it showed his keenness for the game. The minute the ball was put into play for a convert and before the whistle had blown, Beamish rushed to block the kick; he was checked by Perry, and the impact caused a simple fracture of both bones in the right leg.

From the beginning the superiority of the Napanee team was evident. Their signals worked well, their combination was good, and they made yards on line plunges and end runs almost at will. Their weakness seemed to be in their tackling, none of the players showing a willingness to leave their feet, though they did not hesitate to tackle hard when on the ground.

The generalship was clear and brainy. In spite of the demand of the fans for a buck when within a few yards of the opponents' goal line they displayed excellent football judgment in playing safe.

The final score was 36-3 in favor of Napanee, and this justly indicates the difference in the teams. The Picton team played a plucky game all the way through and with more practise and coaching will easily put up a better argument.

LADIES' MUSICAL AND LITERARY CLUB.

The second meeting of the Napanee Musical and Literary Club, held in the Town Hall, Tuesday evening, was a genuine treat for all who were fortunate enough to be present.

The first part of the programme was entirely Canadian in character. Mrs. Steele explaining in a few introductory remarks that the object of the committee was to give some idea of the progress of Canadians in poetry, music and drama. While all the numbers were well worth hearing, the most outstanding were a group of Drummond's wonderfully interpreted by Mrs. Powell; a quaint old French song given by Master Alan Walters, and the solos by Master Fair, the boy soprano from Kingston, who will be heard again later in the season.

The second part of the programme was "Oh-O-Mr. Taunch", an English cockney play presented by some members of the Faculty of Queen's University, and their performance was well finished and pleasing it was hard to realize one was listening to amateurs. The audience thoroughly enjoyed every minute of the play, while the players felt they had an appreciative and sympathetic audience. It is to be hoped that Napanee will have the pleasure of hearing these gifted persons again during the season.

The new hired man had been the most difficult to awaken in all Farmer Haytosser's long experience with that ilk, but he had been at last routed out of bed and was sitting in a state of semi-somnolence at the breakfast table. Just to make conversation his host and employer remarked:

"I thought it was going to rain last night."

"Well," yawned the assistant, "I reckon it might before mornin'."

FARMERS' PARTY HAS SEEN BEST DAY.

U. F. O. Members Fast Returning to Old Political Affiliations.—Split in the West. — Movement Led by Crerar May End in Shattering Progressives.

Ottawa, Nov. 19.—Reports to the effect that the Ontario United Farmers are desirous of pulling out of politics and are asking the Ontario Provincial convention to take such action are confirmed by other information received here. There is no doubt about it, that in this Province the Farmers are getting back to party lines and getting back fast. There also appears to be something of a rift in the Western wing of the Progressives, though to what extent it is difficult to say. It is understood that Hon. T. A. Crerar, Hon. A. B. Hudson, ex-Premier Drury and A. R. McMaster, with others were desirous of organizing a kind of reformed Liberal party, which, it is said, will stand for traditional Liberal policies, which men of McMaster's views say the present Government has departed from.

If this new movement develops strength in the West then will the break up of the U. F. O. in Ontario be precipitated and the Progressives will be quite badly shaken. But the West is far distant and it is difficult to tell just what the actual situation is out there. Probably the most notable recent political event out there was the Provincial by-election in Saskatoon, where, in the hard fighting ground of the Meistone constituency, the Liberal candidate defeated a Progressive by a majority double the best that Liberal heralds had previously received them.

Developments in Ontario indicate that at most the Progressive movement will only be an important factor in the practice provinces. The opposition to Hon. T. A. Crerar in the ranks of the Alberta Progressives is also depriving it of much strength out there.

T. S. held their monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. F. P. Dixon, Oak Leaf. A large number of young people were present, and before leaving for home, luncheon was served by the hostess. A large number from here attended the pie social at Colebrook on Friday evening, and report a good time. A large number of young people were present, and before leaving for home, luncheon was served by the hostess. A large number from here attended the pie social at Colebrook on Friday evening, and report a good time. A great many people from here attended the basket ball by Mrs. Elsie Freebury, on Tuesday last. Everything brought a high price.—Rev. A. L. Blacklock preached his farewell sermon on Sunday last, and he will leave for Boston in the near future.—The monthly supper given by the Ladies' Aid in the Methodist Church on Sunday afternoon, and the Rev. G. A. Stone, of Cataraqui, addressed the audience. Special music was furnished by the ladies.

BETHEL

The many friends in this neighborhood were deeply shocked on Tuesday noon, Nov. 13th, to hear of the passing away of the late James Middleton. Although in failing health, death came very unexpectedly to his neighbors and friends. The late Mr. Middleton was widely known and had many friends, having served as Councillor in the Township Council for a number of years. He was 74 years of age, and lived his whole life on the farm where he died. He is survived by his widow and only son, Arthur, who resides on the homestead. The funeral took place on Thursday afternoon from his late home, service being conducted by the Pastor, Rev. Mr. Spencer, after which the remains were laid to rest in the Moscow cemetery.—Mr. Clarence Manion has returned from the West, where he spent the summer.—Mr. and Mrs. Perry Alkenbrack and son Maurice spent Tuesday at Elginburg, guests of Mr. and Mrs. Gardanier.—Mr. Percy Galbraith received a dangerous injury to his brother, Howard, of Ardbey, Ont.—Mr. Robt. City Man—You used to be satisfied with dollar wheat.
Farmer—Yes, but in those days I didn't have to buy gas and accessories for a limousine.

NEWBURGH

Our local sawmods have had good success in obtaining their quota of deer, with no casualties to report.

A real estate deal, reported in our correspondence some time ago, between Mr. McNeely as vendor and a Mr. Smith, of Toronto, as buyer, is, we understand, declared off. If the parties to the transaction are satisfied there will be no kick coming from the citizens generally.

Miss Helen Brown, who lives with her uncle, Mrs. Marshall Peters, passed her 95th birthday on Thursday, 22nd inst. Miss Brown was for years a Public School teacher, and is still bright and a great reader. She has, within the past year, concluded reading "The Life of Wellington."—Miss Brown has a vivid recollection of the Russian War and the American Civil War.

Mr. Corkill, B.A., visited the schools on Friday last.

Rev. Mr. Anderson, of Selby, occupied the pulpit of the Union Church on Sunday evening, very acceptable.

We understand that Mr. Arch Reid and Mr. John File, who have both unfortunately lost limbs, are going to Toronto in the near future to have their deficiency remedied as far as possible by getting artificial limbs. It is hope that they may be successful in getting back a large measure of their personalatory powers."

Mr. Jasper Lewis has re-bought from Mr. Henry O'Connor the farm he sold to Mr. O'Connor less than a year ago. This is the third exchange of this farm between these two men. Mr. O'Connor first owned the place and sold to Mr. Lewis, who sold it back again to Mr. O'Connor, and has now re-bought it as stated, with all the stock. It reminds one of the story of a family of boys, who met every rainy day to trade articles, each making five dollars out of the others.

Mr. Quail has improved his store by putting in another plate glass window in front, and turning the space once occupied by the postoffice into the body of the store, making it more commodious and attractive.

Mr. Geo. B. Paul, undertaker, has also improved his premises by putting in a concrete floor in the lower story, cutting down over-hanging trees and having a new pavement put in.

We noticed in a Utica, N.Y., paper that Mr. M. Dickinson was elected, on the republican ticket as treasurer of Oneida County, N.Y., by a sweeping majority. It is interesting to note that Mr. Dickinson is an old Newburgh boy, living here in the early days. He received his education in the old Newburgh Academy, taught school for a time in this vicinity, was proprietor of the Newburgh Reporter published there. Later he took a position on the Utica Globe, afterwards becoming Editor-in-Chief of that paper. It is pleasing to hear of the success of Mr. Dickinson in his adopted country.

Mail Orders promptly filled at Wallace's Drug Store.

BETHANY

Once again the quiet and happy community of Bethany has been disturbed by the ravages of death. In the early hours of Friday last, Nov. 16th, there fell to the claims of the grim monster, one of the most highly respected and beloved, in the person of Ida May Richardson, beloved wife of George Burtch. The sympathies of the whole community and of many far beyond its boundaries, have long been centered around that home, for Mrs. Burtch has been a great sufferer for many months, and confined to her bed for eighteen weeks. Of late she has made repeated visits to the Kingston Hospital, and although her disease from the first was of a serious and perhaps hopeless nature, yet under the skilful treatment of Doctors and nurses, to which must be added that of her own patient and hopeful disposition, she lingered for many a day. Despite all the hope, however, of husband, daughter, sister, father and friends, it became all too apparent during the last week or two, that human skill and tender care could not cope with the inevitable, for the shadows of all the shades of night were falling fast.

In the death of Mrs. Burtch the community of Bethany has been bereft of a valued citizen and friend. The Methodist Church has lost a pillar which will not easily be replaced, for there was no phase of the church's life which was not touched by her personality and blessed by her presence and prayers.

The day set for the funeral was a loud call to a large circle of friends. On Sunday last the family and friends met at the home of the deceased, where prior to leaving for the Church, Rev. W. H. Truscott, offered prayer. The body was then taken to the church where an overflow congregation was waiting. Through the Pastor's indisposition, the Rev. A. J. Terrill, Chairman of the District, preached the sermon and conducted the burial ceremony. From his text, fifteen from Romans 8-28, many were the words of comfort and comfort. The expressions of sympathy were very touching and sincere, and those who could not utter them in words were showing them in tears, and when the curtain fell upon one of the saddest days of our history.

Mrs. Burtch leaves to mourn her loss a sorrowing husband, Mrs. Earl Howell (only daughter); Mrs. Arthur Dean (only sister); and a father, Mr. Geo. Richardson, and an only nephew, Clarence Lowry, of Toronto.

The flowers were beautiful and numerous, and besides the family tokens, wreaths were sent by Mr. and Mrs. Owen, of Toronto; Miss Pearl Hie, of Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. Richardshaw, of Napanee, and spray by Mrs. S. Walmsley.

FOOTBALL

Napanee and Belleville.

On Saturday last the return game of football was played between Napanee Collegiate and Belleville Collegiate, and the result bodes well for the future of rugby in this district. One to see these two teams at play can hardly believe that this is only the second year for them in the game. If the teams continue to make the progress in the next two years that they have done in the last they will compare favorably with some of the best Collegiate teams in the country.

The Belleville team was much heavier than Napanee and drew many expressions complimentary from the fans as they lined up on the field in real modern football style, and a good deal of fear was felt that they were too much for the local squad. However, when the teams got in action the difference was seen to be more apparent than real. And what they lacked in weight the locals made up in speed and strategy. The game was not a machine-like exhibition, and for that reason, perhaps, there was more real interest to the spectator than some other games. Fumbles were frequent on both sides, and these interjected an element of chance which gave the onlooker all the thrills he wanted. These breaks seemed to be pretty evenly divided, and the recoveries frequent so that the score was kept fairly even and the game was not over until the final whistle sounded. And one of the finest plays of the day was in the last few minutes of the game when Napanee by a series of end runs and bucks advanced the ball from their own line to within twenty yards of the opponents' goal line. On the third down at this point a drop kick was attempted. It missed but a Napanee player who claimed the ball had been out "onside" by a Belleville player, raced for it, secured and carried it across for a touch. In the growing dusk it was not possible either for the referee or the spectators to see whether or not the ball had been put "onside". The decision was therefore reached not to allow the touch but to give Napanee the "down" over again from the last line of scrimmage. They tried a buck and failed to make the yards, thus losing the ball and the game by the score of 6-4.

Daly used good football judgment in calling the plays and had the line opened for him in the last two downs when owing to a slight delay he had the ball struck from his hands, the game might have ended differently. The line did not play consistently; at times they were all that could be desired, while at other times they were weak. Northmore played a spectacular game and made repeated gains, though his trick of leaping over the opponents' line, while spectacular, is risky.

Napanee back division was not up to standard, both Cowlie and Perry making costly fumbles.

The weakness of the team, however, is that which was evident last week, and which is usually the weakness of a new team and that is the tackling. Practically all the tackling was high and ought strictly to have been disallowed.

These are the few weak spots and can easily be remedied. Judging from the showing Napanee had a team every one of whom played a hard and willing game. They are a team of which the town can well be proud. And it is quite certain that if the citizens knew what sort of a game they were missing, the attendance would be three or four times what it is.

Napanee line-up was as follows:—Flying Wing, Lucas; Halves, Perry, Cowle and Killorin; Quarter, Daly; Snap, Gleeson; Insides, Cooke and Northmore; Middles, Frisken and Fennell; Outsides, Prout and Vanalstine.

CANADIAN ORDER OF FORESTERS.

A very enjoyable evening was spent in the Court Rooms of Court Lennox No. 78, Canadian Order of Foresters, on Friday, Nov. 16th.

Having partaken of a bounteous supper which was served at 7.30 p.m., the Brothers listened to the splendid musical selections rendered by the Black Orchestra, followed by the Male Quartette of Grace Methodist Church, Messrs. B. M. Black, C. A. Wiseman, R. Seymour and A. E. Paul, who gave two selections that were thoroughly enjoyed by all.

The chair was efficiently and effectively filled by our Financial Secretary, Bro. George Walters, one of vast experience in the affairs of High Court and one who is the best authority on all business transactions of Court Lennox. These qualifications, combined with his lucidity of expression, humorous remarks and genial smiles, contributed largely to the life and cheerfulness of the evening, and it was conceded by all that he was the right man in the right place.

Bro. Joe Halpenny, of Ottawa, Organizer for the C. O. F., after giving two correct solos, was asked to stand, when Bro. J. G. Loucks, the ever faithful Forester, read in a clear distinct tone and with an expressive manner the following address of appreciation to him.

Bro. Halpenny,

We, the members of Court Lennox, to-night desire to take this golden opportunity as we surround this festive board, and when the very air seems laden with joy and gladness, to impress upon your mind and heart the gratitude of our friendship.

Sixteen years ago you visited our Court and the success you achieved at that time is still fresh in our memory. You seemed to instill life and vigor in our members, and the Brothers shared with you their tent and campfire in the forest of merry Sherwood, and not one of them ever had a word with you that was not cheering and pleasant. To-night, Brother Halpenny, words fail to express our pleasure in meeting with you again, and when the welcome news reached Napanee that you expected to visit our Court as an organizer, the word was passed from Brother to Brother, and all rejoiced at the glad tidings.

But you have returned to our Court at a time of business depression, assessments being raised, we were in the heat and fever of a by-election, mountains of difficulties in your path, but you sounded the call to arms and the walls fell like the battlements of Jericho. You were equal to the occasion, and if not in your own Province, we found you on the job where duty called. Truly you have reaped and garnered for Court Lennox an abundant harvest.

Brother Halpenny, you are a man essentially well gifted in mind and heart, and we are proud to say one who is loved by all. On the Lord's Day you were to be found in God's sacred edifice, proving by fact and precept that your motives of life are pure, you have set a noble example for the young men of our town and more especially to the newly initiated members.

And now upon the eve of your departure, we, on behalf of the Chief Ranger, officers and brothers of Court Lennox, with hearts overflowing with love and tenderness, present to you this golden pencil and fountain pen as a token of our esteem.

Please accept this gift and may you ever cherish it as a memento of your sojourn among us, may you long be spared to us and be able to write for Court Lennox as many applications as there are drops of ink in the fountain.

Now as you leave us to-night may God bless you, and may the white-winged Angel of love and peace ever guide your footsteps and guard well your pathway.

Court Lennox No. 78, C.O.F.

The presentation was made by Bro. Chas. Loucks in his usual candid and generous style, his well chosen remarks befitting the occasion, formed the link that connected the gift with the address in a harmonious and beautiful manner.

The response from Bro. Halpenny was very touching, though stalwart of frame and magnificent of physique he became for a moment as a little child, and reminded us of the lines, "Speak not of grief until thou hast seen the tears of warlike men", but after he had calmed himself and wiped the tears from his eyes, he responded in a clear and manner that would have done credit to a cleric, and the cheers he spoke of that were presented before death or answer the keynote and text for the response to the toast to the Canadian Order of Foresters.

The Toast to the King was proposed, and all Brothers joined in the response by heartly singing "God Save the King."

The Toast to the Canadian Order of Foresters was proposed and responded to by Bro. Jos. Vansomeren, Brantford, Ont., High Secretary of the Canadian Order of Foresters.

Bro. Vansomeren who is universally the best posted Brother on all matters concerning Canadian Forestry, explained in a very scholarly manner the new rates for Class A members, which comes in force on January 1st, 1924, convincing the members of this class the wisdom for the change of rates and urging them to retain their membership in the Order. His well chosen words were appreciated by all the members.

The community singing was enjoyed by all.

Brother A. E. Wiley, of Brantford, Ont., Superintendent of Organization, responded to the Toast of the Organization in a very able manner, stating it was always a pleasure to be present with the members of Court Lennox as they were such a good live working Court and always living up to the high standard they had attained. His remarks were well chosen, witty and appreciated by all.

Bro. Canon J. W. Jones, Kingston, Ont., High Chaplain Canadian Order of Foresters, responded to the Toast of the Brotherhood, in a very creditable manner, and showed what a true Brother well chosen by the representatives at High Court to fill the office of High Chaplain.

The Brothers then opened the Court, conferred the Initiatory and Second Degree on the new members, making the total of fifteen new members during the stay of Bro. Halpenny.

The Court having closed, the Brothers departed to their homes in the small hours of the morning, after enjoying a pleasant evening.

THE VICTORIAN ORDER OF NURSES FOR CANADA NAPANEE BRANCH.

A large representative gathering met in the Town Hall, on the evening of November 9th, to discuss the advisability of forming a Branch Association of the above Order; and engaging a Victorian Nurse for service in Napanee.

Mayor MacGregor occupied the chair and after a short address, introduced the speaker of the evening, Miss Stevenson, of Ottawa, an Inspector of the Order.

Miss Stevenson explained in a delightful manner the Victorian Order of Nurses, stating that it was founded in 1897, by Lady Aberdeen as a National Memorial in commemoration of the Diamond Jubilee of Queen Victoria.

The speaker gave as the object of the Order, the supplying of nurses (thoroughly trained in Hospital and Public Health nursing) for the sick, for the prevention of diseases and for the promotion of health, and emphasized the fact that everyone is entitled to the nurse's services, the poor receiving first attention. Many are unable to pay and others expressive more than five cents to a dollar, according to their means.

Besides actual bedside nursing, in some towns, the nurse acts as school nurse, social service worker, tuberculosis nurse, industrial nurse, etc. She prepares and assists at operations, adjusts splints, bandages, and prepares surgical dressings, and teaches by demonstration, how to carry out the physician's orders.

Speeches were also made by Dr. Millage, Mr. G. W. Gibbard, Mr. W. S. Herrington, K.C., Mr. W. A. Graves and Rev. W. R. Tanton, each giving the approval of the town engaging a Victorian Nurse.

The following resolution was then moved by Dr. Millage, seconded by Mr. G. W. Gibbard, and carried unanimously. Tonight.

That the meeting believe that it will be in the interest of the sanitary health of the town, that a Public Health Nurse be engaged, who shall be under the supervision of a local Branch of the Victorian Order of Nurses for Canada, to be formed.

A second resolution was moved by Mr. W. A. Graves, seconded by Mr. W. S. Herrington, that a Local Branch of the Victorian Order of Nurses for Canada, be organized in Napanee and that the following be the provisional officers, and an Executive Committee to effect the organization.

President—Mrs. F. F. Miller.

1st Vice-President—Mrs. W. H. Union.

Secretary—Mrs. Geo. Thompson.

Treasurer—Mr. P. Gleeson.

Rev. Father O'Connor, Rev. J. A. Terrill, Rev. A. J. Wilson, Rev. J. H. Coleman, Rev. W. R. Tanton, and the Captain of the Salvation Army, with power to add to their number.

This resolution was also carried.

The meeting closed with the singing of the National Anthem.

On the evening of Nov. 16th, the Executive Committee of the Napanee Branch of the Victorian Order of Nurses for Canada, met in the Public Library.

Rev. Father O'Connor, who occupied the chair, spoke briefly on the good to our town, especially the possibility of engaging a Victorian Nurse for service.

The officers, named at the former meeting, were made permanent for one year, with the exception of Treasurer, of Miss M. Leamy in place of Mr. P. Gleeson.

The subject of the Board of Education accepting the services of the Victorian Nurse engaged, was discussed, and the following resolution was moved by Rev. A. J. Wilson, seconded by Mr. Willet Bridley, that the Napanee Branch of the Victorian Order of Nurses for Canada, having decided to employ a Victorian Order Nurse for service in the Town of Napanee, and the Board of Education of the Order, having made a canvass of the financial position; and having concluded that the services of employing said nurse, could be financed.

Therefore be it resolved that the Board of Education be asked to offer the services of said Nurse for the purpose of school inspection, said service so to be rendered to the Board of Education, to be without charge. Carried.

A full list of the officers and committee will be given later.

FARMERS' PARTY HAS SEEN BEST DAY.

U. F. O. Members Fast Returning to Old Political Affiliations.—Split in the West, Movement Led by Crerar May End in Shattering Progressives.

Ottawa, Nov. 19.—Reports to the effect that the Ontario United Farmers are desirous of pulling out of politics is difficult to say. It is understood that the Provincial convention to take such action is confirmed by other information received here, however, there no doubt about it, that in this Province the Farmers are getting over to party lines and getting back fast.

There also appears to be something of a rift in the Western wing of the Progressives, though to what extent is difficult to say. It is understood that the West is fast following Hon. A. B. Hudson, ex-Premier of Manitoba, and E. McKenzie, both of whom are desirous of organizing a kind of reformed Liberal party, which, it is said, will endorse the traditional Liberal policies, which men of Mr. Crerar's views say the present Government has departed from.

If this new movement develops it will be the West then with the break up of the U. F. O. in Ontario the Progressives will be quite badly shattered. But the West is far distant and it is difficult to tell just what the actual situation is out there. Probably the most notable recent political event out there was the Provincial by-election in Saskatchewan, where in the hard fighting ground of the Mealstone constituency the Liberal candidate defeated a Progressive by a majority double the best that the Liberals had previously received there.

Developments in Ontario indicate that at most the Progressive movement will only be an important factor in the prairie provinces. The opposition to Hon. T. A. Crerar in the ranks of the Alberta Progressives is also depriving it of much fighting strength.

NEWBURGH

Our local sawmods have had good success in obtaining their quota of logs, and no report.

A real estate deal, reported in our correspondence some time ago, between Mr. McNeely as vendor and Mr. Smith, of Toronto, as buyer, is, we understand, declared off. If the parties to the transaction are satisfied there will be no kick coming from the public generally.

Miss Helen Brown, who lives with her sister, Mrs. Marshall Peters, passed her 95th birthday on Thursday, the 14th inst. Miss Brown was for years a Public School teacher, and is still bright and a great reader. She has, within the past year, completed reading "The Life of Wellington." Miss Brown has a vivid recollection of the Russian War and the American Civil War.

Mr. Corkill, 20-S.I., visited the schools on Friday last.

Rev. Mr. Anderson, of Selby, occupied the pulpit of the Union Church on Sunday evening, very acceptable.

We understand that Mr. Arch Reid and Mr. John Fife, who have both unfortunately lost limbs, are going to Toronto in the near future to have new limbs fitted as soon as it is found possible by getting artificial limbs. We hope that they may be successful in getting for a large measure of their personal usefulness.

Mr. Jasper Lewis has re-bought from Mr. Harry O'Connor the farm he sold to Mr. O'Connor less than a year ago. This is the third exchange of this farm between these two men. Mr. O'Connor first owned the place and sold to Mr. Lewis, who sold it back again to Mr. O'Connor, and has now re-bought it as stated, with all the stock. It reminds one of the story of a family of boys, who met every rainy day to trade articles, each making five dollars out of the others.

Mr. Quail has improved his store by putting in another plate glass window in front and turning the space once occupied by the postoffice into the body of the store, making it more commodious and attractive.

Mr. Geo. B. Paul, undertaker, has also improved his premises by putting in a concrete floor in the lower story, cutting down over-hanging trees and having a new pavement put in.

We noticed in a Utica, N.Y., paper that R. M. Dickinson was elected, on the republican ticket as treasurer of Oneida County, N.Y., by a sweeping majority. It is interesting to note that Mr. Dickinson is an old Newburgh boy, living here in the early seventies. He received his education in the old Newburgh Academy, taught school for a time in this vicinity, was postmaster of the Addington Reporter published here. Later he took a position on the Utica Globe, afterwards becoming Editor-in-Chief of that paper. It is pleasing to hear of the success of Mr. Dickinson in his adopted country.

BETHANY

Once again the quiet and happy community of Bethany has been disturbed by the ravages of death. In the early hours of Friday last, Nov. 16th, there fell to the claims of the grim monster, one of the most highly respected and beloved, in the person of Mrs. May Richardson, beloved wife of the late Richardson. The sympathies of the whole community and of many far beyond its boundaries, have long been centered around that home, for Mrs. Burtch has been a great sufferer for many months, and confined to bed for eighteen weeks. Of late she has made repeated visits to the Kingston Hospital, and although her disease from the first was of a serious and perhaps hopeless nature, yet under the skilful treatment of Doctors and nurses, to which must be added that of her own patient and hopeful disposition, she lingered for many a day. Despite all the hope, however, of husband, daughter, sister, father and friends, it became all too evident during the last week or two, that human skill and tender care could not cope with the inevitable, for the grim shades of all the shades of night were falling fast.

In the death of Mrs. Burtch the community of Bethany has been bereft of a valued citizen and friend. The Methodist Church has lost a pillar which will not easily be replaced, for there was no phase of the church's life which was not touched by her personality and blessed by her presence and prayers.

The day set for the funeral was a loud call to a large circle of friends. On Sunday last the family and friends met at the home of the deceased, where prior to leaving the Rev. W. H. Truscott, offered prayer. The body was then taken to the church where an overflow congregation was waiting. Through the Pastor's indisposition, the Rev. A. J. Terrill, Chairman of the District, preached the sermon and conducted the burial ceremony. From his text, taken from Romans 8:28, many were the words of soothing and comfort. The expressions of sympathy were very touching and sincere, and those who could not utter them in words were showing them in tears, and thus the fields full upon one of the saddest days of our history.

Mrs. Burtch leaves to mourn her loss a sorrowing husband, Mrs. Earl Howell (only daughter); Mrs. Arthur Dean (only sister); and a father, Mr. Geo. Richardson, and an only nephew, Clarence Lowry, of Toronto.

The flowers were beautiful and numerous and besides the family tokens, wreaths were sent by Mr. and Mrs. Dyer, of Toronto; Miss Pearl Hie, of Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. Scrimshaw, of Napanee, and spray by Mrs. S. Walmsley.

FOOTBALL

Napanee and Belleville.

On Saturday last the return game of football was played between Napanee Collegiate and Belleville Collegiate, and the result bodes well for the future of rugby in this district. One to see these two teams at play can hardly believe that this is only their second year for them in the game. If the teams continue to make the progress in the next two years that they have done in the last two they will compare favorably with some of the best Collegiate teams in the country.

The Belleville team was much heavier than Napanee and drew many expressions complimentary from the fans as they lined up on the field. A real modern football style, and a good deal of fear was felt that they were too much for the local squad. However, when the teams got in action the difference was seen to be more apparent than real. And what they lacked in weight the locals made up in speed and strategy. The game was not a machine-like exhibition, and for that reason, perhaps, there was more real interest to the spectator than at most other games. Fumbles were frequent on both sides, and these interjected an element of chance which gave the onlooker all the thrills he wanted. These breaks seemed to be pretty evenly divided, and the recoveries frequent so that the score was kept fairly even and the game was not broken until the final whistle sounded. And one of the finest plays of the day was in the last few minutes of the game when Napanee by a series of end runs and bucks advanced the ball from their own line to within twenty yards of the opponents' goal line. On the third down at this point a drop kick was attempted. It missed but a Napanee player who claimed the ball had been out "onside" by a Belleville player, raced for it, secured and carried it across for a touch. In the growing dusk it was not possible either for the referee or the spectators to see whether or not the ball had been put "onside". The decision was therefore reserved not to allow the touch but to give Napanee the "down" over again from the last line of scrimmage. They tried a back and failed to make the yards, thus losing the ball and the game by the score of 6-4.

Daly used good football judgment in calling the plays and had the line opened for him in the last two downs when owing to a slight delay he had the ball struck from his hands, the game might have ended differently. The line did not play consistently; at times they were all that could be desired, while at other times they were weak. Northmore played a spectacular game and made repeated gains, though his trick of leaping through the opponents' line, while spectacular, is risky.

Napanee back division was not up to standard, both Cowie and Perry making costly fumbles.

Napanee line-up was as follows:—Flying Wing, Lucas; Halves, Perry, Cowie and Killorin; Quarter, Daly; Snap, Gleeson; Insides, Cooke and Northmore; Middles, Frisken and Fennell; Outsides, Prout and Vanfastine.

CANADIAN ORDER OF FORESTERS.

A very enjoyable evening was spent in the Court Rooms of Court Lennox No. 78, Canadian Order of Foresters, on Friday, Nov. 16th.

Having partaken of a bounteous supper which was served at 7.30 p.m. the Brothers listened to the splendid musical selections rendered by the Black Orchestra, followed by the Male Quartette of Grace Methodist Church, Messrs. B. M. Black, C. A. Wiseman, E. Seymour and A. E. Paul, who gave two selections that were thoroughly enjoyed by all.

The chair was efficiently and effectively filled by our Financial Secretary, Bro. George Walters, one of vast experience in the affairs of High Court and one who is the best authority on all business transactions of Court Lennox. These qualifications, combined with his lucidity of expression, humorous remarks and genial smiles, contributed largely to the life and cheerfulness of the evening, and it was conceded by all that he was the right man in the right place.

Bro. Dr. Mahoney, of Ottawa, Organizer for the C. O. F., after giving two current solos, was asked to stand, shoulder to shoulder, in the ever faithful Forester, read in a clear voice and with an expressive manner the following address of appreciation to him.

Bro. Halpenny,

We, the members of Court Lennox, to-night desire to take this golden opportunity as we surround this festive board, to express our feelings of gratification with joy and gladness, to impress upon your mind and heart the magnitude of our friendship.

Sixteen years ago you visited our Court and the success you achieved at that time is still fresh in our memory. You seemed to instill life and vigor in our members, and the Brothers shared with you their tent and campfire in the forest of merry Sherwood, and not one of them ever had a word with you that was not cheering and pleasant. To-night, Brother Halpenny, words fail to express our pleasure in meeting with you again, and while the welcome news reached Napanee that you expected to visit our Court as an organizer, the word was passed from Brother to Brother, and all rejoiced at the glad tidings.

But you have returned to our Court at a time of business depression, assessments being raised, we were in the heat and fever of a by-election, mountains of difficulties in your path, but you sounded the call to arms and the walls fell like the battlements of Jericho. You were always to be found on duty, and if not in your place at the hotel, we found you on the job where duty called. Truly you have reaped and garnered for Court Lennox an abundant harvest.

Brother Halpenny, you are a man exceptionally well gifted in mind and heart, and we are proud to say one who is loved by all. On the Lord's sacred edifice, provincial by fact and territory that your motives of life are pure, you have set a noble example for the young men of our town and more especially to the newly initiated members.

And now upon the eve of your departure, we, on behalf of the Chief Ranger, officers, brothers of Court Lennox, with hearts overflowing with love and tenderness, present to you this golden pencil and fountain pen as a token of our esteem.

Please accept this gift and may you ever cherish it as a memento of your sojourn among us, may you long be spared to live, and be able to watch for Court Lennox as many applications there are drops of ink in the fountain.

Now as you leave us to-night may God bless you, and may the white-winged Angel of love and peace ever guide your footsteps and guard well your pathway.

Court Lennox No. 78, C.O.F.

The presentation was made by Bro. Chas. Loucks in his usual candid and genuine style and he was well chosen for marks befitting the occasion, formed the link that connected the gift with the address in a harmonious and beautiful manner.

The response from Bro. Halpenny was very touching, though stalwart of frame and magnificent of physique he became, at moment as a little child, and reminded us of the lines, "Speak not of grief until thou hast seen the tears of warlike men", but after he had calmed himself and wiped the tears from his eyes, he responded in a very pathetic manner that would have done credit to a cleric, and he spoke of that which we presented before death snatched the reins of life from his nerveless grasp.

The Toast to the King was proposed, and all Brothers joined in the response by heartly singing "God Save the King."

The Toast to the Canadian Order of Foresters was proposed and responded to by Bro. Alf. P. Vansomeren, Brantford, Ont., High Secretary of the Canadian Order of Foresters.

Bro. Vansomeren, who is considered the best posted Brother on all matters concerning Canadian Forestry, explained in a very scholarly manner the new rates for Class A members, which comes in force on January 1st, 1924, convincing the Brothers of that class the wisdom for the change of rates and urging them to retain their membership in the Order. His well chosen words were appreciated by all the members.

The community singing was enjoyed by all.

Brother A. E. Wiley, of Brantford, Ont., Superintendent of Organization, responded to the Toast of the Organization in a very able manner, stating it was always a pleasure to be present with the members of Court Lennox as they were such a good live working Court and always living up to the high standing that they had attained. His remarks were well chosen, witty and appreciated by all.

Bro. Canon J. W. Jones, Kingston, Ont., High Chaplain Canadian Order of Foresters, responded to the Toast of the Sisterhood, in a very creditable manner, showed himself to be a true Brother well chosen by the representatives at High Court to fill the office of High Chaplain.

The Brothers then opened the Court, conferred the Initiatory and Second Degree on the new members, making the total of fifteen new members during the stay of Bro. Halpenny.

The Court having closed, the Brothers departed to their homes in the small hours of the morning, after enjoying a pleasant evening.

THE VICTORIAN ORDER OF NURSES FOR CANADA NAPANEE BRANCH.

A large representative gathering met in the Town Hall, on the evening of November 9th, to discuss the advisability of forming a Branch Association of the above Order; and engaging a Victorian Nurse for service in Napanee.

Mayor MacGregor occupied the chair and after a short address, introduced the speaker of the evening, Miss Stevenson, of Ottawa, an Inspector of the Order.

Miss Stevenson explained in a delightful manner the Victorian Order of Nurses, stating that it was founded in 1897, by Lady Aberdeen as a National Memorial in commemoration of the Diamond Jubilee of Queen Victoria.

The speaker gave as the object of the Order, the supplying of nurses (thoroughly trained in Hospital and Public Health nursing) for the sick, for the prevention of diseases and for the promotion of health, and emphasized the fact that everyone is entitled to the nurse's services, the poor receiving first attention. Many are unable to pay the physician's orders.

Speeches were also made by Dr. Millsap, Dr. C. W. Gilbhard, Mr. W. S. Herrington, K.C., Mr. W. A. Graves, and Rev. W. R. Tanton, each giving their approval of the town engaging a Victorian Nurse.

The following resolution was then moved by Dr. Millsap, seconded by Mr. G. W. Gilbhard, and carried unanimously:—

That the meeting believe that it will be in the interest of the general health of the town, that a Public Health Nurse be engaged, who will be under the supervision of a local Branch of the Victorian Order of Nurses for Canada, to be formed.

A second resolution was moved by Mr. W. A. Graves, seconded by Mr. W. S. Herrington, that a Local Branch of the Victorian Order of Nurses for Canada, be organized in Napanee and that the following be provisional officers, and an Executive committee to effect the organization:

President—Mrs. F. F. Miller.

1st Vice-President—Mrs. W. H. Millsap.

Secretary—Mrs. Geo. Thompson.

Treasurer—Mr. P. Gleeson.

Rev. Father O'Connor, Rev. A. J. Terrill, Rev. A. J. Wilson, Rev. J. H. H. Coleman, Rev. W. R. Tanton, and the Captain of the Salvation Army, with power to add to their number.

This resolution was also carried.

The meeting closed with the singing of the National Anthem.

On the evening of Nov. 16th, the Executive Committee of the Napanee Branch of the Victorian Order of Nurses for Canada, met in the Public Library.

Rev. Father O'Connor, who occupied the chair, spoke briefly on the good to our town, especially the poor, in engaging a Victorian Nurse for service.

The officers, named at the former meeting, were made permanent for one year, with the exception of Treasurer, of Miss M. Leamy in place of Mr. P. Gleeson.

The subject of the Board of Education accepting the services of the Victorian Nurse engaged, was discussed, and the following resolution was moved by Rev. A. J. Wilson, seconded by Rev. W. Bridley, that the Napanee Branch of the Victorian Order of Nurses for Canada, having decided to employ a Victorian Nurse for service in the Town of Napanee, and the Local Branch of the Order, having made a canvas of the financial position; and having concluded that the scope of employment said nurse, could be financed.

Therefore be it resolved that the Board of Education be offered the services of said Nurse for the purpose of school inspection, said service to be considered to the Board of Education, to be without charge. Carried.

A full list of the officers and committee will be given later.

Things Are Pretty Quiet Has Nothing to Lament Over

He was a distant chemist in a big factory, and ambitious to succeed. His mother needed his help. There were younger children to be put through school and there were big interests of his own linked with a winsome coed he learned to love while at college.

Too long hours without proper rest; indifferent nourishment and especially the dust, the fumes and the flying particles of chemical matter, soon settled in his lungs, gradually broke down his health. An attack of the "Flu didn't help. He got so easily tired out and so weak at his work that some serious trouble was suspected.

Well, it turned out to be T.B. and now he is taking the cure at the Muskoka Hospital for Consumptives. The doctors say he will get better but he cannot go back to his former occupation. He smiles placidly and says he has nothing to lament over as new plans will have to be made, but the hospital is giving him back his health and that is the big thing. Contributions to aid Muskoka Hospital in its work may be sent to Hon. W. A. Charlton, 222 College Street Toronto.

LAW OF SALVAGE IS DESPERATE CODE

When one comes first in contact, and in dramatic circumstances, with the sea law of salvage, he probably feels, as Arnold Prince felt, that it is one of the most cold-blooded of codes. Mr. Prince's contact with salvage was in the case of the wrecked vessel, the Canadian Importer, in the Pacific, as he tells in the New York Tribune. He was aboard the Guggenheim ship, Cordova, Captain Carl V. Westerlund, returning from Hawaii, and some 800 miles off the Pacific coast, when one of the officers spied a speck, about fifteen miles distant which appeared to be acting in rather an eccentric manner. After considerable study the Captain came to the conclusion that it was a vessel in distress and the Cordova changed her course and headed for the distant speck. A rain squall came up and it appeared doubtful if the ship would ever be sighted, when suddenly she appeared a couple of hundred yards distant, and those on deck could make out her name.

In Desperate Straits.

The Importer was flying distress signals from masthead and rigging. One of them was the Canadian ensign upside down, and two others carried the initials "N. S.", which mean "We need immediate assistance." She was wallowing very low in the water and every time she rolled the gunwales along her waist went under. She was heavily loaded with lumber, and to the inexperienced eyes of the passengers on the Cordova it appeared that at any moment she was likely to go under. Through the glasses the expression on the faces of the crew could be plainly read. They were like those of men condemned to death so had suddenly been reprieved. Presently a man appeared on the bridge and some signals were exchanged, and then a boat was launched from the Importer and headed for the rescuer. In the boat, sitting upright, was Captain Bessett, clad in a Royal Naval Reserve uniform. He held the stump of a cigar between his teeth, a youthful man, smooth shaven.

A Terrible Experience.

The small boat came alongside, and a sea ladder was let down, up which climbed the captain, while the sailors stood in the little boat. The passengers on deck shouted encouragement to them, and they seemed to need it, for they had been through a terrible experience. They said that the ship had sprung a leak two weeks before that two of her holds and an engine room were flooded to a depth of twenty feet, that the windlass was out of commission and that the vessel had a list of 50 degrees. Loaded with lumber at Vancouver, she was bound for New Zealand, and since springing a leak had been out of control, and because of the derangement of her wireless had been unable to let her position be known to any other vessel. Some time before eleven members of the crew, which numbered forty-four in all, had put off in a small boat for land 800 miles away to bring help for the Importer. It may be noted here that this small boat made land after undergoing many hardships, some three weeks later, and a few hours after the Importer herself had been found.

Rescue Refused.

Captain Bessett walked silently through the ranks of the Cordova passengers and entered the cabin of the captain. A short time later with the cigar butt still in his mouth, he came on deck again, went down the ladder and was rowed away. There followed a clang of a bell and the Cordova was on her course. There was a buzz of comment among the passengers. Rushing to the captain they demanded to know why the Importer was being abandoned. The captain quietly explained that Captain Bessett had refused his help, that he had merely asked for the use of the wireless to communicate his position ashore, and that had gone back to risk his own life and the lives of his men on the battered Importer. It was explained that if he had accepted a tow, his ship would have been salvage, that ship and cargo were worth $2,000,000 and that, by the law of the sea, the vessel that rescued them would be entitled to some ten per cent. of the total value. That was sea law. The captain of the Cordova might have offered to do the job for less, but sea law forbade, and rather than rail upon his owners to pay, the man Bessett elected to risk his own life and the lives of his men. There was a happy ending to the adventure, because after a three weeks' search the Importer was found by vessels sent in search of her, and no doubt her captain was handsomely rewarded or at least let off with a mild rebuke for having permitted his ship to spring a leak.

Not Unusual.

Unusual? Not at all. This goes on all the time on all waters, and in the case of vessels leaving all ports, says Mr. Prince. Not long before the Importer was disabled another Canadian ship, the Princess Sophia was her name, went on the rocks in Alaskan waters. She was a passenger carrier and had several hundred persons on board. The skipper refused help, thinking the tide and the wind would float the vessel off the rocks. During the night a gale sprang up, and every figure being on board the Sophia, as well as the vessel itself, was lost. Then, of course, there was the "derelict" menace, they soothe the inflamed and irritated membranes of the bronchial tubes, the delicate cells of the air passages, and finally enter and carry relief and healing to the lungs.

TOWN COUNCIL

A special meeting of the Council was held in the Council Chamber on Monday night.

The members present were Councillors Burgess, Huffman, Perry and Tustin.

Mayor MacGregor presided.

A communication was read from the Capital Finance Co. of Canada, regarding a system of municipal accounting that they specialize in. Referred to Finance Committee.

P. Poulin & Co., Ltd., Commission Merchants, Montreal, advised the Council by letter that they would have a buyer here on Poultry Days. Replies were received from other Commission houses, but they were of the opinion that the date was too early.

The Chief of the Fire Department handed in the pay sheet for firemen's services for April. On motion the salaries were ordered paid.

The Market and Police Committee recommended that Coun. Hartman and Burgess be a committee to arrange and supervise the market on Poultry Days, and that three extra men be engaged to assist the Market Clerk on these days. Report was adopted.

Coun. Tustin thought Dundas St., from his observation of late, was not sufficiently lighted. People from other places coming into town at night remarked what a fine pavement we had, but a poorly lighted street—more or less like a dark alley when the stores were closed.

Coun. Tustin moved, seconded by Coun. Burgess, that the Clerk get an estimate from the Hydro Electric for the erection of a number of ornamental posts on Dundas St., and the cost of lighting same. Carried.

Roy Towle, manager and caretaker of the Town Hall, was notified to charge not less than $10.00 rent for the hall for one night, whether it was used for one hour or for four hours. This is in accordance with the by-law passed by the Council some time ago.

The following accounts were ordered paid :

D. B. Wilson, stove for town property ..... $ 17.25
Frank Kinkley, turning roofs of town buildings 42.50
Robt. Light, lumber 21.20
Robt. Light, wood and lumber 48.56
W. Schryver, use of horse, Fire Department 50.00

Accounts of Mrs. Vanluven for coal, Geo. Wright, Civil Engineer, Kingston, and the Hydro account, were referred to committees.

BASKETBALL

Napanee vs. Belleville.

On Saturday, Belleville journeyed to Napanee to play the final basketball game in the league. Both games were played in the Armouries and the citizens turned out in large numbers to witness the deciding game. It was recognized by the Napanee sports that the girls' basketball was a clean and lively game. The senior game was played first. Napanee's fast combination worked excellently and the ball was soon in the hands of Napanee's forwards and the first jump netted the locals a score of 12 to 4 in Napanee's favor. In the second period Belleville girls played up and netted 2 points to her score. In the last period Napanee was supreme. The Napanee centre was on hand to pass the ball to her forwards who made three goals in swift succession. The game ended in a score of 25 to 12 in Belleville's favor.

Miss Arnold, of Trenton, referred. After the game the N.C.I. girls served refreshments to the Belleville girls and boys. The result of the senior game gives the senior cup to Napanee. This cup, which has been donated by the Belleville Rotary Club, will be presented at the Commencement Exercises of the Napanee Collegiate Institute on Dec. 29th.

Jones was late again, as usual. When he strolled coolly into the office at 10.30 the "boss" was storming up and down.

"Do you know what time we begin work here?" he asked the late arrival with deep sarcasm.

Jones took off his coat and hat, hung them up and strolled across to his desk.

"No, sir. Can't say I do exactly," he replied, "but they're always at it when I get here."

Listen!

Have you heard about Peps? Peps is a scientific preparation put up in pastille form, which provides an entirely new and effective treatment for coughs, colds, chest and throat troubles.

Peps contain certain medicinal ingredients, which, when placed upon the tongue, immediately turn into vapor, and are breathed down the air passages to the lungs. In this way, they soothe the inflamed and irritated membranes of the bronchial tubes, the delicate cells of the air passages, and finally enter and carry relief and healing to the lungs.

In a word, what no liquid or solid can get to the lungs and air passages, these Peps fumes get to more direct, and at once commence healing.

FOUNDING OF TRINITY.

How Picturesque Toronto College Came Into Existence.

The present Trinity College at Toronto has a unique and varied history, which probably has something to do with the recent search for the elusive corner-stone, which was missing for so many weeks, and defied the most persistent efforts of those who diligently devoted every energy to locate it, finally turning up on the 22rd of May, on the right-hand side, to the east of the main entrance on the second buttress ground.

For the coming year or so Trinity will still be carried on as usual, when, at the close of an allotted period, the city of Toronto, which has become the purchasers, will take over the grounds and buildings, but it is not yet definitely known what they propose to do with them. The old school will be removed to the new site on Hoskin avenue, the corner-stone of which was laid on June 4, by the Right Rev. Archbishop Thornloe, of Algoma.

The early Trinity College was closely interwoven with political history, and many of its students have had remarkable careers and become public celebrities. Through the establishment of King's College (latter Toronto University) Trinity came into being. In 1797 His Majesty King George III., expressed his intention of gratifying the wishes of the Legislative Council and House of Assembly in their request for a university and grammar schools. In 1798 a suggestion was sent to President Russell recommending that land be secured for the purpose of erecting four district grammar schools and a university. In December of the same year the former were proceeded with but it was not until March 15, 1823, that the Royal Charter for the university was granted. This was to be called King's College and the Archdeacon of York. Dr. John Strachan, was appointed its first president. The governing body was to consist of a president, chancellor and seven professors. On June 8, 1843, the work of this college commenced.

As time passed many Anglicans, the bishop included, seemed to feel that the school would not always remain an Anglican training school as anticipated and eventually denominationalism would disappear. As a consequence, Revs. A. N. Bethune, H. J. Grasett and Henry Scadding met in conference to devise a means for Divinity students that might have a systematic course of instruction in theology before taking Holy Orders. A recommendation was finally submitted to establish a theological college in the diocese—the Anglicans must have a university of their own under the control of the church. Funds suffered for the execution of such were not immediately available and it was decided to announce a course of instructions in the ministry through the Anglican Press columns. This was done and thus was the beginning of the theological department of Trinity.

In 1849 King's College was changed to Toronto University and an ultimatum went forth to the effect that it would henceforth be a secular institution and in 1850 this decree went into force. In the interim, Dr. Strachan had not been idle and following this final decision, announced his intention of establishing the new university. He sailed for England with a petition containing many prominent names to be presented to the Queen with a request that a royal charter be granted for the incorporation of a college adhering to the Canon of England. This was not granted until two years later.

The turning of the first sod on the acquired site took place in 1851, on St. Patrick's Day, Bishop Strachan officiating and on April 20, 1857, the corner-stone of Trinity College was duly laid. A brass plate bore the inscription in Latin, "In the name of the Father and of the Holy Ghost, Amen." The Bishop of Toronto, Dr. Strachan, assisted officiating, Rev. George Delhanta MacKenzie became principal of the new school.

His Thro's Reasons.

A Scottish minister who was indefatigable in looking up his folk one day called upon a parishioner.

Softening Phonograph Tones.

Undesirable high tones, or "whistles," an annoyance commonly experienced in phonograph use, can be eliminated by the use of interference tubes. They consist of U-shaped metal appliances, designed to be incorporated in a main tube that is placed between the reproducer and tone-arm of a talking machine. According to the inventor, the arrangement of agitation of the sound waves causes certain of these to be considerably softened with but little loss in volume.

LAW OF SALVAGE IS DESPERATE CODE

When one comes first in contact, and in dramatic circumstances, with the sea law of salvage, he probably feels, as Arnold Prince felt, that it is one of the most cold-blooded of codes. Mr. Prince's contact with salvage was in the case of the wrecked vessel, the Canadian Importer, in the Pacific, as he tells in the New York Tribune. He was aboard the Gargenheim ship, Cordova, Captain Carl V. Westerlund, returning from Hawaii, and some 800 miles off the Pacific coast, when one of the officers spied a speck, about fifteen miles distant which appeared to be acting in rather an eccentric manner. After considerable study the Captain came to the conclusion that it was a vessel in distress and the Cordova changed her course and headed for the distant speck. A rain squall came up and it appeared doubtful if the ship would ever be sighted, when suddenly she appeared a couple of hundred yards distant, and those on deck could make out her name.

In Desperate Straits.

The Importer was flying distress signals from masthead and rigging. One of them was the Canadian ensign upside down, and two others carried the initials "N. S." which mean "We need immediate assistance." She was wallowing very low in the water and every time she rolled the gunwales along her waist went under. She was heavily loaded with lumber, and to the inexperienced eyes of the passengers on the Cordova it appeared that at any moment she was likely to go under. Through the glasses the expression on the faces of the crew could be plainly read. They were like those of men condemned to death and suddenly been reprieved. Presently a man appeared on the bridge and some signals were exchanged, and then a boat was launched from the Importer and headed for the rescuer. In the boat, sitting upright, was Captain Bessett, clad in a Royal Naval Reserve uniform. He held the stump of a cigar between his teeth, a youngish man, smooth shaven.

A Terrible Experience.

The small boat came alongside, and a rope ladder was let down, up which climbed the captain, while the sailors remained in the little boat. The passengers on deck shouted encouragement to them, and they seemed to need it, for they had been through a terrible experience. They said that the ship had sprung a leak two weeks before; that two of her holds and an engine room were flooded to a depth of twenty feet, that the wireless was out of commission and that the vessel had a list of 50 degrees. Loaded with lumber at Vancouver, she was bound for New Zealand, and since springing a leak had been out of control, and because of the derangement of her wireless had been unable to let her position be known to any other vessel. Some time before eleven members of the crew, which numbered forty-four in all, had put off in a small boat for land 800 miles away to bring help for the Importer. It may be noted here that this small boat made land after undergoing many hardships, some three weeks later, and a few hours after the Importer herself had been found.

Rescue Refused.

Captain Bessett walked silently through the ranks of the Cordova passengers and entered the cabin of the captain. A short time later with the cigar butt still in his mouth, he came on deck again, went down the ladder and was rowed away. There followed a clang of all bell and the Cordova was on her course. There was a sensation among the passengers. Rushing to the captain they demanded to know why the Importer was being abandoned. The captain quietly explained that Captain Bessett had refused his tow, that he had merely asked for the use of the wireless to communicate his position ashore, and then that some back of his ship would have been safe. Now that ship and contents were worth $2,000,000 and that, by the law of the sea, the vessel that rescued them would be entitled to some ten per cent. of the total value. That was sea law. The captain of the Cordova might have offered to do the job for less, but sea law forbade, and rather than call upon his owners to pay this sum Bessett elected to risk his own life and the lives of his men. There was a happy ending to the adventure, because after a three weeks' search the Importer was found by vessels sent in search of her, and no doubt her captain was handsomely rewarded for at least let off with a mild rebuke for having permitted his ship to spring a leak.

Not Unusual.

Unusual? Not at all. This goes on all the time on all waters, and in the case of vessels leaving all ports, says Mr. Prince. Not long before the Importer was disabled another Canadian ship, the Princess Sophia was her name, went on the rocks in Alaskan waters. She was a passenger carrier and had several hundred persons on board. The skipper refused help, thinking the tide the next day would float his vessel as the vessel itself, was lost. Then, of course, there was the Exporter, sister ship of the Importer. She refused aid for the same reason as did the Importer, and was pounded to pieces.

I said in the beginning that the officers of the Westerland displayed a certain amount of excitement when the Importer was sighted, and I indicated that this was caused by something in addition to their natural desire to be of assistance. This is true, and no greater windfall can come to the officers of a merchantman than to rescue a rich prize at sea.

The woman was rather condescending.

"My husband is very jealous," she remarked to her partner on the dance floor, "so I only dance with exceedingly plain people."

"It's a good plan," he returned calmly. "I follow it."

TOWN COUNCIL

A special meeting of the Council was held in the Council Chamber on Monday night.

The members present were Councillors Burgess, Huffman, Perry and Tustin.

Mayor MacGregor presided.

A communication was read from the Capital Finance Co. of Canada, regarding a system of municipal accounting that they specialize in. Referred to Finance Committee.

P. Poulin & Co., Ltd., Commission Merchants, Montreal, advised the Council by letter that they would have a buyer here on Poultry Days. Replies were received from other Commission houses, but they were of opinion that the date was too early.

The Chief of the Fire Department handed in the pay sheet for firemen's salaries for the year. On motion the salaries were ordered paid.

The Market and Police Committee recommended that Couns. Hartman and Burgess be a committee to arrange and supervise the market on Poultry Days, and that three extra men be engaged to assist the Market Clerk on these days. Report was adopted.

Coun. Tustin thought Dundas St., from his observation of late, was not sufficiently lighted. People from other places coming into town at night remarked what a fine pavement we had, but a poorly lighted street—more or less like a dark alley when the stores were closed.

Coun. Tustin moved, seconded by Coun. Burgess, that the Clerk get an estimate from the Hydro Electric for the erection of a number of ornamental posts on Dundas St., and the cost of lighting same. Carried.

Roy Fowle, manager and caretaker of the Town Hall, was notified to charge not less than $10.00 rent for the hall for one night, whether it was used for one hour or for four hours. This is in accordance with the by-law passed by the Council some time ago.

The following accounts were ordered paid:

D. B. Wilson, stove for town property	$ 17 25
Frank Kiakley, tarring roofs of town buildings	42 50
Rolls Light, lumber	24 20
Rabt. Light, wood and lumber	15 56
W. Schryver, use of horse for Fire Department	50 00

Accounts of Mrs. VanLuven for coal, Geo. Wright, Civil Engineer, Kingston, and the Hydro account, were referred to committees.

BASKETBALL

Napanee vs. Belleville.

On Saturday, Belleville journeyed to Napanee to play the final basketball games in the league. Both games were played in the Armories and the citizens turned out in large numbers to witness the decisive games. It was recognized by the sporting sports that the girls' basketball was the fast and lively game. The senior game was played first. Napanee's team showed excellent combination and ball work soon in the battle of Napanee's forwards and the first ten-minute period ended in a score of 12 to 4 in Napanee's favor. In the second period Belleville girls played up much better than in the first and the score at the end of this period was 22 to 12. The third period was a very fast one and the game ended in a score of 44 to 16, in Napanee's favor. The junior girls played next. Belleville's tall jumping centre soon batted the ball to her forwards, who quickly shot for the basket and the score at the end of the first period was 11 to 6 in Belleville's favor. In the second period Belleville added 6 points to her score. In the last period Napanee was gaining. The play centre was in hand to pass the ball to her forwards who made three goals in swift succession. The game ended in a score of 25 to 12 in Belleville's favor.

Miss Arnold, of Trenton, referred. After the game the N.C.I. girls served refreshments to the Belleville girls and boys. The final game of the senior game gives the senior cup to Napanee. This cup, which has been donated by the Belleville Rotary Club, will be presented at the Commencement Exercises of the Napanee Collegiate Institute on Dec. 20th.

Jones was late again, as usual. When he strolled coolly into the office at 10.30 the "boss" was storming up and down.

"Do you know what time we begin work here?" he asked the late arrival with deep sarcasm.

James took off his coat and hat, hung them up and strolled across to his desk.

"No, sir. Can't say I do exactly," he replied, "but they're always at it when I get here."

MOTHER OF TWIN BOYS

Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Relieved Her of Inflammation and Great Weakness

West St. John, N. B.—"I was in a general run-down condition following the birth of my twin boys. I had a great deal of inflammation, with pains and weakness. Finally my doctor recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. He said that your medicine would be the only thing to build me up. I am sure he is right, for I am feeling much better and am gaining in weight, having gone down to ninety-three pounds. I was in bed for over a month, but am up again now. I have recommended the Vegetable Compound to my friends and give you permission to use my letter."—Mrs. ELMER A. RITCHIE, 82 Rodney St., West St. John, N. B.

There are many women who find their household duties almost unbearable owing to some weakness or derangement. The trouble may be slight, yet cause such annoying symptoms as dragging pains, weakness and a run-down feeling.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a splendid medicine for such conditions. It has in many cases relieved those symptoms by removing the cause of them. Mrs. Ritchie's experience is but one of many.

WORLD'S DEBT TO SCIENTISTS.

Perils Dared to Add to the Sum of Human Knowledge.

In the early days of maritime ventures and discovery these ventures would only be undertaken under the lure of gold, the acquisition of valuable new lands and of subjects whose toil and labor, under the lash of the brutal taskmaster, would result in the accumulation of wealth for others. Adventurers there were aplenty ready to risk their lives in the most desperate undertakings. They were brave and reckless, impelled by a strange yearning which is not absent to-day.

In these days, however, men still venture forth in quest of discovery, daring everything, risking everything, not seeking wealth, but venturing for the pure love of adventure and to do something which no other has done before. What the world owes to these men who go forth because they cannot stay at home, whom peril beckons and toil fascinates, and who look upon death in the quest as a mere incident, if not preferable to dying quietly in bed, can never be estimated.

Men dare for science and not for gold. Men endure all sorts of hardships and perils in order to add their mite to the sum of human knowledge, hoping that some time in the future, in some way unknown to them, the world at large may benefit and humanity be blessed. If there are men who thus will dare, there are also those who will provide the funds, and for the pure love or encouraging research that may be of value to mankind. If the explorers do not expect to obtain any special rewards, neither do those who put up the finances. It is largely a matter of service, in which each one does his part in the most fitting way and in accordance with ability of each to do so according to the talent in his possession.

Long Disused, But Not Dead.

Every person is a walking museum, a living volume of the history of the world.

Stand before a mirror and raise the top lid of one eye. At its corner you will see a little fold of skin, which cannot possibly serve any useful purpose. It did once, though, for it is all that is left of a semi-transparent third eyelid, such as birds and reptiles possess, which could be lowered as a protector when our remote ancestors were passing through dense undergrowth.

And whilst you are at the mirror look at your ears. Just over the entrance of each is a little pointed flap, which can be made to close the ear if it is pressed backward with the finger. This was once a regular ear-shield, useful as a protector in sand or dust storms, or when its owner took to the water.

A few people can still move their ears. Each of us possesses the muscles whose duty it was two thousand years ago to turn them in the direction of sounds, or to wag them when flies were troublesome. Though almost to tiny remnants though long disuse, these muscles remain.

The Ordeal of Water.

France occasionally harks back to the middle ages, as recently when a justice of an inferior court allowed the old ordeal of water to decide a case. It appears that the case was that of a dye company against which charges were brought by the prefect of the department with a society of fishermen joining action to prevent the company emptying coloring matter into public streams. They received 5,000 francs for damages done to fishing. Counsel for the defence, in summing up, declared the water near the mouth of the company's drain was not harmful to fish and asked to make a demonstration. "If the fish die it will be a sort of judgment of God rendered from the middle ages, and we will have lost our case," he stated. A bucket of healthy fish was then procured to the judge, who placed them in a bowl of alleged contaminated water. In less than two hours all the fish had died. Scientific American.

Devil.

His Majesty the Devil is described as a real personality, cunning and enticing, rather than as a "principle of evil." This description is by Dr. J.W. Lawrence, preaching in Chattanooga. He thinks Satan has the power of masquerading as "an angel of light." Accepting this explanation, one would be apt to ponder that Satan has his whole family—and a large one—at work among us.

Man is chivalrous, since he has never suggested that Satan may be feminine. It's male acknowledgement of woman's superiority.

Carried It Too Far.

Some one asked Prof. Steinach of Vienna, whose rejuvenation experiments are widely known, if there wasn't considerable danger in the process. "Of course, the thing can be overdone," he replied with a smile. "I am told that a woman met a friend of hers on the street wheeling a perambulator in which sat a chubby infant. 'I did not know you had a baby,' said the first woman in surprise. 'I haven't,' replied the other despondently. 'This is my husband—he has been to Dr. Steinach.'"—Boston Transcript.

Moth Investigation.

Work on the biology of clothes' moths as affecting the brush and fabric industries is the subject of one of the investigations of the Bureau of Entomology of the United States Department of Agriculture. Valuable information has been obtained. An additional service in this regard has been the co-operation with the army and navy by furnishing information regarding the susceptibility of various fabrics to moth attack.

Gets Third Set of Teeth.

An 83-year-old woman of Brighton, England, is cutting her third set of teeth. Her other two were extracted some years ago and replaced by an artificial set. Now, twelve new ones have made their appearance.

"Who is the most popular man in Crimson Gulch?"

"Cactus Joe. He was unanimously elected Sheriff."

"Is he now holding office?"

"No. He refused. He said he'd rather go on bein' popular."

BUMBLE BEES AS BUILDERS.

Some Burrowing Bees Make Nests In Thatched Roofs.

Most people probably group all wild bees under the heading of "bumbles," and make no further distinction; but in the country alone there are dozens of different kinds, each of which has its own particular ways.

If you examine a handful of clippings from a rose bush you are almost certain to find that one or two of them have been made into tubes. An insect has eaten away the pith in the middle, leaving a hole that will just about admit a knitting needle. Tiny as these holes are, they are the burrows of a bee, a queer little fellow, almost black in color and no larger than a house-fly.

The mother bee gnaws a hole through the bark of the rose twig, and digs down until she comes to the soft central pith. Then she tunnels, often for several inches. At the far end of her burrow she builds a cell, laying in it a single egg, and filling it almost to the top with yellow pollen to serve as food for the grub which will shortly be born. Other cells follow until the tunnel is full; then she seals a fresh twig and begins work anew.

Some burrowing bees make their nests in the straws of thatched roofs, while others dig holes in the ground below flat stones, which act as shelters from the rain. But perhaps the queerest place ever chosen was the macaroni lying in a grocer's warehouse! The bees found tunnels ready for them, and thousands of them had made nurseries of the hollow sticks before their presence was discovered by the grocer.

A cousin of theirs does not burrow, but goes in search of empty snail shells, in each of which it places a group of pollen-filled cells.

Using their powerful jaws, most of the earth diggers can excavate even the hardest and most stony soil. Some have a preference for gravel paths, in which they dig holes sometimes a foot deep.

Another bee is called the spokeshaver, owing to the fact that it uses its jaws just as the wheelwright uses the tool of that name. It burrows into the softest parts of dead or dying trees, making a long tunnel about a quarter of an inch in diameter. It lines this burrow with fine down from the stems of various plants. It alights on some plant with a woolly stalk, then opens its jaws and lays them on the stem. Next it runs quickly up the stalk, shaving off a long down-covered strip, which curls up like a shaving.

The mason bee makes its holes in old walls; you will hardly find a wall containing crevices that has not a colony of these little yellow insects, who may be seen busily popping in and out of their tunnels.

The carpenter bee, black in color with purplish wings, drills into sound wood. When she has made a tunnel several inches in length she lays an egg and places a supply of food beside it. Then she chews into tiny fragments some of the chips she has made whilst burrowing, and makes a hard cement. With this she builds a partition across the tube, completely walling in the egg. Another egg and another partition follow until the tube is filled. Then she seals it up.

What is going to happen when the grubs that hatch from the eggs turn into young bees? You might imagine that the lowest egg, being the first laid, would produce a bee before the others, and that the insect would have to eat its way through all the other cells, probably destroying their occupants.

But the bee knows what she is about. The upper cells all produce male bees, which come to maturity at the same time. The occupants of the lower cells are not ready to emerge until ten days later, for they are females, which take longer to develop.

Forged In 1300 B.C.

Some French engineers have just been entrusted with the chemical analysis of an axe brought back from Salonica where it was found in a tomb.

From a study of the ground in which the axe lay scholars have made sure that it dates back to 1300 B.C., and our knowledge of the Macedonian people of that time is very scanty. The question the experts set themselves to answer was whether the axe belongs to the Copper Age or to the more recent Age of Brass; and, examining a piece of the metal with the microscope and by electrical analysis, they were able to show that the metal of the axe is 96 per cent. copper, with some arsenic and very small proportions of tin, lead iron, and traces of silver, and that the axe was made from metal that had been cast and forged.

The result of its chemical analysis shows us the value of modern science in throwing light on the ancient world.

The Wild Boy of Hanover.

In the year 1725 a boy was caught in the woods near Hanover, living wild. He proved to be imbecile, and the story of his capture, and unknown parentage, aroused the interest of King George I., who commanded that he should be brought to England. He became known as Peter the Wild Boy, and excited such interest in London that the craze was bitterly satirized by Swift. Lord Monboddo saw the boy in 1782 and used the remarkable story to illustrate the theory of the evolution of the human race.

Safety Pins.

Safety pins were much more necessary to ancients than to people of to-day because in those days buttons were unknown. Etruscans inhabited Italy before the Romans arrived in that country. It may be that they invented the safety pin, but the Romans first developed it. They did so in a way beyond anything known to-day. It was improved to such an extent that the part in which the pin point fitted was a receptacle for a corsage bouquet of flowers.

A State Government lecturer was appointed, whose principal work was to lecture on the evils of kissing. He held meetings all over the States, and in a very short time was able to announce that he had secured the assistance of 2,000 mothers, who had become anti-kissers so far as their babies were concerned.

At one time it was proposed to make baby-kissing a criminal offence.

MOTHER OF TWIN BOYS

Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Relieved Her of Inflammation and Great Weakness

West St. John, N.B.— "I was in a general run-down condition following the birth of my twin boys. I had a great deal of inflammation, with pains and weakness. Finally my doctor recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. He said that your medicine would be the only thing to build me up. I am sure he is right, for I am feeling much better and am gaining in weight, having gone down to ninety-three pounds. I was in bed for over a month, but am up again now. I have recommended the Vegetable Compound to my friends and give you permission to use my letter." —Mrs. ELMER A. RITCHIE, 82 Rodney St., West St. John, N. B.

There are many women who find their household duties almost unbearable owing to some weakness or derangement. The trouble may be slight, yet cause such annoying symptoms as dragging pains, weakness and a run-down feeling.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a splendid medicine for such conditions. It has in many cases relieved those symptoms by removing the cause of them. Mrs. Ritchie's experience is but one of many.

WORLD'S DEBT TO SCIENTISTS.

Perils Dared to Add to the Sum of Human Knowledge.

In the early days of maritime ventures and discovery these ventures would only be undertaken under the lure of gold, the acquisition of valuable new lands and of subjects whose toil and labor, under the lash of the brutal taskmaster, would result in the accumulation of wealth for others. Adventurers there were aplenty ready to risk their lives in the most desperate undertakings. They were brave and reckless, impelled by a strange yearning which is not absent to-day.

In these days, however, men still venture forth in quest of discovery, daring everything, risking everything, not seeking wealth, but venturing for the pure love of adventure and to do something which no other has done before. What the world owes to these men who go forth because they cannot stay at home, whom peril beckons and toil fascinates, and who look upon death in the quest as a mere incident, if not preferable to dying quietly in bed, can never be estimated.

Men dare for science and not for gold. Men endure all sorts of hardships and perils in order to add their mite to the sum of human knowledge, hoping that some time in the future, in some way unknown to them, the world at large may benefit and humanity be blessed. If there are men who thus will dare, there are also those who will provide the funds, and for the pure love or encouraging research s that may be of value to mankind. If the explorers do not expect to obtain any special rewards, neither do those who put up the finances. It is largely a matter of service, in which each one does his part in the most fitting way and in accordance with ability of each to do so according to the talent in his possession.

Long Disused, But Not Dead.

Every person is a walking museum, a living volume of the history of the world.

Stand before a mirror and raise the top lid of one eye. At its corner you will see a little fold of skin, which cannot possibly serve any useful purpose. It did once, though, for it is all that is left of a semi-transparent third eyelid, such as birds and reptiles possess, which could be lowered as a protector when our remote ancestors were passing through dense undergrowth.

And while you are at the mirror look at your ears. Just over the entrance of each is a little pointed flap, which can be made to close the ear if it is pressed backward with the finger. This was once a regular ear-shield, useful as a protector in sand or dust storms, or when its owner took to the water.

A few people can still move their ears. Each of us possesses the muscles whose duty it was two thousand years ago to turn them in the direction of sounds, or to wag them when flies were troublesome. Though shrunk to tiny remnants through long disuse, these muscles remain.

TIME THE ONLY TEST.

A youngster visiting his indulgent aunt partook heartily of cake and preserves. "When asked if he hadn't had all that was good for him, he replied that he didn't know.

"But what do you think?" "Why, I don't see any use thinkin'."

"Well, you're a funny boy," said his aunt. "When will you know?"

"In half an hour."

"And how will you know?"

"Well, that's easy. If I ain't sick a half an hour I'll be sorry I didn't take more, and if I'm sick I'll be sorry I took so much. That's the only way to tell that I know of.

SEEKING EXPERIENCE.

The girl was very rich, and the young man was poor. She liked him, but that was all, and he knew it.

"You are very wealthy," he remarked.

"Yes," she replied, frankly. "I'm worth a half million dollars."

"And I am poor," he continued.

"Yes," she asserted.

"Will you marry me?" he asked.

"No," with emphasis.

"I thought you wouldn't," he said. "Then why did you ask me?"

"Oh, just to see how a man feels when he loses a half million."

MISJUDGED.

Mr. Jones was at a dinner party. He was extremely shy and nervous, and never could summon up courage to speak because he felt his inability to say anything neat.

All the evening he had been trying to think of something nice to say to his hostess. At last he thought he saw his chance.

"What a small appetite you have, Mrs. Jones!" she remarked with a smile.

"To sit next to you!" he remarked gallantly, "would cause any man to lose his appetite."

And now he wonders why he is never asked to the house again.

"When is that painter coming to do your house?"

"Always to-morrow. I think he's one of those Futurists we hear about."

NOTHING THE MATTER WITH CANADA!

To those who are having their confidence in Canada shaken by blue ruin stories that are now making the rounds of certain newspapers it would be well if these doubters studied the trade situation with some degree of care and understanding. First of all let it be said that Canada holds fourth place among the countries of the world in actual volume of exports, and in proportion of exports to population this country occupies first place. For the twelve months ending June, 1923, the Dominion was a world trader to the value of $1,844,000,000, whereas the world trade of the United States during the same twelve months amounted to $7,738,000,000. Or to put it another way, while our population is roughly one twelfth that of the United States our foreign trade is almost one-quarter that of the United States. In a word we are per capita the largest foreign traders in the world. That does not look as if we are headed straight for the pawnbrokers.

The total agricultural investment in Canada (1921) amounted to $6,831,000,000, while the amount represented in manufacturing amounted to $3,230,000,000, a grand total of well upward of ten billions of dollars, an investment much over $1,000 for every man, woman and child in the country. This does not look as if we were quite broke, does it?

Men's Coat Sweaters at a reasonable price the Commercial men tell us are very scarce. This week we were fortunate in picking up a few dozen at exceptional prices. One line particularly at $4.75, is an extra sightly garment and of Pure Wool. It is really worth $6.00.

Our cheaper lines, for everyday use around home, are mixed with cotton, but will give good satisfaction. Prices $2.00 and $3.00.

A FEW OF THOSE CHILDREN'S OVERCOAT BARGAINS AT $5.00 ARE STILL TO BE SOLD.

Sizes for 2½ to 7 years. Some made from good Ulster Cloths, but most of them Blue Chinchilla. Remember this price is below market value, and it would be hard for you to buy the materials and trimmings at the price we are charging for the Coat complete.

Nothing in the market to-day can better these coats at the price. They are well made from home-cloths, and are right up to the minute in style and finish. We have had to replenish our stock several times.

GOOD BUSINESS.

The other day a stranger entered the Indiana National Bank and asked to borrow $5. He was told that the bank did not lend such small sums.

"But," he went on, "lending money is your business, isn't it?"

The banker admitted that it was.

"Well, I have good security," said the stranger, "and I want to borrow $5."

Finally the banker, half from fatigue and half from amused curiosity, agreed to make the loan. When the note was all drawn and the interest of 25 cents paid, the stranger drew from his pocket $10,000 worth of Government bonds and handed them over as security. Before the banker could express his astonishment the stranger said:—

"Now, this is something like it. Over at this other bank they wanted me to pay $10 just for a safety deposit box to keep these things in!"

NO DECOLLETE FOR SHAW.

According to Frank Harris, G. B. S. is notoriously negligent in the matter of sartorial requirements, and on one occasion he had an encounter with a theatre manager who refused to let him sit in the stalls on account of his dress. Shaw immediately began to take off his coat.

"No, no!" cried the manager. "I mean you must be dressed like the other people."

The playwright's glance took in the rows of half-dressed women, then turning to the manager he exclaimed: "If you think I am going to take off my shirt in order to be like the persons you are mistaken." And he stalked out of the theatre.

"You don't love me any more; you don't even tell me that I make you sick."

"We like the cockney version better; 'You dahn't knock me abaht'".

One trouble with putting speeders in jail is that they lose so much time which they have to make up when they get out.

IN MEMORIAM.

In loving memory of our dear mother, Alice Ballance, who died Nov. 20th, 1922.

It's sweet to know we'll meet again,
Where parting is no more;
And that the one we loved so well,
Has only gone before.

Sadly missed by son and daughter and families.

Mason on Friday.—Stephen Yates and family motored to Napanee on Friday.

ARDEN

We have had fine weather the past week. The nights have been quite cool, but during the day it was warm.

The hunters have all returned home from the north country with their share of deer. Mr. Adam Akey had great luck in shooting a will.

Mr. John Scott and family have moved into their new home in the village from the farm.

Mrs. D. E. Wesse, of Kaladar, spent Monday evening attending I. O. R. A. here.—Mr. J. J. Post, of Smith's Falls, spent Tuesday evening here attending Masonic lodge.—Mr. Ed. Hartwick motored home from Smith's Falls on Sunday and returned again on Tuesday by train.

Osborne entertained a number of relatives in honor of the bride and groom, Mr. and Mrs. C. Osborne, who were spending their honeymoon with the groom's parents.

TIME THE ONLY TEST.

A youngster visiting his indulgent aunt partook heartily of cake and preserves. When asked if he hadn't had all that was good for him, he replied that he didn't know.

"But what do you think?"

"Ain't any use thinkin'."

"Well, you're a funny boy," said his aunt. "When will you know?"

"In half an hour."

"And how will you know?"

"Well, that's easy. If I ain't sick in half an hour I'll be sorry I didn't take more, and if I'm sick I'll be sorry I took so much. That's the only way to tell that I know of.

SEEING EXPERIENCE.

The girl was very rich, and the young man was poor. She liked him, but that was all, and he knew it.

"You are very wealthy," he remarked.

"Yes," she replied, frankly, "I'm worth a half million dollars."

"And I am poor," he continued.

"Yes," she asserted.

"Will you marry me?" he asked.

"No," with emphasis.

"I thought you wouldn't," he said. "Then why did you ask me?"

"Oh, just to see how a man feels when he loses a half million."

MISJUDGED.

Mr. Jones was at a dinner party. He was extremely shy and nervous, and never could summon up courage to speak because he felt his inability to say anything neat.

All the evening he had been trying to think of something nice to say to his hostess. At last he thought he saw his chance.

"What a small appetite you have, Mr. Jones!" she remarked with a smile.

"To sit next to you," he remarked gallantly, "would cause any man to lose his appetite."

And now he wonders why he is never asked to the house again.

"When is that painter coming to do your house?"

"Always to-morrow. I think he's one of those Futurists we hear about."

"How's your garden getting along, old man?"

"Well, if the green things coming up are vegetables, it's fine; but if they're weeds it's terrible."

GOOD BUSINESS.

The other day a stranger entered the Indiana National Bank and asked to borrow $5. He was told that the bank did not lend such small sums.

"But," he went on, "lending money is your business, isn't it?"

The banker admitted that it was.

"Well, I have good security," said the stranger, "and I want to borrow $5."

Finally the banker, half from fatigue and half from amused curiosity, agreed to make the loan. When the note was all drawn and the interest of 35 cents paid, the stranger drew from his pocket $10,000 worth of Government bonds and handed them over as security. Before the banker could express his astonishment the stranger said :—

"Now, this is something like it. Over at this other bank they wanted me to pay $10 just for a safety deposit box to keep these things in!"

NO DECOLLETE FOR SHAW.

According to Frank Harris, G. B. S. is notoriously negligent in the matter of sartorial requirements, and on one occasion he had an encounter with a theatre manager who refused to let him sit in the stalls on account of his dress. Shaw immediately began to take off his coat.

"No, no!" cried the manager. "I mean you must be dressed like the other people."

The playwright's glance took in the rows of half-dressed women, then turning to the manager he exclaimed: "If you think I am going to take off my shirt in order to be like your patrons you are mistaken." And he stalked out of the theatre.

"You don't love me any more; you don't even tell me that I make you sick."

"You dahn't know me ahahn."

NOTHING THE MATTER WITH CANADA!

To those who are having their confidence in Canada shaken by blue ruin stories that are now making the rounds of certain newspapers it would be well if these doubters studied the trade situation with some degree of care and understanding. First of all let it be said that Canada holds fourth place among the countries of the world in actual volume of exports, and in proportion of exports to population this country occupies first place. For the twelve months ending June, 1923, the Dominion was a world trader to the value of $1,844,000,000, whereas the world trade of the United States during the same twelve months amounted to $7,735,000,000. Or to put it another way, while our population is roughly one twelfth that of the United States our foreign trade is almost one-quarter that of the United States. In a word we are per capita the largest foreign traders in the world. That does not look as if we are headed straight for the pawnbrokers.

The total agricultural investment in Canada (1921) amounted to $6,831,000,000, while the amount represented in manufacturing amounted to $3,230,000,000, a grand total of well upward of ten billions of dollars, an investment much over $1,000 for every man, woman and child in the country. This does not look as if we were quite broke, does it?

OBITUARY

Elmer Bradshaw.

At the Homeopathic Hospital, Montreal, on Sunday, November 11th, 1923, death hovered round and claimed a young life in the person of Elmer Bradshaw. Elmer was born on Sept. 2nd, 1888, and spent most of his young life in and around Napanee, excepting about eight years in Winnipeg and two in Montreal. About two weeks ago he was taken ill with pneumonia, and everything that loving hands and the best medical skill could do was done, but of no avail, and he passed into rest on Sunday night. Elmer was a pleasant, lovable young man, and wherever he went he made a host of warm friends who are sorry at the death of one so young.

While in Winnipeg he met and married Jean Campbell, who with three small children, Willie, Iris and Marjorie, mourn the loss of a loving and devoted husband and father. His mother, Mrs. M. Bradshaw, Selby, also survives; two sisters, Patience at Montreal; Mrs. R. McFarland, Napanee, and four brothers, Ernest and Jeff, Napanee, and Crossley and Clarence, of Selby, survive. His father predeceased him last April.

The remains were taken to his mother's home at Selby, and the funeral services were conducted by Rev. Mr. Terrell, in the absence through illness of the Rev. Mr. Anderson, and then conveyed to Napanee and laid to rest in Riverview Cemetery. The floral offerings were numerous and beautiful, showing the high esteem in which he was held.

OUR PRICELESS HERITAGE.

As announced last week, Mr. John P. Dunn, Supreme Agent of the Knights of Columbus, delivered an eloquent and inspiring address in St. Patrick's Parish Hall last Thursday on the sublime and important subject, "Our Priceless Heritage".

While in Napanee Mr. Dunn was the guest of the Rev. Father O'Connor, an old friend and acquaintance of many years. The compliment paid the Rev. Pastor by the visit of Mr. Dunn was indirectly the occasion of the greatest treat of eloquence and inspiring truths ever delivered in the Parish Hall, and rarely heard outside of it. Mr. Dunn has given himself, with unstinted dedication, to the cause of the Christian formation of character among his fellow men. In his address, of an hour, in choice and eloquent language he emphasized the fact that the sincere Christian man or woman must have the essential points of a Christian life brought frequently to mind in order to avoid the unhappy results found existing in the world from the contrary principles of a materialistic and unchristian world. To transform individual man from something material and earthly into something supernatural was his slogan. For this reason he appealed to the supreme law of God, which taught us the love of God and the love of our neighbor.

During his beautiful discourse Mr. Dunn frequently delighted his audience with humorous anecdotes and stories, all applicable to the subject in hand. The charming and pleasing personality of Mr. Dunn has left a pleasing and lasting impression on all who had the privilege of hearing him. He has promised to come again, and will be pleased to give an address on any subject chosen for him, and an unanimous decision has been arrived at to keep him to his promise. The following is a motto that he would like all to follow, and which appealed to the writer:

Without haste; without rest:
Bind this motto to thy breast;
Bear it with thee as a spell,
Storm or sunshine, guard it well!
Haste not! Let no thoughtless deed
Mar for aye the spirit's speed!
Ponder well and know the right,
Onward then, with all thy might.
Rest not! Life is sweeping by,
Go and dare, before you die;
Something mighty and sublime
Leave behind to conquer time!
Haste not! Rest not! Calmly wait!
Meekly bear the storm of fate!
Duty to thy polar guide,
Do the right whate'er betide!

STRATHCONA

The inhabitants of this burg are enjoying the beautiful fall weather we are having, although a few are under the weather. — The Mission Circle concert, held in the hall on Friday evening last, was a success, but, on account of the fever, a few were afraid to venture forth. The "eats" provided by the ladies were exceptionally good.—Mr. Rowland Cooper, an aged resident of this vicinity, is on the sick list at time of writing.—Mr. Jack Milner returned from the hunting grounds last week with a fine deer.—Mr. Scott MacDonald, of Ottawa, spent the Thanksgiving week-end visiting at the home of Mr. James Wilson.

Mrs. F. Best has been visiting friends in Morven recently.—Miss Kathleen Wilson left for Toronto on Saturday last, where she will train for a nurse. She will be greatly missed in Strathcona.—Mr. Wilfred and Miss Ruth Wilson motored to Kingston on Saturday.—Miss McDiarmid, of Queen's, spent Sunday with Miss R. Wilson.—A new boiler house is being erected at the mill. This, when completed, means more power and greater accomplishment in paper making.—Rev. T. H. P. Anderson, of Selby, occupied the pulpit in the Methodist Church on Sunday and preached an inspiring sermon.—There will be no preaching service next Sunday. Sunday School at 2 p.m. Some folk think Sunday School is just for children. Let such read Luke 18, verse 17.

CANON J. W. JONES MEETS WITH ACCIDENT.

Canon J. W. Jones, clerical secretary of the Ontario diocese, had a narrow escape from what might have been a more serious accident when he was knocked off his bicycle at the corner of Brock and Bagot streets, Kingston, Monday morning and rendered unconscious. He was proceeding down Brock street and in avoiding a collision with two automobiles that were passing at the intersection of the streets, he ran into the sidewalk, or was pushed to the sidewalk by a car. He fell, landing on his head, and a passerby picked him up and carried him into Guess' livery stable where he was revived. His bicycle was smashed.

Canon Jones was shaken up severely, besides being cut on the mouth and suffering a fracture of a small bone in the left wrist. He went to his office when he recovered sufficiently to walk.

SIR JOHN MACDONALD'S WONDERFUL PREDICTION

It is tolerably clear that in 1865 there was in Britain no political leader of vision equal to that of Sir John Macdonald as he revealed himself in his speech introducing the Act of Confederation before the Legislature of United Canada. He dwelt not only on the advantages to this country but to Great Britain of the proposed arrangement. He declared that the whole colonial system was in a state of transition, and continued : "Instead of looking upon us as a merely dependent colony, England will have in us a friendly nation—a subordinate but still a powerful people—to stand by her in North America in peace or in war. The people of Australia will be such another subordinate nation. And England will have this advantage, if her colonies progress under the new colonial system, as I believe they will, that, though at war with all the rest of the world, she will be able to look to the subordinate nations in alliance with her, and owning allegiance to the same sovereign, who will assist in enabling her to meet the whole world in arms."

Fifty years later the prophetic sense of Macdonald was verified on the fields of France and Flanders.

DOG MEAT FOR STEWS

Latest Delicacy in Berlin Butcher Shops. — Thieves Reap Harvest Picking Stray Animals Off City Streets. — Butter Beyond Reach of Any Except Tourists and Wealthy.

Berlin, Nov. 17.—Dog meat prices were quoted in some Berlin wholesale meat markets to-day. For weeks a gang of thieves has been systematically picking up every stray pet in the Berlin streets and selling them to butchers for sausages and stews, several cases even selling the dogs in sausage form to their original owners—during to-day the butchers are openly offering dog meat for stews.

Dog meat is now entirely beyond the means of everyone except a few tourists and very rich Germans, but is avidly sought by professional purgatines which is made purely from oils that are a by-product of coke production.

Bread prices are almost out of reach. Bread supposed to have been made of rye flour from contraband is now said apparently some sawdust as in Russian times.

The sovereign bankrupt is lucky to be able to buy enough food to make both ends meet.

The Reichsbank presses which have been turning out worthless paper money at an ever-increasing pace since the war, stopped, yesterday. There will be no more paper marks printed.

In their place the Government is providing a fresh issue of rentenmarks, the first of which were given out yesterday. The primary issue will be 600,000,000 with another 600,000,000 soon to follow.

NEW LAMP BURNS 94 PER CENT AIR

BEATS ELECTRIC OR GAS

A new 3l lamp that gives an unusually brilliant, soft white light, even better than gas or electricity, has been perfected by U.S. Government and 58 leading universities and found to be superior to 10 ordinary oil lamps. It burns without odor, smoke or noise—no pumping up. Simple, clean, safe. Burns 94 per cent air and 6 per cent common kerosene (coal oil).

The inventor, O. W. Johnson, 246 Craig St. W., Montreal, is offering to give a lamp absolutely FREE that, or even to place one FREE to the first user in each locality where lamps are sold. Write him to-day for full particulars. Also ask him to tell you how you can get the agency and without experience or money make $250 to $500 per month. 39-9t

USED TO BOB THE HAIR OF FEMALE convicts

Practice Stopped Years Ago by Order of the Department of Justice.

It appears that a rather barbarous practice was stopped in the Penitentiary some years ago by a number of years ago by a good-hearted warden who did not like bobbed hair. Up to that time the inmates of the federal female prison were the only flappers of the bobbed-hair variety on the scene. When a young woman was admitted to the prison she had to submit to the cutting off of her locks, a custom that had been always observed but for which there was no legal authority.

In 1899 a beautiful young woman was convicted in British Columbia of manslaughter and sentenced to five years' imprisonment. She had been tried on the charge of murdering her husband, but the jury brought in a verdict of manslaughter. She was transferred to Portsmouth prison to serve her sentence, and upon her admission she refused to submit to the cutting of her hair. She defied the matrons and demanded to see the warden. The matron reported the affair to the warden who happened to be an official sent down from Ottawa to fill the position in an emergency. He was a man of very fastidious views. Upon hearing the matron's story about the new arrival refusing to have her hair cut off, he asked to have her brought to his office, which was done.

The young woman convict was of striking appearance. Her hair was piled up on her head, a perfect crown of hair. It was jet black and glossy. She had beautiful black eyes, a perfect complexion and pleasing figure.

"I refused to have my hair cut," she said, "and I am not going to submit to it. It has been a practice you have no right to do it. I want the order suspended until I can write to the Minister of Justice and to my lawyer."

The warden replied that he did not give any order for the cutting of her hair and he did not know who did, but he would refer the matter to the Minister of Justice himself, and in the meantime, her hair would not be cut.

A report was sent to Ottawa forthwith, in which it was pointed out that there was no regulation and no statutory authority for cutting women's hair. It has been a practice carried on for forty years or more but it had never been sanctioned by statute or regulation. So after some delay order was sent out from Ottawa to the effect that the young woman's hair was not to be cut, and the practice was to be stopped forthwith.

No need to worry if the radiator of your car is filled with the proper mixture of water and alcohol. Positively can't freeze. Full directions at Wallace's.

COST OF WRECK FILLS.

Nowadays, through the medium of the cinema, it is possible to experience all but the unpleasant sensations of a great battle, a terrible railway smash, or a devastating explosion.

The heroism and financial expenditure required in the production of such films are scarcely realized. There is one officer who has made what has gone out with his camera and filmed the creeping barrage of his own artillery. It is not surprising that he already carries two wound stripes on his sleeve.

The filming of railway "thrillers" is costly rather than dangerous. So much is the demand for this type of film, however, that just before the war there were at least two railway companies in America who made from £5,000 to £10,000 a year in staging train wrecks for the "movies". One film company alone for its organization has purchased and demolished enough rolling stock to fit out a prosperous branch line.

Arranging a railway wreck is a simple matter. Drawing up the details is quite another. A train may escape comparatively unharmed in a real life. In "reel" life the film critics are not satisfied unless it is all "busted up".

"Pa, what is long division?"

"Well, one kind, my son, is dividing things so the other fellow gets the short end."

City Man—You used to be satisfied with dollar wheat.

Farmer—Yes, but in those days I didn't have to buy gas and accessories for a limousine.

Cubist—You see, we moderns strive for the purgation of the superfluous, which throws the accent on the inner urge. Do you follow me?

Visitor—No, I'm ahead of you. I came out of the asylum last week.

Does Your Child Show These Symptoms?

Often perfectly healthy children will, for no apparent reason, suddenly lose their appetite, become pale and listless, pale, and take no interest in games and sports. Some of the child has a dry cough. If neglected too long, these symptoms may develop into anemia or consumption. When a child shows signs of becoming run down, this system should immediately be built up with a tonic. Mrs. Stephen Oliver developed symptoms similar to those mentioned above, and for a long time Mrs. Oliver tells how the child was restored to health.

"My little girl, seven years of age, was much run down, suffering from loss of appetite. She was tired and languid. She was losing flesh and becoming thin. This had been going on for about three years. I had tried several remedies without effect. Finally I got a bottle of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, and noticed an improvement. She gained 100 per cent. in strength and flesh. Today she is again the rosy-cheeked child she used to be. She is now full of life, health and vitality, and therefore can conscientiously recommend Carnol as a builder and appetizer." Carnol, 50 cents per bottle, at St. Winnipeg.

Carnol is sold by all good druggists everywhere.

WISE AND OTHERWISE.

She—How is it that widows generally manage to marry again?

He—Because dead men tell no tales.

Corns cannot exist when Holloway's Corn Remover is applied to them, because it goes to the root and kills the growth.

"The young bride and groom have started on their wedding trip in a veritable ecstasy."

"You've heard of the car. Who makes it?"

No child should be allowed to suffer an hour from worms when prompt relief can be got in a simple but strong remedy—Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator.

Frail Counsel—Now, sir, supposing I made a fierce rush at you and endeavored to knock you down. How would you describe my action?

Burly Witness—I should say you was barmy.

Miller's Worm Powders are sweet and palatable to children, who know no hesitancy in taking them. They will certainly bring worms troubles to an end. They are a strengthening and stimulating medicine, correcting the disorders of digestion that the worms cause and imparting a healthy tone to the system most beneficial to development.

At a coroner's inquest in Ireland a chauffeur was giving evidence. "On seeing the deceased," he said, "I threw out the clutch, put on the brake and swerved to the right."

"Tell me, now," said a member of the jury, "when ye threw that thing out of the car did yez hit anywan wid it?"

Nothing as Good for Asthma. Asthma remedies come and go but every year the sales of the original Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Asthma Remedy grow greater and greater. No further evidence could be asked of its remarkable merit. It relieves. It always of the same unvarying quality which the sufferer from asthma learns to know. Do not suffer another attack, but get this splendid remedy to-day.

Former Sergeant Snodgrass and Ditto Private Whipple hadn't seen each other for a couple of years until they joined the same legion post. They gathered in a corner to reminisce.

"Do you still dream your old dream about getting a Government Jaras?" asked Snodgrass.

"Yes," replied Whipple sadly. "But now when I dream it I've got sense enough to know I'm asleep."

The Family Physician.—The good doctor is always worth his fee. But it is not always possible to get a doctor just when you want him. In such cases, common sense suggests the use of reliable home remedies, such as Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, which is wonderfully effective in easing inflammatory pains and healing cuts, scratches, bruises and sprains. The presence of this remedy in the family medicine chest saves many a fee.

S. P. C. A. Agent—I have a report that you're in the habit of shooing your poultry into a field and then trying deliberately to run them down with an automobile. What's the idea?

Farmer—The idear is that I've had more'n a dozen this past summer by sudden death on the highways, so I'm training the rest of them to be autoshy.

Your Home Medicine Chest. — Among the standard household remedies that should always be on hand in your home medicine chest, there is none more important than Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. Its manifold usefulness in relieving pain and healing sickness is known by many thousands throughout the land. Always use Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil for relieving rheumatic and sciatic pains, treating sore throats and chests, coughs, burns, scalds, cuts, bruises and sprains.

One time when Representative Elston of California was hunting up in the mountains of his native State he encountered a mule driver, with his team stuck in the mud, who was the best two-fisted cusser that ever laid a line to it. Cussing liked was nothing for him; he cussed all the colors of the rainbow, and did it harmoniously, too. Elston went on up the mountain wondering what a blackened person a man who would swear like that must be.

The following day a tree fell on a man in a nearby camp, and Elston went over to the hillside burial. No services had been arranged, not even a prayer. But when those in charge were about to lower into the grave the pine box in which the body reposed, and someone suggested that a few words be spoken, the cussing man stepped forward, removed his hat and said :

"Lord, we are sending Thee another soul. Thou knowest the burdens it has to bear; be merciful. That prayer stands to-day, in Elston's opinion, as one of the finest masterpieces of English it has been his privilege to hear.

PLAYED THEM BOTH UP.

A boy was playing with an iron hoop in the street, when it bounced through the railings and broke a window in the area beneath.

Mrs. Stern waited, with anger in her eyes, for the apparently cool boy to ring the bell. Presently he arrived.

"Please, I've broken your window," he said, "and father's come to mend it."

Sure enough, the boy was followed by a man, who at once set to work, while the boy, taking his hoop, ran off.

The window finished, the man said: "That'll be three shillings, ma'am."

"Three shillings!" gasped Mrs. Stern. "But your little boy broke it —the little fellow with the hoop. You are his father, aren't you?"

The man shook his head.

"Never seen him before," he said. "He came round to my place and said his mother wanted her window mended. You're his mother, aren't you?" And the good woman could only shake her head. Words failed her.

LOVE-MAKING LOST ART

ENGLISH WRITER SAYS IT IS NOT FASHIONABLE.

Not One Boy or Girl In a Thousand Knows How to Kiss — Would Rather Go to Theatres and Dances —Make Love by Gifts In Kind Because They Don't Know How to Make It Beautifully.

"I was much taken with one little reform made by the Utopians in 'Men Like Gods.' All over the hillsides, among the greenery, Mr. Wells tells us, are little arbors, secluded and beautiful, where people may rest and read, and lovers may love in privacy. Hurry on, Utopia!" writes Leonora Syles in the London Daily News.

"Any one who has ever tried to make love or have love made to in London or any great city, knows the misery of it. In the parks and on the commons, lovers are as thick as flies; hard, back-breaking seats to sit on, or grass where one is separated by perhaps two yards from the next pair of lovers. What a good thing the language of love is mostly inarticulate and that there is a camaraderie between lovers. But what a pity that there should be no privacy for the most beautiful moments of young life! No sooner have they united into one, other's arms than steps are heard approaching and they sit up straight and he smooths his tie and she puts her hat straight, and they talk loudly about the Cup Tie or Mr. Bates at the office. No sooner are they firmly fortified in romantic gaze on his beloved's eyes and thought how adorably her lips are waiting to be kissed than the man comes along with his beastly command for tuppences for the cocoa shop set on.

"And, instead of setting out under stars, in the immemorial custom of lovers, they have to go to a stuffy cinema, where they can sit any time, hold hands in the rosy darkness, or, if they are rich, they can take a box and sit for hour after hour in the orchestra plays the right music. I knew two lovers who did this to-and the end of the war, they had got into the hypnotic state, when holding each other's hands had set them floating off on a sea of ecstasy all regardless of a patriotic film that was being shown. Suddenly a bombardment was switched on to the screen with big bangs behind and beautiful stars as the enemy aeroplanes nearly burst Hazif. There was a piercing shriek from the box. The girl had gone to life, seeing red lights and hearing bangs. She thought an air raid was on.

"But love-making is going out. It isn't fashionable now. The days when the young man was in love and it allowed to come to tea on Sunday and help his girl wash up in the scullery afterwards (with a view to attempt at a kiss, usually rewarded by a pathetic stuck with the dish cloth, for which more kisses made reparation) are over. Once it was heaven to go to church and touch hands as they shared a hymn book and sang at each other about divine love, when all the time they meant the love of Tom for Polly. And the tragedy was the dear old thing at the other side of the aisle tripped across with an extra hymn book to help!" Once it was heaven, in a slightly higher social class, to sit and hold a skein of wool while she wound it—that was in the earlier days. Later, when He was accepted to the family, what bliss to be tactfully left alone with the elder sister or a governess played the piano while her back to them so thoughtfully!

"Nowadays lovers don't care for these small ends of love; they go to theatres and dances, cinemas and restaurants, fried fish shops or 'Mocker Parades,' according to their social status. They show off their own and each other's clothes and paces; they make love by gifts in kind because they don't know how to make it beautifully. Once it was one girl or boy in a thousand to-day who knows how to kiss or cuddle. They simply have nowhere to practise it; they have never experienced the delights of it.

"It is a pity that the young people of to-day are not more meek and lowly in their love-making; it is a pity that they do not tear off their robes of sophistication. They are so much on the make,' most of them in the girls particularly; they insist that the young man shall give them what they call a 'good time,' and they wear out their fiance's nerves and pockets, and start bad precedents for marriage. When the four walls of a little home close about a young married couple, they cannot afford cinemas and dances every night — even every week; but they can afford the homely, unexciting kisses and they can afford the joy of looking at the stars hand in hand, and they find that it sharpens their wits; it is by no means so easy to find love tokens that are to pay for a theatre ticket or a box of chocolates. But it is the love that costs nothing that so often comes either too dear or too cheap. And it is the sort that improves with practice."

A White-Nosed Bear.

The New York Zoological Society has a remarkable black bear, with a white muzzle, that came from Antibes, where a peasant from Senator Menier of France. According to the Zoologecal Bulletin the animal is an interesting exponent of bear philosophy. From the day when it was captured it has never shown any anger at human beings, and the second day after it was caught it ate from its captor's hand.

FIELD OF JUVENILE WRITING.

Writers May Expect Steady Pecuniary Return For Their Work.

For an unexplained reason, the public chooses to assume that the man who writes for children is not taking himself or his vocation seriously. It imagines either that he is a dabbler in literature, or else that he is charitably disposed toward impecunious youthful mind. For it is a thought that the task brings no adequate return in money or in reputation. Nothing, indeed, is more common among writers themselves, those who have attempted the writing of juveniles having discovered with amazing alacrity the difficulties of the undertaking. But, even though it is admitted that here is a legitimate field for effort, insistence is laid upon the fact that, in any case, the game is not worth the candle.

Hence, to those who had held this view, a paper contributed by Clarence Budington Kelland to a recent number of the Saturday Evening Post, will bring a start of puzzled surprise. It seems that the shoe is firmly upon the other foot. In fact, it is evident that the writer for children is the one who, more than all others, may confidently expect a handsome pecuniary return for his work, as well as a constantly growing personal following. Mr. Kelland avows his point by citing the cases of men like William Heyliger and Ralph Henry Barbour, to say nothing of such writers of children's classics as Scott, Dickens, Defoe, Irving, Mark Twain. We are told that Charles Carleton Coffin, who, in 1876, wrote "The Boys of '76," has carried on his series through eight volumes, is still selling at a rate which necessitates the publication of new editions every few years, more than 200,000 copies in all having been sold. How many novels can compete with that? Though no juvenile is likely to experience the sensational career of a best seller, on the crest of the wave for perhaps a few months, yet if it has genuine worth it will be in demand for years. Consult any bookseller's catalogue and you will find that boys nowadays are reading many of the same books which you read at their age.

Beyond all this, it is discovered that there lies a peculiar attraction in writing for children, and an inspiring opportunity. For in so doing writers are not striving to regale a jaded literary appetite, dulled to the taste of nice flavors; on the contrary, you are appealing to fresh readers, full of zest and enthusiasm, who express their pleasure in vociferous and unmistakable language. Then, too, once you have written a really admirable juvenile, you have added something to adult enjoyment as well; for the tastes of the boy and of the man are most precisely poles apart, after all.—Carlistan Science Monitor.

The "Holy Carpet."

Muslims are shocked by King Hussein's proposal to let the medical corps of the "Holy Carpet" pilgrimage pass through Hedjaz. The sending of a sanitary escort to Mecca is a chimerary practice rendered necessary by lack of sanitary protection but King Hussein has taken his stand that it now constitutes an infringement of the independence of the Hedjaz. At the same time he offered no protest against the sending of soldiers to protect the caravan. The decision recalls the caravan from Jeddah on the Red Sea and means a loss of £200,000 to the Hedjaz, the subsidy usually paid by Egypt, whose Government has taken a firm stand, considering the greatest religious dignitaries who declare that Hussein's action is contrary to the precepts of God and the prophet. Hussein's action is said to be one of spite, according to the Egyptian Press, because he was bitterly attacked after the signing of the Anglo-Arab treaty as a tool of Great Britain. His decision is likely to create feeling against him throughout Islam.

Sunshine Cure for Tuberculosis.

More extensive use of heliotherapy, or sun baths, in the treatment of tuberculosis is being urged by French medical men. Dr. Armand Delille reported lately that a number of tubercular cases and also sufferers from peritonitis have been cured by sun baths in various sanitoriums in Southern France. The sun cure is highly praised by Dr. Maurice Benoit, who has declared it to be beneficial to cancer. He reported on experiments with mice, where retarding effects have been achieved through the use of actinic rays and white light. Statistics are also known that cancer is unknown in the tropics and prevalent in colder countries, in proportion to their lack of clear sunshine.

Fashions That Tire.

If a man of six feet three inches is told to walk with a boy of four feet, he will find it very difficult to keep step with him. It was all a question, he added, of tiring the muscles by working them in an abnormal manner. For example, when women wore bobble-skirts they did not get their natural stride, and so became tired much more quickly. At the same time Prof. Johnson says there is a tendency to wear high heeled shoes. The bones of the foot form a natural arch, and the high heels throw more work on the muscles of the foot. To counter-balance this the women walk with a jerk, and so tire, and shuffled about in a beat manner.

Grace: "Physically, I mean."

ZAM-BUK

Beats Any Embrocation in Winter Aches and Pains

Try a Box Today!

While Zam-Buk has long been recognised as Canada's most popular remedy in skin troubles, how many know how better it is than any unctuous liniment for relieving the aches and twinges of rheumatism, sciatica or lumbago?

Zam-Buk is especially good for aching backs, stiff joints, sore muscles, cold in the head and chest, or sore throat.

Rubbed well into the affected parts, Zam-Buk's powerful pain-soothing essences soak right into the tissues, banishing soreness, congestion and inflammation. Others prefer to treat their colds so: they rub Zam-Buk between the palms of both hands and then inhale the evaporating medicinal balsams. This does the same good in another way.

SIR JOHN MACDONALD'S WONDERFUL PREDICTION

It is tolerably clear that in 1865 there was in Britain no political leader of vision equal to that of Sir John Macdonald as he revealed himself in his speech introducing the Act of Confederation before the Legislature of United Canada. He dwelt not only on the advantages to this country but Great Britain of the proposed arrangement. He declared that the whole colonial system was in a state of transition, and continued: "Instead of looking upon us as a merely dependent colony, England will have in us a friendly nation—a subordinate but still a powerful people—to stand by her in North America in peace or war. The people of Australia will be such another subordinate nation. And England will have by this advantage, if her colonies progress under the new colonial system, as I believe they will, that, though at war with all the rest of the world, she will be able to look to the subordinate nations in alliance with her, and owning allegiance to the same sovereign, who will be friendly nations, to assist her in the whole world in arms."

Sixty years later the prophetic sense of Macdonald was verified on the fields of France and Flanders.

DOG MEAT FOR STEWS

Latest Delicacy in Berlin—Butcher Shops Become Thieves' Mecca—Harvest Picking Stray Animals' Off City Streets.—Butter Beyond Reach of Any Except Tourists and Wealthy.

Berlin, Nov. 17.—Dog meat prices were quoted by some Berlin butchers in the public markets to-day. For weeks the dog thieves have been systematically picking up every stray pet in the Berlin streets and selling them to butchers for sausages — in several cases even selling the dogs in sausage form to their original owners—but today the butchers are openly offering dog meat for stews.

Butter is almost entirely beyond the reach of everyone except a few tourists and very rich Germans, but skilled workers occasionally buy margarine which is made partly from oil that are a by-product of coke production.

Bread prices are almost out of reach. Bread supposed to have been made of rye often contains potatoes and apparently some sawdust as in war times.

The proprietor of a Berlin barber shop became hard-hearted when he is lucky to be able to buy enough food to make a thick soup.

Mr. Reichsbank presses which have been turning out worthless paper money at an ever-increasing pace since the war, stopped yesterday. There will be no more paper marks printed.

In their place the Government is providing a fixed sum of rentenmarks, the first of which are to be turned out yesterday. The primary issue will be 600,000,000 with another 600,000,000 soon to follow.

USED TO BOB THE HAIR OF FEMALE CONVICTS

Practice Stopped Years Ago by Order of the Department of Justice.

It appears that a rather barbarous practice was stopped in the Portsmouth penitentiary a number of years ago by a good hearted warden who did not like bobbed hair. Up to that time the inmates of the federal female prison were the only flappers of the bobbed-hair variety in Canada. When a woman was admitted to the prison she had to submit to the cutting off of her locks, a relic of the days when prisoners suffered for which there was no legal authority.

In 1899 a beautiful young woman was convicted in British Columbia of manslaughter and sentenced to five years' imprisonment. She had been tried on the charge of murdering her husband, but the jury brought in a verdict of manslaughter. She was transferred to Portsmouth prison to serve her sentence, and upon her admission she refused to submit to the cutting of her hair. She objected but the matrons and demanded to see the warden. The matron reported the affair to the warden who happened to be an official sent down from Ottawa to fill the position on emergency. He was a man of very fastidious ideas. Upon hearing the matron's report he gave orders for the prisoner to have her hair cut off, he asked to have her brought to his office, which he did.

The young woman convict was of striking appearance. Her hair was piled high on her head, a perfect wealth to her. It was jet black and glossy. She had beautiful black eyes, a perfect complexion and pleasing features.

"I refused to have my hair cut," she said, "and I am not going to submit to having it cut, because you have no right to do it. I want the order suspended until I can write to the Minister of Justice and to my lawyer."

The warden replied that he did not give any order for the cutting of her hair and he did not know who did, but he would refer the matter to the Minister of Justice himself, and in the meantime her hair would not be cut.

A report was sent to Ottawa forthwith, in which it was pointed out that there was no regulation and no statutory authority for cutting women's hair. It has been a practice carried on for forty years or more but it had never been sanctioned by any regulations. In due course an order was sent out from Ottawa to the effect that the young woman's hair was not to be cut, and the practice was to be stopped forthwith.

COST OF WRECK FILMS.

Nowadays, through the medium of the cinema, it is possible to experience all but the most unpleasant emotions of a great battle, a terrible railway smash, or a devastating explosion.

The heroism and financial expenditure required in the production of such films are scarcely realized. There is one officer now at the front who has gone out with his camera and filmed the creeping barrage of his own artillery. It is not surprising that he already carries two wound stripes on his sleeve.

The filming of railway "thrillers" is costly rather than dangerous. So great is the demand for this type of film, however, that but before the war there were at least two railway companies in America who made from £5,000 to £10,000 a year hiring train wrecks for the "movies". These film companies since the organization has purchased and demolished enough rolling stock to fit out a prosperous railway line.

Arranging a railway wreck is a simple matter. Cleaning up the debris is quite another. The chief point to escape comparatively unharmed in real life. In "reel" life the film critics are not satisfied unless it is all "busted up".

"Pa, what is long division?"

"Well, one kind, my son, is dividing things so the other fellow gets the short end."

City Man—You used to be satisfied with dollar wheat.

Farmer—Yes, but in those days I didn't have to buy gas and accessories for a limousine.

Cubist—You see, we moderns strive for the purgation of the superficial, which throws the accent on the inner urge. Do you follow me?

Fair Visitor—No, I'm afraid of you. I came out of the asylum last week.

Does Your Child Show These Symptoms?

Often perfectly healthy children will, for no apparent reason, suddenly lose their appetite, become pale and listless, pale, and take no interest in games or sports. Often the child has a dry cough. If this should be long, these symptoms may develop into anemia or consumption. When a child shows signs of becoming run down, its system should immediately be built up with Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. Oliver developed symptoms similar to those described above, and in the following letter tells how the child was restored to health.

"My little girl Dorothy, seven years of age, was run down, suffering from loss of appetite. She was tired and listless. She was losing flesh and becoming thin. This had been going on for over three years. I had tried several remedies without effect. Finally I got a bottle of Carnol and almost immediately I noticed an improvement. She gained 100 per cent. in strength and flesh. Today she is again the rosy-cheeked child she used to be. She is now full of life, health and vitality. I therefore can conscientiously recommend Carnol as a builder and appetizer."—Mrs. O. S. Oliver, 665 Dewdney St., Winnipeg. 4-3

Carnol is sold by all good druggists everywhere.

WISE AND OTHERWISE.

She—How is it that widows generally manage to marry again?

He—Because dead men tell no tales.

Corns cannot exist when Holloway's Corn Remover is applied to them, because it goes to the root and kills the growth.

"The young bride and groom have started on their wedding trip in a veritable ecstasy."

"Never heard of the car. Who makes it?"

No child should be allowed to suffer from intestinal worms when simple relief can be got in a simple but strong remedy—Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator.

Frail Counsel—Now, sir, supposing I made a fierce rush at you and endeavored to knock you down. How would you describe my action?

Burly Witness—I should say you was barmy.

Miller's Worm Powders are sweet and palatable to children, who show no hesitancy in taking them. They will certainly bring worm troubles to an end. They are a strengthening and stimulating tonic, and eliminate the disorders of digestion that the worms cause and imparting a healthy tone to the system most beneficial to development.

At a coroner's inquest in Ireland a chauffeur was giving evidence. "On seeing the deceased," he said, "I put my foot on the clutch, put on the brake and swerved to the right.

"Tell me, now," said a member of the jury, "when ye threw that thing out of the car did yez hit anywan wid it?"

Nothing as Good for Asthma. Asthma remedies come and go but every year the sales of the original Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Asthma Remedy grow greater and greater. No further evidence could be asked of its remarkable merit. It relieves. It is in ways of the same unvarying quality which the sufferer from asthma learns to know. Do not suffer another attack, but get this splendid remedy to-day.

Former Sergeant Snodgrass and Ditto Private Whippler hadn't seen each other for a couple of years until they joined the same legion post. They gathered in a corner to reminisce.

"Do you still dream your old dream about getting a Government farm?"

Snodgrass asked.

"Yes," replied Whippler sadly. "But now when I dream it I've got a sense enough to know I'm asleep."

The Family Physician.—The good doctor is always worth his fee. But it is not always possible to get a doctor just when you want him. In such cases, common sense suggests the use of reliable home remedies, such as Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, which is wonderfully effective in easing inflammatory pains and healing cuts, scratches, bruises and sprains. The presence of this remedy in the family medicine chest saves many a fee.

One time when Representative Elston of California was hunting up in the mountains of his native State he encountered a mule driver, with his animals in the mud, who was by the best two-fisted cusser that ever laid a lip to it. Cussing blue was nothing for him; he cussed all the colors of the rainbow, and did it harmoniously, too. Elston went on up the mountain wondering what a blackened person a man who would swear like that must be.

The following day a tree fell on a man in a nearby camp, and Elston went over to the hillside burial. No services had been arranged, not even a prayer. But when those in charge were about to lower into the grave the pine box in which the body reposed, and someone suggested that a few words be spoken, the cussing man stepped forward, removed his hat and said:

"Lord, we are sending Thee another soul. Thou knowest the burden it had to bear; be merciful."

That prayer stands to-day, in Elston's opinion, as one of the finest masterpieces of English it has been his privilege to hear.

PLAYED THEM BOTH UP.

A boy was playing with an iron hoop in the street, when it bounced through the railings and broke a window in the area beneath.

Mrs. Stern waited, with anger in her eyes, for the appearance of the hoop's owner. Presently he arrived.

"Please, I've broken your window," he said, "and father's come to mend it."

Sure enough, the boy was followed by a man, who at once set up to work while the boy, taking his hoop, ran off.

The window finished, the man said: "That'll be three shillings, ma'am."

"Three shillings!" gasped Mrs. Stern. "But your little boy broke it—the little fellow with the hoop. You are his father, aren't you?"

The man shook his head.

"Never seen him before," he said. "He came round to my place and said his mother wanted her window mended. You're his mother, aren't you?"

And any good woman would only shake her head. Words failed her.

LOVE-MAKING LOST ART

ENGLISH WRITER SAYS IT IS NOT FASHIONABLE.

Not One Boy or Girl In a Thousand Knows How to Kiss — Would Rather Go to Theatres and Dances —Make Love by Gifts In Kind Because They Don't Know How to Make It Beautifully.

"I was much taken with one little reform made by the Utopians in 'Men are Such Fools,' and I should like, among the greatest, Mr. Wells tells us, are little arbors, secluded and beautiful, where people may rest and read, and lovers may love in privacy. Why on, Utopia!" writes Leonora Syles in the London Daily News.

"Any one who has ever tried to make love or have love made to in London or any great city, knows the misery of it. In the parks and on the commons, lovers are as rats as flies; hard, back-breaking seats are all on, or grass where one is separated by perhaps two yards from the next pair of lovers. What a disgusting thing the language of love is mostly inarticulate and that there is a camaraderie between lovers. But what a pity that there should be no privacy for the most beautiful thing in life! Love is not shameful. No sooner have they melted into each other's arms than strips are heard approaching and they sit up straight and be smoothing his tie and she puts her hat right, and they talk loudly about the Cup Tie or Mr. Bates at the office. No sooner has he firmly fastened a few pears, more than 200,000 copies in all having been sold. How many novels can combine with that? Though no juvenile is likely to experience the sensational career of a best seller, on the great of love for perhaps a few months, eyet it it has certain worth it will be in demand for years. Consult any bookseller's catalogue and you will find that his customers are reading many of the same books which you read at their age.

Beyond all this, it is discovered that there lies a peculiar satisfaction in writing for children, and an inspiring opportunity. For in so doing you are not striving to tempt a jaded literary appetite, dulled to the taste of nice flavors; on the contrary, you are appealing to fresh readers, full of zest and enthusiasm, who express their pleasure in vociferous and unexpected loyalties. Then, too, once you have written a really admirable juvenile, you have added something to adult enjoyment as well; for the tastes of the boy and of the man are not precisely poles asunder, strive all.—Christian Science Monitor.

The "Holy Carpet."

Moslems are shocked by King Hussein's refusal to let the medical escort of the "Holy Carpet" pilgrimage pass through Hedjaz. The sending of a medical escort to Mecca is a customary practice rendered necessary by lack of sanitary protection but King Hussein's decision stands as it is, now constitutes an infringement of the independence of the Hedjaz at present time he is offered no protest against the sending of soldiers to protect the caravan. The decision to call the caravan an Arabian Red Sea and means a loss of £500,000 to the Hedjaz, the subsidy usually paid by Egypt, whose Government has taken a firm stand, consulting the great religious dignitaries who declare that Hussein's action is contrary to the precepts of God and the prophet. Russia's action is said to be one of spite, according to the Egyptian Press, because the Soviet flag attacked after the signing of the Anglo-Arab treaty as a token of Great Britain. His decision is likely to create feeling against him throughout Islam.

Sunshine Cure for Tuberculosis.

More extensive use of heliotherapy, or sun baths, in the treatment of tuberculosis is being urged by French medical men. Dr. Armand Delille reported lately that a number of tubercular cases and also sufferers from peritonitis have been cured by sun baths in various sanitoriums in Southern France. The sun cure is further praised by Dr. Maurice Bedot, who has declared it to be beneficial to cancer. He reported on experiments with mice, where retarding effects have been achieved through the use of actinic rays and white light. Cancers are said to show that cancer is unknown in the tropics and prevalent in colder countries, in proportion to their lack of clear sunshine.

Fashions That Tire.

If a man of six feet three inches is told to walk with a boy of four feet, and the boy pace with him, who will tire first? Prof. J. B. Johnson says the man would tire sooner than the boy. It was all a question, he added, of tiring the muscles by working them in an abnormal manner. For example, when women wore bobble-skirts they did not get their natural stride, and so became tired much more quickly. At the same time Prof. Johnson says there is a tendency for men to wear high heels. The bones of the foot form a natural arch, and the high heels throw more weight on the muscles of the foot. To counter-balance this the women walked with bent knees, and shuffled about in a beat manner.

ZAM-BUK

Beats All Imitation in Winter Aches and Pains

Try a Box Today!

While Zam-Buk has long been recognised as Canada's most popular remedy in skin troubles, how many know better it is than any concoction known for relieving the shooting twinges of rheumatism, sciatica or lumbago?

Zam-Buk is equally good for aching backs, stiff joints, sore muscles, cold in the head and chest, or sore throat.

Rubbed well into the affected parts, Zam-Buk's powerful pain-soothing essences soak right into the tissues, banishing soreness, congestion and inflammation. Others prefer to treat their colds so: they rub Zam-Buk between the palms of both hands and then inhale the evaporating medicinal balsams. This does the same good in another way.

PLANTING AND PRUNING

The Two Great Essentials in Handling Fruit Trees.

Distances Recommended for Planting —Do Not Prune Young Trees too Heavily—It Delays Growth and Fruiting—Practical Suggestions.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

In conjunction with our recommendations on pruning given below we wish also to make certain recommendations as to distances of planting to those growers who contemplate setting out new orchards. In peaches, for example, we are of the opinion that, taking one variety with another, eighteen feet apart each way, or the equivalent should be the absolute minimum distance. Twenty feet would be a better distance. Considerably fewer trees to the acre can be set, but it is probable, though not proven, that just as much fruit to the acre will be harvested as if the orchard were more closely planted. Then, too, fewer trees means less capital outlay for nursery stock, less pruning, greater ease in orchard operations such as pruning, spraying, cultivation, harvesting, etc., less susceptibility to disease, and therefore longer life for the trees. Intercrops also can be grown for a greater length of time and with less injury to the orchard trees.

Distances Recommended for Planting.

We would recommend the following general distances:

Apples, 26 to 40 feet for standards, with hilers at 10 to 20 feet.

Cherries, Sweet, 25 to 30 feet; Sour, 18 to 20 feet.

Peaches, 18 to 20 feet.

Pears, 16 to 18 feet.

Plums, 18 to 20 feet.

Smaller growing varieties possibly closer.

Consideration must of course be given to the variety being planted. Smaller growing varieties can be given the adequate minimum distances with larger growing varieties relatively further apart; also, if the grower prefers, trees may be planted 16 x 20 instead of 18 x 18, giving practically the same number of trees to the acre.

Do Not Prune Young Tree Heavily.

The practice usually advocated in Ontario for young trees, (whether apple, pear, peach or other fruit) until they come into bearing, has been to give regular, fairly heavy annual dormant pruning on the theory that such pruning induces vigorous growth and makes for a larger, stronger tree.

Experimental work in England, in the United States and at this Station has shown conclusively, however, that the less pruning the young non-bearing tree is given, the larger, stronger tree it makes and the sooner it comes into bearing. Growth is only apparently induced by pruning. The long, thick, sappy growth in the young tree resulting from heavy pruning does not total as much, however, as the normal growth and extension of large and small branches in the unpruned tree. Careful measurements demonstrate this.

Pruning Delays Growth and Fruiting.

The reason for the unpruned or lightly pruned tree coming earlier than the tree receiving more severe treatment is in reality very simple and logical. The cell may contain an abundance of plant food, but this "raw" food must first go to the leaves and be there turned into "manufactured" food before the tree can make use of it for further growth and fruitfulness. Pruning, by removing part of the possible leaf area of the tree, reduces by just that much the ability of the tree to manufacture plant food, and hence inhibits growth."

With reference to pruning delaying fruiting, it has lately been shown that before there can be fruitfulness there must be a partial storing up of manufactured food in the branches, twigs and fruit spurs. This storing up of surplus food naturally takes place first in the sappiest tree with its greater leaf surface and the unpruned tree is therefore the first to come into bearing.

Pruning Recommendations.

Head back the young tree at planting time as in the present practice to counterbalance the root pruning incident to transplanting. Limit subsequent pruning of the non-bearing tree to the removal of undesirable branches and even then put out too little rather than too much. Head back a branch only when necessary to shape the tree and then head back preferably to a side branch. Prune lightly, recognizing that light pruning for the period would be moderate pruning for the apple. As the tree reaches maturity and bears heavily, heavier pruning will have to be given to maintain a proper supply of new growth.—F. C. Palmer, Horticulturist, Experimental Station, Vineland Station.

Horticultural Hints.

Banding the trunks and larger limbs of apple trees with strips of cloth has been practiced extensively for the control of the codling moth. This method consists of fastening a band of cloth around the trunk, trees which the loose bark has been removed. Usually a band made from burlap, folded to three thicknesses 4 to 8 inches wide, is used. The codling moth larvae, or worms, crawl beneath the band to form their cocoons and should be destroyed by hand at intervals of ten days.

Cut out old wood and thin the new growth of currants and gooseberries when the snow goes off. Too much brush and no cultivation make small berries.

Woman Advises Governor Smith

Al Smith, the governor of the State of New York for a second time, is said to put greater trust in the political advice given him by a woman than by any of the veteran politicians with whom he is surrounded. That woman is Mrs. Henry Moskowitz. She conducted the publicity for Governor Smith at the last election, and probably contributed as much to the astonishing victory as any other New York politician with the exception of the candidate himself. After the victory, Governor Smith said she could pick out any office within his gift and he would appoint her to it. But she declined. She finds her greatest pleasure in public work in the capacity of private citizen. She is without social ambitions. She earns a fair living from among the various activities with which she is associated, and since her husband, also a well-known social worker, is also a highly paid industrial consultant, Mrs. Moskowitz is contented with her lot. She probably prides herself on being one of the most profoundly respected political strategists in the United States.

Born in New York of mixed Russian, German and Polish ancestry, her father being a watchmaker, Belle Lindner began her struggle for an education about the time that Al Smith was hustling for a living and making himself popular with Tammany Hall leaders. At eighteen the young woman went in for social service work, and this is the career she has never forsaken, the career that brought her into contact with the big politicians in the state. She studied music and dramatic art and is an accomplished linguist, a matter of importance to one who is toiling for the polyglot under privileged population of New York. She was appointed Director of Entertainments and Exhibits of the Educational Alliance, and despite this sounding title was recompensed to the extent of only $500 a year; but so excellent was her work that before the year was out her salary had been doubled. She became acquainted with Charles H. Israels, a successful architect, and later became his wife. Eight years later he died and left her with three children to educate.

Her first interest in politics, apart from its social service aspects, was in 1912, and she naturally gravitated into the Bull Moose camp. She seconded the nomination of Oscar Straus for Governor on the Roosevelt ticket and became an ardent advocate of woman suffrage. She became a student of legislative procedure and of the political manipulations that rarely appear on the surface. There were many improvements dear to her heart and to bring them about she had to have the backing of politicians. Mayor Gaynor backed her campaign in New York to eliminate objectionable dance halls. Between 1912 and 1916 she was manager of the Dress and Waist Manufacturers' Association, and in that period adjusted more than 10,000 individual disputes between employers and employe's in the industry. She continued her social service work and studied hard to post herself as regards laws concerning labor.

She came into contact with Al Smith in 1913 through his political manager, ex-Judge Olvis, who induced her to take over the task of organizing the women voters for him. It was the first year the New York women exercised the franchise and her task was an onerous one. In the course of the campaign she advised the candidate as to a speech which he was to deliver before the Women's University Club, which he deemed rather a "high brow" and uninfluential organization. He had meant to make only a few formal remarks. Mrs. Moskowitz—for she had ceased to be Mrs. Israels in 1914—urged him to cut loose with a real address to see how it would take with the women. He did and made a great impression. Since then it has been his custom to take pretty nearly all the advice that Mrs. Moskowitz offers him. Through his first administration she was constantly called upon for advice, not only by the governor, but by the other leading politicians. They discovered that she had an almost unrivalled ability to gauge the popular reaction to any policy advanced.

When he was defeated in 1920, after running a million votes ahead of his ticket, Mrs. Moskowitz was convinced that he would be elected in 1922, and though Mr. Smith announced that he was through with politics and retired into private life Mrs. Moskowitz was unceasingly active in his behalf. It is said that it was due to her more than to anyone else that he consented to enter the pre-convention campaign against W. R. Hearst. In the darkest hours of the Syracuse convention she never lost heart. To almost everybody else it appeared that either Al Smith would have to be a candidate for Governor with Hearst on the same ticket as Senator or that he would have to step out of politics for all time. To Mrs. Moskowitz it seemed certain that Hearst would be eliminated and Smith nominated. She proved right and held the Smith supporters together for the final great effort. Since the election she has been the Governor's special representative on scores of missions. They call her the "Col. House of the Smith administration" and she is admitted to be the most politically influential woman in New York state.

ROD AND GUN IN CANADA

Dealing with hunting the wild mountain goat in the Rockies, Raymond Thomson in his story "Introducing Mr. William Goat" gives a fine account of this sport and tells it in a manner which will interest all sportsmen, in the December issue of Rod and Gun in Canada. Also account of wild duck hunting at Penaimotang by Lewis Denison, "Our Bull Moose for 1922" a good moose hunting story, and "The Silver Salmon Fresh from the Sea" by Canada's foremost writer of Nova Scotian fishing and hunting, Bonnyeastle Dale, are only a few of the good articles and stories contained in this issue. "Ranching the Silver Fox" by C. K. Walton, gives interesting side-lights on the management of a fox farm while F. V. Williams is represented by a good story of the north in winter. There are three first-class articles in the Guns and Ammunition department edited by C. S. Landis, while R. P. Lincoln, J. W. Winson, W. C. Motley, M. U. Bates and F. H. Walker have departments filled with material of interest to all who are interested in Canadian outdoor life. Some good hunting and fishing stories in addition to fifteen articles dealing with every phase of sportsmanship makes the December issue of Rod and Gun in Canada a particularly interesting one.

The Two Great Essentials in Handling Fruit Trees.

Distances Recommended for Planting —Do Not Prune Young Trees too Heavily—It Delays Growth and Fruiting—Practical Suggestions.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

In conjunction with our recommendations on pruning given below we wish also to make certain recommendations as to distances of planting to those growers who contemplate setting out new orchards. In peaches, for example, we are of the opinion that, taking one variety with another, eighteen feet apart each way, or the equivalent should be the absolute minimum distance. Twenty feet would be a better distance. Considerably fewer trees to the acre can be set, but it is probable, though not proven, that just as much fruit to the acre will be harvested as if the orchard were more closely planted. Then, too, fewer trees means less capital outlay for nursery stock, less pruning, greater ease in orchard operations such as pruning, spraying, cultivation, harvesting, etc., less susceptibility to disease, and therefore longer life for the trees. Intercrops also can be grown for a greater length of time and with less injury to the orchard trees.

Distances Recommended for Planting.

We would recommend the following general distances:

Apples, 26 to 40 feet for standards, with fillers at 19 to 20 feet.

Cherries, Sweet, 25 to 30 feet; Sour, 18 to 20 feet.

Peaches, 18 to 20 feet.

Pears, 16 to 18 feet.

Plums, 18 to 20 feet.

Smaller growing varieties possibly closer.

Consideration must of course be given to variety being planted. Smaller growing varieties can be given the absolute minimum distances with large growing varieties relatively farther apart; also, if the grower prefers, trees may be planted 15 x20 instead of 18 x 18, giving practically the same number of trees to the acre.

Do Not Prune Young Tree Heavily.

The practice usually advocated in Ontario for young trees, whether apple, pear, peach or other fruit) until they come into bearing, has been to give regular, fairly heavy annual dormant pruning on the theory that such pruning induces vigorous growth and makes for a large, stronger tree.

Experimental work in England, in the United States and at this Station has shown conclusively, however, that the less pruning the young non-bearing tree is given, the larger, stronger tree it makes and the sooner it comes into bearing. Growth is only apparently induced by pruning. The long, thick, sappy growth in the young tree resulting from heavy pruning does not total as much, however, as the normal growth and extension of large and small branches in the unpruned tree. Careful measurements demonstrate this.

Pruning Delays Growth and Fruiting.

The reason for the unpruned or lightly pruned tree coming larger than the tree receiving more severe treatment is in reality very simple and logical. The cut may contain an abundance of plant food, but this "raw" food cannot first go to the leaves and be there turned into "manufactured" food before the tree can make use of it for further growth and fruitfulness. Pruning, by removing part of the possible leaf area of the tree, reduces by just that much the ability of the tree to manufacture plant food, and hence inhibits growth.

With reference to pruning delaying fruiting, it has lately been shown that before a tree can be fruitfulness there must be a partial storing up of manufactured food in the branches, twigs and fruit spurs. This storing up of surplus food naturally takes place first in the unpruned tree with its greater leaf surface and the unpruned tree is therefore the first to come into bearing.

Pruning Recommendations.

Head back the young tree at planting time as is the present practice to counterbalance the root pruning incident to transplanting. Limit subsequent pruning of the non-bearing tree to the removal of undesirable branches and even then thin out too little rather than too much. Head back a branch only when necessary to shape the tree and then head back preferably to a side branch. Prune lightly, recognizing that light pruning for the young tree would be moderate pruning for the apple. As the tree reaches maturity and bears heavily, heavier pruning will have to be given to maintain a proper supply of new growth.—F. Palmer, Hort. Exp. Station, Vineland Station.

Horticultural Hints.

Banding the trunks and larger limbs of apple trees with strips of cloth has been practiced extensively for the control of the codling moth. This method consists of fastening a band of cloth around the trunk, from which the loose bark has been removed. Usually a band made from burlap, folded to three thicknesses 4 to 8 inches wide, is used. The codling moth larvae, or worms, crawl beneath the band to form their cocoons and should be destroyed by hand at intervals of ten days.

Cut out old wood and thin the new growth of currants and gooseberries when the snow goes off. A Too much brush and no cultivation make small berries.

This is the time as ever before when every banker ought to be a student of agricultural economics. The farmer is studying marketing. The banker must know his way around that subject.

Woman Advises Governor Smith

Al Smith, the governor of the State of New York for a second time, is said to put greater trust in the political advice given him by a woman than by any of the veteran politicians with whom he is surrounded. That woman is Mrs. Henry Moskowitz. She conducted the publicity for Governor Smith at the last election, and probably contributed as much to the astonishing victory as any other New York politician with the exception of the candidate himself. After the victory, Governor Smith said she could pick out any office within his gift and he would appoint her to it. But she declined. She finds her greatest pleasure in public work in the capacity of private citizen. She is without social ambitions. She earns a fair living from among the various activities with which she is associated, and since her husband, also a well-known social worker, is also a highly paid industrial consultant, Mrs. Moskowitz is contented with her lot. She probably prides herself on being one of the most profoundly respected political strategists in the United States.

Born in New York of mixed Russian, German and Polish ancestry, her father being a watchmaker, Belle Lindner began her struggle for an education about the time that Al Smith was hustling for a living and making himself popular with Tammany Hall leaders. At eighteen the young woman went in for social service work, and this is the career she has never forsaken, the career that brought her into contact with the big politicians in the state. She studied music and dramatic art and is an accomplished linguist; a matter of importance to one who is toiling for the polyglot under privileged population of New York. She was appointed Director of Entertainments and Exhibits of the Educational Alliance, and despite this sounding title was recompensed to the extent of only $600 a year; but as excellent was her work that before the year was out her salary had been doubled. She became acquainted with Charles H. Israels, a successful architect, and later became his wife. Eight years later he died and left her with three children to educate.

Her first interest in politics, apart from its social service aspects, was in 1912, and she naturally gravitated into the Bull Moose camp. She seconded the nomination of Oscar Straus for Governor on the Roosevelt ticket and became an ardent advocate of woman suffrage. She became a student of legislative procedure and of the political manipulations that rarely appear on the surface. There were many improvements dear to her heart and to bring them about she had to have the backing of politicians. Mayor Gaynor backed her campaign in New York to eliminate objectionable dance halls. Between 1912 and 1916 she was manager of the Dress and Waist Manufacturers' Association, and in that period adjusted more than 10,000 individual disputes between employers and employes in the industry. She continued her social service work and studied hard to post herself as regards laws concerning labor.

She came into contact with Al Smith in 1918 through his political manager, ex-Judge Elkus, who introduced her to take over the task of organizing the women voters for him. It was the first year the New York women exercised the franchise and her task was an onerous one. In the course of the campaign she advised the candidate as to a speech which he was to deliver before the Women's University Club, which he deemed rather a "high brow" and uninfluential organization. He had meant to make only a few formal remarks. Mrs. Moskowitz—for she had ceased to be Mrs. Israels in 1914—urged him to cut loose with a real address to see how it would take with the women. He did and made a great impression. Since then it has been his custom to take pretty nearly all the advice that Mrs. Moskowitz offers him. Through his first administration she was constantly called upon for advice, not only by the governor, but by the other leading politicians. They discovered that she had an almost unrivalled ability to gauge the popular reaction to any policy advanced.

When he was defeated in 1920, after running a million votes ahead of his ticket, Mrs. Moskowitz was convinced that he would be elected in 1922, and though Mr. Smith announced that he was through with politics and retired into private life Mrs. Moskowitz was unceasingly active in his behalf. It is said that it was due to her more than to anyone else that he consented to enter the pre-convention campaign against W. R. Hearst. In the darkest hours of the Syracuse convention she never lost heart. To almost everybody else it appeared that either Al Smith would have to be a candidate for Governor with Hearst on the same ticket as Senator or that he would have to step out of politics for all time. To Mrs. Moskowitz it seemed certain that Hearst would be eliminated and Smith nominated. She proved right and held the Smith supporters together for the final great effort. Since the election she has been the Governor's special representative on scores of missions. They call her the "Col. House of the Smith administration" and she is admitted to be the most politically influential woman in New York state.

ROD AND GUN IN CANADA

Dealing with hunting the wild mountain goat in the Rockies, Raymond Thomson in his story "Introducing Mr. William Goat" gives a fine account of this sport and tells it in a manner which will interest all sportsmen, in the December issue of Rod and Gun in Canada. An account of wild duck hunting at Penaimotang by Lewis Denison, "Our Bull Moose for 1922" a good moose hunting story, and "The Silver Salmon Fresh from the Sea" by Canada's foremost writer of Nova Scotian fishing and hunting, Bonnycastle Dale, are only a few of the good articles and stories contained in this issue. "Ranching the Silver Fox" by C. K. Walton, gives interesting side-lights into the management of a fox farm while F. V. Williams is represented by a good story of the north in winter. There are three first-class articles in the Guns and Ammunition department edited by C. S. Landis, while R. P. Lincoln, J. W. Winson, W. C. Motley, M. U. Bates and F. H. Walker have departments filled with material of interest to all who are interested in Canadian outdoor life. Seven good hunting and fishing stories in addition to fifteen articles dealing with every phase of sportsmanship makes the December issue of Rod and Gun in Canada a particularly interesting one.

Dwelling Damaged by Fire.

The residence of Mr. H. W. Huff, Water Street, was considerably damaged by fire on Wednesday morning. Neighbors noticed smoke issuing from the roof of the kitchen and telephone to an alarm to Central. The firemen were quickly on the scene and soon had the stream of water playing on the fire from the new hydrant at the corner of Richardson and Water streets. Mr. Huff had been away from home since the preceding Friday and it is a matter for the origin of the fire which was located as to having started around the stovepipe entrance to the second storey. A strong wind was blowing at the time and had the fire not been discovered before much headway had been gained it is difficult to tell just what might have happened to the surrounding houses. The contents were damaged by water, and the house suffered to quite an extent from the heat that the fire was burning upstairs and in the attic, which was impossible to get at without the firemen cutting their way into it. This is the first fire that has occurred in that section of the town for many years, and had not the Utilities Commission deemed it advisable to put in a main there last summer an altogether different story would, no doubt, have to be written of the fire.

Dwelling Damaged by Fire.

The residence of Mr. H. W. Huff, Water street, was considerably damaged by fire on Wednesday morning. Neighbors noticed smoke issuing from the roof of the kitchen and telephoned in an alarm to Central. The firemen were quickly on the scene and soon had two streams of water playing on the fire from the new hydrant at the corner of Richard and Water streets. Mr. Huff had been away from home since the preceding Friday and it is a mystery as to the origin of the fire, which was located as to having started around the stovepipe entrance to the second storey. A strong wind was blowing at the time and had the fire not been discovered before much headway had been gained it is difficult to tell just what might have happened to the surrounding houses. The contents were damaged by water, and the house suffered to quite an extent from the fact that the fire was burning upstairs and in the attic, which was impossible to get at without the firemen cutting their way into it. This is the first fire that has occurred in that section of the town for many years, and had not the Utilities Commission deemed it advisable to put in a main there last summer an altogether different story would, no doubt, have to be written of the fire.

STRATHCONA

A heavy snow storm swept this vicinity on Friday of last week, which, when mixed with the recent heavy rains, made a very slushy mixture. However, the moisture was greatly needed, and no one should complain. — Mr. Roy McLean has traded his old car for a comparatively new and much more up-to-date Ford coupe. — Mr. and Mrs. B. Finlay were in Moscow on Sunday, visiting at W. J. Patterson's. — Mr. Roy Thompson, of Teeswater, a former "Strathconaite", made a hurried visit to this village on Sunday last, and renewed a few old acquaintances.—Mr. and Mrs. G. R. Finlay, Mrs. A. H. Hoare, and Mrs. F. Best, attended the funeral of the late Mrs. H. N. Chase, Napanee, on Tuesday.—Mr. Donald Huffman was the guest of Mr. Harold Hoare on Sunday. Next Sabbath the Rev. Mr. McWilliams will preach at 2 p.m. Mr. McWilliams is a returned missionary, with a real, fresh, missionary message, so if you fail to hear him you are the loser. Sunday School as usual at 1.30. — Here are a few "Don'ts" for this season:

Don't think because the skies are black,
The sun can't shine again;
Don't think because the pavement's wet,
'Tis always going to rain;
Don't think because your friends seem gay,
They haven't known a sorrow;
Don't think because it's dull to-day
'Twill be the same to-morrow;
Don't think because sad sights you see,
You always ought to gloomy be;
Don't think because some folks have wealth,
They must be happier than yourself;
Don't think because you've suffered loss,
Yours is the one and only cross;
Don't think because sometimes you fail,
That things are never going well;
Don't think your lot the worst to bear,
While no one else has any care;
And, last of all, don't look for strife,
Just be contented with your life.

ARDEN

The many friends in this neighborhood were deeply shocked on Thursday afternoon, Nov. 22nd, to hear of the passing away of the late David James Woodcock. Although in failing health, death came even unexpectedly to his neighbors and friends. The late Mr. Woodcock was widely known and had many friends. He was 64 years of age, and lived his whole life on the farm where he died. He is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Andrew Watson and Georgina, who resides on the homestead. The funeral took place from his home on Saturday afternoon, service being conducted by his pastor, Rev. Mr. Stocker, under the 'Prentice Boys' Order, after which the remains were laid to rest in the family plot in the Methodist cemetery. His father and mother predeceased him a number of years ago, and one sister a few months ago.—Mr. and Mrs. Misorgan, of Tweed, spent last week-end at the Empire Hotel.—Mr. Harry Harper spent Sunday at Lillian Boomhour's. — Mr. Minor Boomhour has returned to his old home here, after spending a number of years in the west. — Misses Leita and Laura Greene spent a few days in Toronto this week. — Mr. Russell Gendron, also Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Post, of Smith's Falls, attended the funeral of the late Mr. Woodcock. — A number of our men here have been laid off the C. P. R. gangs for the winter. — Rumor says a wedding soon.

BEAVER LAKE

The recent snow storm has made the roads very muddy. — Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Lewis spent Wednesday night at Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Storrings.—Mr. Thomas Stinson is gaining nicely, and we hope to soon see him up and around again. —Mr. S. Garrison, of Tweed, has been spending a number of days with Mr. Stuart Storrings, fox hunting. — Mr. Herb. Hughes is visiting under the parental roof. — Mr. and Mrs. John McGarvey, of Camden East, called at Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Stinson's and also at Mr. and Mrs. James McDonnell's on Sunday. — Mr. and Mrs. Wickham, of Rochester, spent the deer hunting season with Mr. John Woodcock's. — Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Hughes called at Mr. and Mrs. Wellington Woodcock's on Sunday. — Miss Baker, of Napanee, who has been nursing Mr. Thomas Stinson for a number of weeks, returned to her home on Tuesday. — Mr. A. WELL KNOWN METHODIST MINISTER PASSED TO REST

Rev. William T. Wickett, Tyrone.

A very wide circle of admirers, ministerial and lay, learned with sincere regret of the death of one of the best loved members of the ministerial body of the Bay of Quinte Conference, who passed away at the Methodist Parsonage, Tyrone, on Sunday, Nov. 11th, 1922, in the person of Rev. William T. Wickett.

Mr. Wickett was in the thirty-fourth year of his ministry, and was spending the fifth year on Tyrone circuit, an evidence of his popularity with his people.

He was born near Columbus, Ont., in 1869, and entered the ministry in 1890, spending three years of probation on Muskoka fields and two years at Victoria College, Toronto, being ordained in 1895. He has since travelled on the following charges: Mountain Grove, Victoria Road, Morven, Bloomfield, Shannonville, Fraserville, Bethany, and Tyrone.

On every circuit he won the love and esteem of his parishioners and proved himself a strong preacher, an indefatigable pastor and a most successful soul-winner.

The funeral service was held at Tyrone on Tuesday, Nov. 14th. A brief service was held in the parsonage, with song and prayer by Rev. W. H. Sparzo, of Bowmanville. The cortege then proceeded to the church near by, where a congregation of some 400 gathered. Nearly every home on Tyrone circuit was represented, and friends were present from almost every field on which he had labored. Twenty-six ministers were present. The service was conducted by Rev. R. A. Whattam, of Colborne, President of the Conference, and addresses were given by Rev. S. C. Moore, Bowmanville, this chairman for four years), and Revs. R. A. Delve, of Brooklin, and Wesley Elliott, of Campbellford, two life-long chums. The pallbearers were six ministerial brethern: Revs. J. S. McMullen, W. Elliott, R. A. Delve, A. K. Edmison, R. G. Carruthers, and W. W. Jones. The remains were then taken to Little Britain. Next day some 200 people gathered at the old home, where service was conducted by Rev. E. A. McCutcheon, the pastor.

Loving tributes were paid by old friends, Revs. R. A. Delve, A. R. Sanderson, R. Greatrix. The body was laid to rest in Little Britain Methodist Cemetery, with the A. F. & A. M. Lodge, of Orono, of which deceased was a member, assisting at the grave. The Methodist Church and ministry loses one of its choicest and noblest spirits in the departure of this earnest godly man, whom everybody loved and admired.

(From Oshawa Telegram)

We have pleasure in adding these paragraphs from an excellent report that appears in the Oshawa Telegram:

His many brother ministers and other friends throughout what is known as the Bowmanville District, in fact, throughout the whole Bay of Quinte Conference, were saddened when it became known that Rev. W. T. Wickett, of Tyrone, was very ill, with little hope of recovery, and they were deeply sorrowful when the news came that he had passed to his reward.

Rev. Mr. Wickett was a brother beloved in the work of the Christian Church, he was a thorough christian and one of whom it can truly be said: "He was a man who feared God, honored the King, and loved the Brotherhood".

He was born at Columbus and received his High School educaation in Oshawa. For his academic and theological courses he attended Albert College and Victoria University. He spent 32 years in the active ministry. He was very anxious about the welfare of his people; he prayed for them often, and in his preaching and in the everyday ministries of his work among the people he ever sought to keep before them Jesus as a guide and pattern for holy living and lofty thought.

We shall never forget the words of inspiration and optimism uttered by deceased at the last District meeting held in Simroe St. Methodist Church, Oshawa, a few weeks ago. A period of the session was set apart for prayer and the Rev. Mr. Wickett participated, and not only his spirit but the hearts of all present felt the blessed presence of the Holy Spirit on that occasion.

The sympathy of a very wide circle of friends goes out to Mrs. Wickett in her bereavement.

The ministers who delivered addresses at the funeral all spoke of the many high personal qualities of their deceased brother and his deeply consecrated spirit. He was beloved as a fellow man for his many social qualities, and he won a permanent place in the love and affection of the people with whom and for whom he labored, in various circuits throughout the conference.

Attendance of young and old at the funeral was very large. The church and school room were filled to overflow with those who came to pay their last tribute of respect and a very large number could not gain admission.

Those ministers of the district other than those already mentioned as present at the service at Tyrone: Revs. W. A. Bunner, F. H. Howard, J. H. McBain, J. F. Evenden, H. J. Latimer, E. A. Tonkin, W. H. Sparzo, F. T. Richards, R. M. Patterson, S. T. Tucker, W. M. Leigh and W. H. Dafoe.—The Canadian Statesman, Bowmanville, Nov. 22nd, 1922.

The words "French Ivory" are greatly abused. When we offer you French Ivory we guarantee it to be made in France. Let us show you some of the different lines in Military Reading Lamps, Jewel Boxes, Vanity Cases, Mirrors and Brushes. The same goods as we have sold for years. See the display at Wallace's.

NEWBURGH

Newburgh is certainly loosing its morality or somebody inside or outside of the village has become most hungry and sold their birthright for a mess of venison, and Mr. George Walker has been called upon, without his consent, to contribute to their depraved desires. To be explicit, Mr. Walker, after tramping the back country after deer, secured one, the carcass of which he brought home and hung up in his ice-house, and some sneak thief purloined the whole thing. Perhaps to some this may seem a joke, but it could easily mean the penitentiary to the parties if caught.

Mr. James Wales has secured another home for himself, having bought the old Finkle place from Mr. G. A. Aylesworth. Although Mr. Wales has come out of his real estate deals well, financially, he will likely regret any desires to buy his home from him again, as an unfriendly act.

Mr. Peter Tompkins, who has been in the General Hospital, Kingston, with a compound fracture of the thigh, is home, and is doing as well as could be expected.

Mrs. Conway has gone to Toronto to spend some time with her daughter, Mrs. Cain.

Mrs. Geo. Paul, of Toronto, with her children, are visiting Mrs. Paul's grandmother, Mrs. Samantha Shorey.

Bills are out for the High School Commencement entertainment, which takes place on Dec. 7th, in the Standard Bank Hall. The bills are the work of the High School students and display considerable artistic ability.

On December 19th the annual Sunday School entertainment of the Union Sunday School will be held in the basement of the church. The pupils of the Public School are to furnish the programme. The proceeds will be equally divided between the Sunday School and the Public School. The part going to the Public School will be used towards purchasing a graphonola for the school.

Mail Orders promptly filled at Wallace's Drug Store.

Playing Cards and Tally Cards for the Euchre or Bridge, at Wallace's.

WILTON

Y. P. S. meeting on Friday evening was a decided success. Pickering poultry was the order of the day in this locality, and a number attended the Poultry Fair in Napanee. —The Y. P. S. held their social evening last Friday evening in the League room. There was a large crowd present and all report a very pleasant evening. Miss Marjory Storms gave a report of the Y. P. S. convention at Belleville. This report was very ably given, and all who were absent missed something worth while. They also played games and had contests, after which lunch was served. Eleven new members joined the society, which was very encouraging to the President. — The many friends in this neighborhood were shocked to hear of the passing away of the late Archie Stover, son of Mrs. C. Stover. Although in poor health, death came rather unexpectedly. He is survived by his mother and one sister, Mrs. C. Emberley. The funeral took place in the Methodist Church, service being conducted by his pastor, Rev. S. F. Dixon.—The W. M. S. met at the home of Mrs. S. C. Storms on Thursday afternoon. About thirty ladies were present.—A number of friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Brown, prior to their departure for Belleville, and presented them with a purse. They will be greatly missed from the community. — Our local nimrods have returned and report good success in obtaining their quota of deer. — Be sure and reserve New Year's night for the "Wilton tea-meeting".

DR. TAYLOR AT ST. ANDREW'S CHURCH

Napanee has had the opportunity lately of hearing some very outstanding speakers. Professor Mashih of India, Professor Kerr of Manitoba College, Dr. Robertson of Toronto, and now Principal Bruce Taylor of Queen's.

Dr. Taylor has been suffering for some time with an injured leg and has not preached for three months prior to his visit to Napanee, so that the town was particularly fortunate in having his service. It was Anniversary Sunday in St. Andrew's Church and the Methodist Churches had closed for the occasion. At both services the church was filled to its capacity, and the large number who were present were not disappointed. In the morning the preacher took as his text the lesting of the army that were commissioned with the task of saving Israel under Gideon. He explained that the basis of the test was one of attitude and that such must ever be the test that determines one's success in life. Applying this to work, to the public questions of the day, to life in general, to the Bible, and to religion, the speaker sought to show that the condition which determines one's personal happiness or unhappiness was spiritual, and inward. His attitude to these things determines what a man gets out of them.

In the evening, again taking an Old Testament text, Dr. Taylor developed the theme of the inadequacy of forms to bind for all time. Spiritual things cannot be confined permanently in any set forms, for being spiritual they must sooner or later break away from them. Applying that to creeds he pointed out that while a creed contains the heart of spiritual truth, yet the creeds themselves at best can only express these truths in terms of the age in which they were formulated; and that other days must restate that belief in their own language. That was what the present Union movement sought to do. Speaking of this movement, the speaker coined a phrase, a happy aphorism which might even be called a slogan. "I am living", he said, "not for Scotland's yesterdays, but for Canada's to-morrows".

In different ways this principle was applied by Dr. Taylor, to the social, political and religious life of the individual, and he showed by argument and illustration that stagnation and religious depression always accompanied attempts to confine within restricted bounds spiritual things whose very nature was growth and change.

The sermons were delivered in Dr. Taylor's inimitable interesting style, profoundly simple and withal interesting thought provoking, and deeply inspiring.

SURPRISE BIRTHDAY PARTY

Mr. Everton L. VanLaven, Moscow, on returning home from Napanee on Friday evening, Nov. 23rd, was much surprised on nearing his home to see it so brilliantly illuminated and much more surprised when entering his home to see the long table laid, and to find his two sons, Harry L., and wife, also Miss Leslie, of Napanee, and E. Wray and wife, Kingston, also a few of his most intimate friends and neighbors waiting to greet him and wish him many returns of the day. Mrs. VanLaven and Miss Ritchie, the genial assistant postmistress, had planned the affair so that it was a complete surprise to Mr. VanLaven, and was, therefore, all the more enjoyed by all present. Mr. VanLaven has been in the grocery business for over twenty years ago and, as he says, assisted in the postoffice and store from the date of his birth, with his twin brother, Egerton (VanLaven Bros.), which occurred on Nov. 23rd, 1858, at Moscow, so he has resided for sixty-five years there. After partaking of the good things provided for the occasion, mostly when "Dad" was away, the company enjoyed themselves in numerous different ways for some time, then all left after wishing Mr. VanLaven (the young old gentleman) many returns of the day, and that Mrs. VanLaven may also be spared many years to enjoy together, as they seemingly have done since their marriage, over twenty- six years ago.

CAMDEN EAST

Our fine weather has changed to colder weather, and we had a fall of snow on Friday night last.—Mr. and Mrs. L. Hartman entertained a number of their Ernesttown friends on Thursday evening of last week, to a 7 o'clock dinner, and the evening was spent in social chat, music and games. —Miss Lucy Hinch, of Napanee, spent last week-end with her friend at the home of Dr. Yourex's.—Mrs. Jessie Card and Mrs. Claude Hinch spent Saturday evening last with their daughter, Mrs. Jas. Macdonald and family at Napanee.—Mr. John McGarvey, who sports a new Gray Dort car, motored to Tamworth on Sunday last to spend the day.—The Public School will give their concert on Tuesday evening, Dec. 4th, in the Parish Hall. An excellent programme is being prepared. Admission 15c. Every person come and enjoy a good entertainment. Collection at the door. Closed at Wallace's Drug Store.

TURKEY DAYS.

Napanee upheld its record as a poultry centre this week, when on Wednesday and Thursday the dressed poultry fair was held. The streets were lined with cars and trucks from either side the whole of Wednesday, and some were unable to unload and had to return the next day.

The prices were a chief topic of discussion. Last year the farmers were paid prices above their expectations, but this year in keeping with the price of all farm produce, that given by the buyers was below what the producer had hoped for. The comparison between last year's prices and those of this year is interesting:

	1922	1923
Chickens	25-30c	20-25c
Hens	18-22c	16-20c
Geese	22c	18-20c
Ducks	26c	18-22c
Turkeys	40-45c	25-30c

The railroad buyers were not present this season, but the largest wholesale packers in the country had their representatives. Men were here from Swift Canadian, Harris Abbitoir, Henry Gatehouse Co., Poulin & Co., Alex. Gosling, T. A. Rogers and Whyte Packing Co. Besides there were three local buyers, M. B. Mills, Hugh Mann & Milling, and Frank D. Marsh.

The quality of the fowl was of a high standard, and the amount exceeded even that of last year, which was the previous high record. The total amount paid out by the four banks in the town was about eighty-nine thousand dollars. Last year the amount paid out was seventy-five thousand dollars. So that when the lower price is taken into consideration, it can easily be seen how much more in weight was handled this year than in 1922. Though total weights are not yet available, a fair estimate is that 275 tons were bought up by the buyers.

This constitutes a good deal of business for two days, and even though the prices were low, the ready money distributed through the county and adjoining townships is another indication of the prosperity and general well being of the community.

Napanee by its high class poultry and its carefully dressing of the fowl has attained an enviable position in this branch of production, which it should aim never to lose.

STRATHCONA

A heavy snow storm swept this vicinity on Friday of last week, which, when mixed with the recent heavy rains, made a very slushy mixture. However, the moisture was greatly needed, and no one should complain. — Mr. Roy McLean has traded his old car for a comparatively new one, much more up-to-date Ford coupe. — Mr. and Mrs. B. Finlay were in Moscow on Sunday, visiting at W. J. Patterson's. — Mr. Leroy Thompson, of Teeswater, a former "Strathconaite", made a hurried visit to this village on Sunday last, and renewed a few old acquaintances. — Mr. and Mrs. G. R. Finlay, Mrs. A. H. Hoare, and Mrs. F. Best, attended the funeral of the late Mrs. H. N. Chase, Napanee, on Tuesday. — Mr. Donald Huffman was the guest of Mr. Harold Hoare on Sunday.

Next Sabbath the Rev. Mr. McWilliams will preach at 2 p.m. Mr. McWilliams is a returned missionary, with a real, fresh, missionary message, so if you fail to hear him you are the loser. Sunday School as usual at 1.30. — Here are a few "Don'ts" for this season:

Don't think because the skies are black,
The sun can't shine again;
Don't think because the pavement's wet,
'Tis always going to rain;
Don't think because your friends seem gay,
They haven't known a sorrow;
Don't think because it's dull to-day,
'Twill be the same to-morrow;
Don't think because sad sights you see,
You always ought to gloomy be;
Don't think because some folks have wealth,
They must be happier than yourself;
Don't think because you've suffered loss,
Yours is the one and only cross;
Don't think because sometimes you fail,
That things are never going well;
Don't think your lot the worst to bear,
While no one else has any care;
And, last of all, don't look for strife,
Just be contented with your life.

ARDEN

The many friends in this neighborhood were deeply shocked on Thursday afternoon, Nov. 22nd, to hear of the passing away of the late David James Woodcock. Although in failing health, death came even unexpectedly to his neighbors and friends. The late Mr. Woodcock was widely known and had many friends. He was 64 years of age, and lived his whole life on the farm where he died. He is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Andrew Watson and Georgina, who resides on the homestead. The funeral took place from his home on Saturday afternoon, service being conducted by his pastor, Rev. Mr. Stocker, under the "Prentice Boys' Order, after which the remains were laid to rest in the family plot in the Methodist cemetery. Storrings'.—Mr. Thomas Stinson is gaining nicely, and we hope to soon see him up and around again.—Mr. S. Garrison, of Tweed, has been spending a number of days with Mr. Stuart Storrings, fox hunting.—Mr. Herb. WELL KNOWN METHODIST MINISTER PASSED TO REST

Rev. William T. Wickett, Tyrone.

A very wide circle of admirers, ministerial and lay, learned with sincere regret of the death of one of the best loved members of the ministerial body of the Bay of Quinte Conference, who passed away at the Methodist Parsonage, Tyrone, on Sunday, Nov. 11th, 1922, in the person of Rev. William T. Wickett.

Mr. Wickett was in the thirty-fourth year of his ministry, and was spending the fifth year on the present circuit, an evidence of his popularity with his people.

He was born near Columbus, Ont., in 1869, and entered the ministry in 1890, spending three years of probation at Muskoka Falls and two years at Victoria College, Toronto, being ordained in 1895. He has since travelled on the following charges: Mountain Grove, Victoria Road, Morven, Tamworth, Shannonville, Fraserville, Bethany, and Tyrone.

On every circuit he won the love and esteem of his parishioners and proved himself a strong preacher, an indefatigable pastor and a most successful soul-winner.

The funeral service was held at Tyrone on Tuesday, Nov. 14th. A brief service was held in the parsonage, with song and prayer by Rev. W. H. Sparge, of Bowmanville. The cortege then proceeded to the church near by, where a congregation of some 400 gathered. Nearly every home on Tyrone circuit was represented, and friends were present from almost every field on which he had labored. Twenty-six ministers were present. The service was conducted by Rev. R. A. Whattam, of Colborne, President of the Conference, and addresses were given by Rev. S. C. Moore, Bowmanville, this chairman for four years), and Revs. E. A. Delve, of Brooklin, and Wesley Elliott, of Campbellford, two life-long chums. The pallbearers were six ministerial brethern: Revs. J. S. McMullen, W. Elliott, R. A. Delve, A. K. Edmison, R. G. Carruthers, and W. W. Lane. The remains were then taken to Little Britain. Next day some 200 people gathered at the old home, where service was conducted by Rev. E. A. McCutcheon, the pastor.

Loving tributes were paid by old friends, Revs. R. A. Delve, A. R. Sanderson, B. Greatrix. The body was laid to rest in Little Britain Methodist Cemetery, with the A.F. & A.M. Lodge, of Orono, of which deceased was a member, assisting at the grave. The Methodist Church and ministry lose one of its choicest and noblest spirits in the departure of this earnest godly man, whom everybody loved and admired.

(From Oshawa Telegram)

We have pleasure in adding these paragraphs from an excellent report that appears in the Oshawa Telegram: His many brother ministers and other friends throughout what is known as the Bowmanville District, in fact, throughout the whole Bay of Quinte Conference, were saddened when it became known that Rev. W. T. Wickett, of Tyrone, was very ill, with little hope of recovery, and they were deeply sorrowful when the news came that he had passed to his reward.

Rev. Mr. Wickett was a brother beloved in the work of the Christian Church, he was a fine Christian and one of whom it can truly be said: "He was a man who feared God, honored the King, and loved the Brotherhood".

He was born at Columbus and received his High School education in Oshawa. For his academic and theological courses he attended Albert College and Victoria University. He spent 33 years in the active ministry.

He was very anxious about the welfare of his people; he prayed for them often, and in his preaching and in the everyday ministries of his work among the people he ever sought to keep before them Jesus as a guide and pattern for holy living and lofty thought.

We shall never forget the words of inspiration and optimism uttered by deceased at the last District meeting held in Simcoe St. Methodist Church, Oshawa, a few weeks ago. A period of the session was set apart for prayer and the Rev. Mr. Wickett participated, and not only his spirit but the hearts of all present felt the blessed presence of the Holy Spirit on that occasion.

The sympathy of a very wide circle of friends goes out to Mrs. Wickett in her bereavement.

The ministers who delivered addresses at the funeral all spoke of the many high personal qualities of their deceased brother and his deeply consecrated spirit. He was beloved as a fellow man for his many social qualities, and he won a permanent place in the love and affection of the people with whom he labored, for whom he labored, in various circuits throughout the conference.

Attendance of young and old at the funeral was very large. The church and school room were filled to overflow with those who came to pay their last tribute of respect and a very large number could not gain admission.

Those ministers of the district other than those already mentioned were present at the service at Tyrone: Revs. W. A. Bunner, F. H. Howard, J. H. McBain, J. E. Everson, H. J. Latimer, E. A. Tonkin, W. H. Sparge, R. T. Richards, R. W. Patterson, S. T. Tucker, W. W. Leigh and W. H. Dafoe.—The Canadian Statesman, Bowmanville, Nov. 22nd, 1923.

The words "French Ivory" are greatly abused. When we offer you French Ivory we guarantee it to be made in France. Let us show you some of the different pieces.—Clocks, Reading Lamps, Jewel Boxes, Vanity Cases, Mirrors and Stones. The prices possible are as low as we have sold for years. See the display at Wallace's.

NEWBURGH

Newburgh is certainly loosing its morality or somebody inside or outside of the village has become most hungry and sold their birthright for a mess of venison, and Mr. George Walker has been called upon, without his consent, to contribute to their depraved desires. To be explicit, Mr. Walker, after tramping the back country after deer, secured one, the carcass of which he brought home and hung up in his ice-house, and some sneak thief purloined the whole thing. Perhaps to some people it will seem a joke, but it could easily mean the penitentiary to the parties if caught.

Mr. James Wales has secured another home for himself, having bought the old Finkle place from Mr. G. A. Aylesworth. Although Mr. Wales has come out of his real estate deals well, financially, he will likely regard any desire to buy his home from him again, as an unfriendly act.

Mr. Peter Tompkins, who has been in the General Hospital, Kingston, with a compound fracture of the thigh, is home, and is doing as well as could be expected.

Mrs. Conway has gone to Toronto to spend some time with her daughter, Mrs. Cain.

Mrs. Geo. Paul, of Toronto, with her children, are visiting Mrs. Paul's grandmother, Mrs. Samantha Shorey.

Bills are out for the High School Commencement entertainment, which takes place on Dec. 7th, in the Standard Bank Hall. The bills are the work of the High School students and display considerable artistic ability.

On December 19th the annual Sunday School entertainment of the Union Sunday School will be held in the basement of the church. The pupils of the Public School are to furnish the programme. The proceeds will be equally divided between the Sunday School and the Public School. The part going to the Public School will be used towards purchasing a graphonola for the school.

Mail Orders promptly filled at Wallace's Drug Store.

ANDERSON

We were visited with a real snow storm on Friday, but the beautiful has almost disappeared again, and at present we have quite winter weather.—A meeting of the Ladies' Aid was held at the home of Mrs. A. Parks', for a few days.—The annual Missionary service was held in Anderson Church on Sunday evening, the Rev. Mr. Merrick, of Morven, officiating.

Playing Cards and Tally Cards for the Euchre or Bridge, at Wallace's.

WILTON

Y. P. S. meeting on Friday evening was a decided success. — Picking poultry was the order of the day in this locality, and a number attended the Poultry Fair in Napanee. —The V. P. S. held their social evening last Friday night in the League room. There was a large crowd present and all report a very pleasant evening. Miss Marjory Storms gave a report of the Y. P. S. convention at Belleville. This report was very ably given, and all who were absent missed something worth while. They all played games and had contests, after which lunch was served. Eleven new members joined the society, which was very encouraging to the President. — The many friends in this neighborhood were shocked to hear of the passing away of the late Archie Stover, son of Mrs. C. Stover. Although in failing health death came rather unexpectedly. He is survived by his mother and one sister, Mrs. C. Emberley. The funeral took place in the Methodist church, service being conducted by his pastor, Rev. S. F. Dixon.—The W. M. S. met at the home of Mrs. S. C. Storms on Thursday afternoon. About thirty ladies were present.—A number of friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Brown, prior to their departure for Switzerville, and presented them with a purse. They will be greatly missed from the community. — Our local nimrods have returned and report good success in obtaining their quota of deer. — Be sure and reserve New Year's night for the "Wilton tea-meeting".

DR. TAYLOR AT ST. ANDREW'S CHURCH

Napanee has had the opportunity lately of hearing some very outstanding speakers. Professor Mushili of India, Professor Kerr of Manitoba College, Dr. Robertson of Toronto, and now Principal Bruce Taylor of Queen's.

Dr. Taylor has been specially for some time with an injured leg and has not preached for three months prior to his visit to Napanee, and the town was particularly fortunate in having his service. It was Anniversary Sunday in St. Andrew's Church and the Methodist Churches had closed for the occasion. At both services the church was filled to its capacity, and the large number who were present were not disappointed. In the morning the preacher took as his text the testing of the army that were commissioned with the task of saving Israel under Gideon. He explained that the basis of the test was one of attitude and that such must ever be the test that determines one's success in life. Applying this to work, to the public questions of the day, to life in general, to the Bible, and to religion, the speaker sought to show that the condition which determines one's personal happiness or unhappiness was spiritual, and spiritual. His attitude to these things determines what a man gets out of them.

"In the evening, again taking an Old Testament text, Dr. Taylor developed the theme of the inadequacy of forms to bind for all time. Spiritual things cannot be confined permanently in any set-phrases, for being spiritual they must sooner or later break away from them. Applying this to creeds he pointed out that while a creed contains the heart of spiritual truth, yet the creeds themselves at best can only express these truths in terms of the day in which they were formulated; and that other days must restate that belief in their own language. That was what the present Union movement ought to do. Speaking of this movement, the speaker coined a phrase, a happy aphorism which might even be called a slogan. "I am living", he said, "not for Scotland's yesterdays, but for Canada's to-morrows".

In different ways this principle was applied by Dr. Taylor, to the social, political and religious life of the individual, and he showed by argument and illustration that stagnation and religious depression always accompanied the attempt to confine within restricted bounds spiritual things whose very nature was growth and change.

The sermons were delivered in Dr. Taylor's best conversational style, profoundly simple and withal interesting thought provoking, and deeply inspiring.

SURPRISE BIRTHDAY PARTY

Mr. Everton L. VanLaveen, Moscow, on returning home from Napanee on Friday evening, Nov. 23rd, was much surprised on nearing his home to see it so brilliantly illuminated and much more surprised when entering his home to see the long table laid, and to find his two sons, Harry L., and wife, also Miss Gaffney, of Napanee, and E. Wray and wife, Kingston, also a few of his most intimate friends and neighbors waiting to greet him and wish him many returns of the day. Mrs. VanLaveen and Miss Ritchie, the genial assistant postmistress, had planned the affair so that it was a complete surprise to Mr. VanLaveen and was, therefore, all the more enjoyed by all present. Mr. VanLaveen succeeded his father as postmaster over twenty years ago and, as he says, assisted in the postoffice and store from the date of his birth, with his twin brother, Egerton (VanLaveen Bros.), which occurred on Nov. 23rd, 1858, at Moscow. So he has resided for sixty-five years there. After partaking of the good things provided for the occasion, mostly when "Dad" was away, the company enjoyed themselves with music and games, ways for some time, then all left after wishing Mr. VanLaveen (the young old gentleman) many returns of the day, and that Mrs. VanLaveen may spend many years to enjoy together, as they seemingly have done since their marriage, over twenty- six years ago.

If your boy or girl could select his or her own Xmas gift, a Brownie or Kodak would surely be first choice for most of them. Brownies are $2.50 and $3.50, and are sold in Napanee only at Wallace's.

CAMDEN EAST

Our fine weather has changed to colder weather, and we had a fall of snow on Friday night last.—Mr. and Mrs. Herman entertained several of their Ernestown friends on Thursday evening of last week, to a 7 o'clock dinner, in honor of the birthday of Dr. Yourex's.—Mrs. Jessie Card, and Mrs. Claude Hinch spent Saturday and Sunday in Mrs. Greenway's house for the winter months.—Mrs. Greenway is living with her daughter, Mrs. Jas. Macdonald, for the winter.—Mr. and Mrs. J. Tipson took tea Sunday evening last with Mrs. Jas. Macdonald and family and Mrs. Greenway.—Mrs. Well Stewart spent last week with her daughter and Mrs. Fred Henderson, and family, near Napanee.—Mr. John McGarvey, who spends a new Gray Dort car to motored to Tamworth on Sunday last to spend the day.—The Public School will give their concert on Tuesday evening, Dec. 4th, in the Parish Hall. An excellent programme is being prepared. Admission 15c. Every person come and enjoy a good entertainment. Confectionery always filled at Wallace's Drug Store.

TURKEY DAYS.

Napanee upheld its record as a poultry centre this week, when on Wednesday and Thursday the dressed poultry fair was held. The streets were lined with cars and rigs on either side the whole of Wednesday, and some were unable to unload and had to return the next day.

The prices were a chief topic of discussion. Last year the farmers were paid prices above their expectations, but this year in keeping with the price of all farm produce, that given by the buyers was below what the producer had hoped for. The comparison between last year's prices and those of this year is interesting:

	1922	1923
Chickens	25-30c	20-25c
Hens	18-22c	16-20c
Geese	22c	18-20c
Ducks	26c	18-22c
Turkeys	40-45c	25-30c

The railroad buyers were not present this season, but the largest wholesale packers in the country had their representatives. Men were here from Swift Canadian, Harris Abbitoir, Henry Gatehouse Co., Poulin & Co., Alex. Gordon, T. A. Rogers and Whyte Packing to name a few. There were three local buyers, M. B. Mills, Hugh Milling, and Frank D. Marsh.

The quality of the fowl was of a high standard, and the amount exceeded even that of last year, which was the previous high record. The total amount paid out by the four banks in the town was about eighty-nine thousand dollars. So that when the lower price is taken into consideration, it can easily be seen how much more in weight was handled this year than in 1922. Though total weights are not yet available, a fair estimate is that 275 tons were bought up by the buyers.

This constitutes a good deal of business for two days, and even though the prices were low, the ready money distributed through the county and adjoining townships is another indication of the prosperity and general well being of the community.

Napanee by its high class poultry and its carefully dressing of the fowl has attained an enviable position in this branch of production, which it should aim never to lose.

B. Clancy's.—Church will be held at 7 o'clock on Sunday evening.

HAWLEY

The weather continues mild and cloudy.—A number from Hawley attended the funeral of Mrs. Sam. Walmsley, on Sunday.—Farmers had two very busy days, plucking poultry. Although it is hard work, when a number work together, the time passes quickly with jokes and laughter. CRADLE OF HUMAN RACE YIELDS RARE TREASURES

Back from the plains of Mongolia where was situated the Garden of Eden, or at least the birthplace of the human race, and it is believed, the oldest part of the world to support life, has come Roy Chapman Andrews head of the expedition sent out by the American Museum of Natural History and "Asia Magazine". He comes, too, with one of the greatest of finds, twenty-five dinosaur eggs said to be 10,000,000 years old and with other treasures to be enumerated later. This was the third expedition under Mr. Andrews and by far the most successful. In two periods of five months he and his assistant experts did work that ordinarily would have required ten years. They are back much earlier than they intended, because of the richness of their finds and the belief that if many of them were not brought back to civilization they might be damaged. Much of their success was due to the fact that they used automobiles, the first time the machines were ever seen in Mongolia. These the explorers employed to scout over the country while their supplies were transported on the backs of camels. In the machines over country that had never seen a wheel of any kind they were able to travel 150 miles a day while the camels would travel but 15. Mr. Andrews says that with motor cars vast unexplored portions of Mongolia can be opened up and will yield rich dividends in commerce.

Low in Civilization.

Slowness of transportation has hitherto kept explorers out of Mongolia. The country is too vast to be exploited at the rate of 15 miles a day. Otherwise it offers great prospects. Water abounds and there is plenty of game. The people are of course debased in superstition, but they appear to be timid rather than ferocious and the Andrews expedition was only in danger once, and that was when Mr. Andrews, desiring to test a revolver, was about to discharge it at what appeared to be a white stone. In the nick of time he discovered that it was a bleached human skull, and to have struck this would have been to bring terrible bad luck upon the tribe —and also upon the explorers. The belief of the Mongolians is that spirits come back to haunt the living. When one of them dies the body is put on a cart and driven at breakneck speed over rough ground so that it falls off. The driver never looks behind, because this would incense the spirit to return, but makes his way home as fast as he can. The district surrounding a village would thus be strewn with unburied corpses if it were not for the presence of huge half savage dogs, which devour the dead bodies, and which, when the bodies are not plentiful, are fiercer than wolves and try to drag down living beings. Mr. Andrews had a narrow escape from a band of these brutes.

Treasure Trove.

The following are the chief fruits of the expedition :—

1. Twenty-five dinosaur eggs, the first ever discovered.

2. Seventy skulls in all stages of development of Protoceratops. This is a form ancestral to the frilled, horned dinosaurs of America. The eggs are from this reptile.

3. Choice skeleton material of the semi-aquatic dinosaurs related to the duck-bill Trachodon and Iguanodon of Europe and America.

4. A skull of the largest flesh-eating mammal ever known — a great open-like animal, about thirty feet long, with a jaw spread of two and two feet, somewhat similar to the Mesonyx of the Uintah Mountains, in Utah.

5. Twelve skulls of Titanotheres, an extinct family of huge beasts first discovered in South Dakota. To the geologists these constituted convincing evidence of a close land connection between Mongolia and the Rocky Mountains in the early age of mammals.

Remarkable Discoveries.

6. One complete skeleton and parts of other skeletons and skulls of rhinoceroses similar to those of Eastern Nebraska. According to Mr. Andrews, the entire mammalian fauna of this period is practically identical with that which ranged through Utah, Wyoming and South Dakota in the middle of the Age of Mammals, except for cameis, which are found only in America, and for horses, which appear to have been more abundant in America than in Asia at that time.

7. Discovery of Permian deposits of marine invertebrates which would seem to prove that a wide seaway extended straight through Mongolia during ancient Permian times.

8. Discovery of the greatest known fossil field.

9. Discovery of the skull of Baluchiterium, a giant browsing rhinoceros, the largest land mammal known to science.

10. Obtained thousands of specimens of living mammals, birds, fishes, reptiles and batrachians—the largest collection of mammals ever taken from any part of Asia in a single season.

The Dinosaur's Eggs.

The eggs of that monster reptile, the dinosaur, are considered, of course, the great prize, yet they were found with less trouble than the eggs of many a lay-away hen. It appears that George Olson, one of the assistants in paleontology, was strolling near the camp one night when he came upon the eggs lying on the ground. He rushed back with news of his discovery. His companions told him that he was crazy, that it was impossible that they should be lying on the surface, as exposed as pebbles, when the dinosaur had been extinct for millions of years. Yet that is the miracle that had happened for upon examination the eggs were found to contain the skeletons of baby dinosaurs, they had been laid on the sand and covered up to hatch. Six inches away lay the fossilized remains of a dinosaur that may have laid the eggs. One of the problems of the expedition was the packing of the specimens. Plenty of packing material had been taken along, but the harvest was so rich that it was exhausted, and some of the delicate skeletons were wrapped in the clothing of the men. A solution was found eventually by plucking the hair from their camels.

MAPLE LEAF INSTITUTE

The regular monthly meeting of the Maple Leaf Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Wesley Cummings, Big Creek, on Friday afternoon, Oct. 26th, at 1.30, with an attendance of some twenty-three ladies. The meeting took the form of "Thanksgiving", which is to commemorate Armistice Day, in loving memory of our dear Canadian boys who fell in the great War of 1914. The meeting was opened in the usual Institute way, with all the officers present. Mrs. J. B. Sharpe was then asked to give a paper on Armistice Day and the history of the war from the beginning, which was very interesting. Following, Mesdames W. R. Smith, W. Freitts and A. Curle sang "Rule Britania". Then a short paper was read by Mrs. A. Curle, on "Poppy Day", which is being established by the G. W. V. A. Mrs. John Chambers then recited a poem on "Thanksgiving", which she had learned when at school, which related so many things to be thankful for. Mrs. J. B. Miller, Napanee, Hon. Pres., gave a short prayer, which so fittingly expressed the thankfulness of the members. This finishing the programme of the meeting, the usual business part of the meeting was proceeded with. A report of the School Fair at Sillsville, on Oct. 3rd, when the members had a tent on the ground was then read, which netted a neat sum for the Institute, which they intend using in the Big Creek and Hawley School for the betterment of the equipment of these schools. After all the business was transacted, our hostess served a dainty lunch.

SCOTLAND HAS ITS LOURDES.

Thousands of Scots Pilgrims to Shrine In Hope of Cures.

Thousands of people from all parts of Scotland — and not a few from over the border—are making the little village of Carfin, three miles from Motherwell, a centre of pilgrimage these days. Over a year ago, opposite the Roman Catholic chapel at Carfin, was opened the Notre Dame de Lourdes Institute. The building, much of the work of which was voluntary, has proved a centre of attraction to the youth of the village. Adjoining the institute, and in the grounds of the parisa, which is dedicated to St. Xavier, there has been installed a reproduction of the miraculous grotto of Lourdes in France. Rev. Father Taylor has charge of the mission at Carfin, and with such surroundings it is only in the nature of things that the holy days and picturesque festivals of the church could take on an impressiveness and attract large gatherings.

On the occasion of the Feast of Corpus Christi, it was computed that 50,000 people from all parts of Scotland visited Carfin. More recently busy scenes were again enacted in the little village. Motor cars containing pilgrims from outlying districts began to arrive early in the morning, and continued throughout the day. Stories of marvellous cures effected as a result of a visit to the "grotto" has helped to swell the crowds visiting the village. In private dwellings arrangements have been made to supply the material wants of the visitors and many of the villagers are reaping quite a harvest as a result.

But the pilgrimage is not only confined to the seventh day of the week. The village almost any day is alive with pilgrims from the city, as well as the surrounding districts. They are making the "grotto" a centre of religious devotion. Amongst the pilgrims cured as a result of a visit to the "grotto" there is an old lady, who was able to dispense with her crutches. Another woman suffering from deafness, is averred to have been completely cured.

Divining Metals.

A very delicate piece of apparatus which can be used for divining the presence of metals under the ground has recently been invented. It shows to the scientist the way in which gravity varies from point to point, at or near the earth's surface.

The instrument has been so arranged that it can easily be taken from place to place, set up on the ground without masonry foundations, and used without any shelter except that of a small tent. A mass of heavy ore, even if buried in the ground, affects the pull of gravity on the instrument if this is placed near it, and affects two plumb bobs differently. One of these is at a lower level than the other. The two are connected and the system is set up by a long, fine metal wire. The whole arrangement forms what is known as a torsion balance.

The twist in the wire measures the irregularity in the action of gravity caused by the ore bed, by a neighboring hill, a cave beneath the surface, and so forth. By a careful study of the readings of the instrument it is possible to find the best position for sinking a mine shaft to tap the ore bed.

Where Miles Grow Longer.

When you are told that it is a mile from X to Y, do you really know how far it is? asks a London writer.

To begin with, it all depends on what country you are in and what a mile means to your informant. He may be thinking of a geographical or nautical mile, which is 6,085 feet in length, whereas the ordinary English mile is only 5,280 feet.

If you are directed by a Scotsman, you should remember that the Scottish mile is 5,928 feet in length. An Irishman might have measured the distance in Irish miles, which contain 6,720 feet.

If you were told by a German that it was a mile from X to Y, you would find it a very long journey, as the German mile is 24,318 feet long.

The French kilometre is a little less than two-thirds of the English mile. The Brazilians have a unit of measure, known as a millia, which is one and one-fourth as long as the English mile; while the Japanese ri is two and a-half times as long as the English mile.

"Before I Die."

To endow "before I die some sort of green place where little street urchins could play cricket, all accessories provided," was one of the dreams of Herbert Jenkins, London publisher. He began life at fifteen in a bookseller's shop. He and another boy used to sit up half the night devouring books. That boy was the poet, John Masefield. Walking to save a penny omnibus fare, refusing an invitation to a river picnic because of a sixpenny railroad fare, lunching on a bun—this is the picture of his early twenties, as he many times described it. In 1911, when he was about 36, his "Life of George Borrow" first brought him into public view. He has just died after building up a great publishing business.

Bavaria's State Power Plant.

Bavarian engineers are building a two-and-a-half-mile tunnel under the Alps, to divert part of the Isar river into the Walchen Lake for an enormous hydro-electric plant. When completed the work, which will under way, will furnish, according to Popular Mechanics Magazine, enough electrical power for all Bavaria's railways, industrial plants and city lights.

Metal Cutting.

Double-ended shears for metal cutting are among the time-saving mechanisms of the day. When one end is closed the other is open, and vice versa, the secondary cutting heads bearing the same relation to the primary ones that the handles of an ordinary scissors bear to the blades.

Low in Civilization.

Slowness of transportation has hitherto kept explorers out of Mongolia. The country is too vast to be exploited at the rate of 15 miles a day. Otherwise it offers great prospects. Water abounds and there is plenty of game. The people are of course debased in superstition, but they appear to be timid rather than ferocious and the Andrews expedition was only in danger once, and that was when Mr. Andrews, desiring to test a revolver, was about to discharge it at what appeared to be a white stone. In the nick of time he discovered that it was a bleached human skull, and to have struck this would have been to bring terrible bad luck upon the tribe —and also upon the explorers. The belief of the Mongolians is that evil spirits come back to haunt the living. When one of them dies the body is put on a cart and driven at breakneck speed over rough ground so that it falls off. The driver never looks behind, because this would encourage the spirit to return, but makes his way home as fast as he can. The district surrounding a village would thus be strewn with unburied corpses if it were not for the presence of hugs half savage dogs, which devour the dead bodies, and which, when the bodies are not plentiful, are fierce than wolves and try to drag down living beings. Mr. Andrews had a narrow escape from a band of these brutes.

Treasure Trove.

The following are the chief fruits of the expedition so far:

1. Twenty-five dinosaur eggs, the first ever discovered.

2. Seventy skulls in all stages of development of Protoceratops. This is a form ancestral to the frilled, horned dinosaurs of America. The eggs are from this reptile.

3. Choice skeleton material of the semi-aquatic dinosaurs related to the duck-bill Trachodon and Iguanodon of Europe and America.

4. A skull of the largest flesh-eating mammal ever known — a great lizard-like animal, about thirty feet long, with a jaw spread of about two feet, somewhat similar to the Mosasaurs of the Uintah Mountains, in Utah.

5. Twelve skulls of Titanotheres, an extinct family of huge beasts first discovered in South Dakota. To the geologists these constituted convincing evidence of a close land connection between Mongolia and the Rocky Mountains in the early age of mammals.

Remarkable Discoveries.

6. One complete skeleton and parts of other skeletons and skulls of rhinoceroses similar to these of Eastern Nebraska. According to Mr. Andrews, the entire mammalian fauna of this period is practically identical with that which ranged through Utah, Wyoming and South Dakota in the middle of the Age of Mammals, except for camels, which are found only in America, and for horses, which appear to have been more abundant in America than in Asia at that time.

7. Discovery of Permian deposits of marine invertebrates which would seem to prove that a wide seaway extended straight through Mongolia during ancient Permian times.

8. Discovery of the greatest known fossil field.

9. Discovery of the skull of Baluchitherium, a giant browsing rhinoceros, the largest land mammal known to science.

10. Obtained thousands of specimens of living mammals, birds, fishes, reptiles and batrachians—the largest collection of mammals ever taken from any part of Asia in a single season.

The Dinosaur's Eggs.

The eggs of that monster reptile, the dinosaur, are considered, of course, the great prize, yet they were found with less trouble than the eggs of many a lay-away hen. It appears that George Olsen, one of the assistants in paleontology, was strolling near the camp one night when he came upon the eggs lying on the ground. He rushed back with news of his discovery. His companions told him that he was crazy, that it was impossible that they should be lying on the surface, as exposed as pebbles, when the dinosaur had been extinct for millions of years. Yet that is the miracle that had happened for upon examination the eggs were found to contain the skeletons of baby dinosaurs. They had been laid at the sand and covered up to hatch. Six inches away by the fossilized remains of a dinosaur which may have laid the eggs. One of the problems of the expedition was the packing of the specimens. Plenty of packing material had been taken along, but the harvest was so rich that it was exhausted, and some of the delicate skeletons were wrapped in the clothing of the men. A solution was found recently by plucking the hair from their camels.

MAPLE LEAF INSTITUTE

The regular monthly meeting of the Maple Leaf Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Wesley Cummings, Big Creek, on Friday afternoon, Oct. 26th, at 1.30, with an attendance of some twenty-three ladies. The meeting took the form of "Thanksgiving", which is to commemorate Armistice Day, in loving memory of our dear Canadian boys who fell in the great War of 1914. The meeting was opened in the usual Institute way, with all the officers present. Mrs. J. B. Sharpe was then asked to give a paper on Armistice Day and the history of the war from the beginning, which was very interesting. Following, Mesdames W. R. Smith, W. Fretts and A. Curle sang "Rule Britania". Then a short paper was read by Mrs. A. Curle, on "Poppy Day", which is being established by the G. W. V. A. Mrs. John Chambers then recited a poem on "Thanksgiving", which she had learned when at school, which related so many things to be thankful for. Mrs. J. B. Miller, Napanee, Hon. Pres., gave a short prayer, which so fittingly expressed the thankfulness of the members. This finishing the programme of the meeting, the usual business part of the meeting was proceeded with. A report of the School Fair at Sillsville, on Oct. 3rd, when the members had a tent on the ground was then read, which netted a neat sum for the Institute, which they intend using in the Big Creek and Hawley School for the betterment of the equipment of these schools. After all the business was transacted, our hostess served a dainty lunch.

SCOTLAND HAS ITS LOURDES.

Thousands of Tents Pilgrims to Shrine In Hope of Cures.

Thousands of people from all parts of Scotland — and not a few from over the border—are making the little village of Carfin, three miles from Motherwell, a centre of pilgrimage these days. Over a year ago, opposite the Roman Catholic chapel at Carfin, was opened the Notre Dame de Lourdes Institute. The building, much of the work of which was voluntary, has proved a centre of attraction to the youth of the village. Adjoining the institute, and in the grounds of the parish, which is dedicated to St. Xavier, there has been installed a reproduction of the miraculous grotto of Lourdes in France. Rev. Father Taylor has charge of the mission at Carfin, and with such surroundings it is only in the nature of things that the holy days and picturesque festivals of the church could take on an impressiveness and attract large gatherings.

On the occasion of the Feast of Corpus Christi, it was computed that 50,000 people from all parts of Scotland visited Carfin. More recently busy scenes were again enacted in the little village. Motor cars containing pilgrims from outlying districts began to arrive early in the morning, and continued throughout the day. Stories of marvellous cures effected as a result of a visit to the "grotto" has helped to swell the crowds visiting the village. In private dwellings arrangements have been made to supply the material wants of the visitors and many of the villagers are reaping quite a harvest as a result.

But the pilgrimage is not only confined to the seventh day of the week. The village almost any day is alive with pilgrims from the city, as well as the surrounding districts. They are making the "grotto" a centre of religious devotion. Amongst the pilgrims cured as a result of a visit to the "grotto" there is an old lady, who was able to dispense with her crutches. Another woman suffering from deafness, is averred to have been completely cured.

Divining Metals.

A very delicate piece of apparatus which can be used for divining the presence of metals under the ground has recently been invented. It shews to the scientist the way in which gravity varies from point to point, at or near the earth's surface.

The instrument has been so arranged that it can easily be taken from place to place, set up on the ground without masonry foundations, and used without any shelter except that of a small tent. A mass of heavy ore, even if buried in the ground, affects the pull of gravity on the instrument if this is placed near it, and affects two plumb bobs differently. One of these is at a lower level than the other. The two are connected and the system is hung up by a long, fine metal wire. The whole arrangement forms what is known as a torsion balance.

The twist in the wire measures the irregularity in the action of gravity caused by the ore bed, by a neighboring hill, a cave beneath the surface, and so forth. By a careful study of the readings of the instrument it is possible to find the best position for sinking a mine shaft to tap the ore bed.

Where Miles Grow Longer.

When you are told that it is a mile from X to Y, do you really know how far it is? asks a London writer.

To begin with, it all depends on what country you are in and what a mile means to your informant. He may be thinking of a geographical or nautical mile, which is 6,085 feet in length, whereas the ordinary English mile is only 5,280 feet.

If you are directed by a Scotsman, you should remember that the Scottish mile is 5,928 feet in length. An Irishman might have measured the distance in Irish miles, which contain 6,720 feet.

If you were told by a German that it was a mile from X to Y, you would find it a very long journey, as the German mile is 24,318 feet long.

The French kilometre is a little less than two-thirds of the English mile. The Brazilians have a unit of measure, known as a millia, which is one and one-fourth as long as the English mile; while the Japanese mile is two and a-half times as long as the English mile.

"Before I Die."

To enable "before I die some sort of green place where little street urchins could play cricket, all necessaries provided," was one of the dreams of Herbert Jenkins, London publisher. He began life at fifteen in a bookseller's shop. He and another boy used to sit up half the night devouring books. That boy was the poet, John Masefield. Walking to save a penny omnibus fare, refusing an invitation to a river picnic because of a sixpenny railroad fare, lunching on a bun—this is the picture of his early twenties, as he many times described it. In 1911, when he was about 36, his "Life of George Borrow" first brought him into public view. He has just died after building up a great publishing business.

Bavaria's State Power Plant.

Bavarian engineers are building a two-and-a-half-mile tunnel under the Alps, to divert part of the Isar river into the Walchen Lake for an enormous hydro-electric plant. When completed the work, which is well under way, will furnish, according to Popular Mechanics Magazine, enough electrical power for all the Bavarian railways, industrial plants and city lights.

Metal Cutting.

Double-ended shearers for metal cutting are among the time-saving mechanisms of the day. When one end is closed the other is open, and vice versa, the secondary cutting blade backing the same relation to the primary ones that the handles of an ordinary scissors bear to the blades.

McCORMICK'S JERSEY CREAM SODA BISCUITS

Biggest Island in the World

No one knows whence the Papuans came; they are of many different tribes and languages. Sir William Macgregor once said casually that he believed the interior of the island to be uninhabited, but he changed that opinion subsequently. Capt. Monckton does not believe that there is even a small extent of the island which has not been traversed, used or occupied by Papuans.

He ascended higher than any man had done previously in New Guinea; he penetrated deeper into the country, but he never found a tract lacking occupation by natives.

The Snowy Mountains, a range at the head of the Fly river, have never been measured, for the reason that the summits are clothed in everlasting clouds. If a rare glimpse is caught, there is not time to get the measuring instruments before the clouds close again.

Commander Rothwell, of the Merrie England, once caught a sight of a very high peak, and took a sextant angle; he got a second angle after the ship had steamed a mile. From this he made out that the height of the peak sighted was between 27,000 and 28,000 feet. If that is the case, New Guinea contains one of the highest, if not the highest, range of mountains in the world.

At a height of 9,000 feet Captain Monckton found native villages. At 12,000 feet he could see a long valley studded with woodlands and lakes.

The waters from the lakes formed waterfalls visible from the sea; the summit of that mountain range contained scenery more like the lake-studded Highlands of Scotland than anything else.

In that neighborhood also is a strange natural feature named the Sugarloaf. Imagine the Nelson monument in Trafalgar Square lacking Nelson, and five times the diameter. That would resemble it. It is about 60 feet high with a diameter of about 20 feet at the base, and very little less at the top. A solid, flat-topped terrace extends for about 200 yards from the column, the clean-cut sides of which give the whole thing the appearance of some vast ancient church.

The writer's references to the natives are mostly appreciative, except where the latter are still savages. In his expedition he frequently entered villages in which were many articles looted from miners who had probably been murdered. Revolvers, picks, shovels, clothing and miners' dishes were found, but the villagers, having guilty consciences, fled.

It is a fashion, however, with many writers of books of travel to depict the New Guinea native as of a childish form of intelligence. "This may be right of the men the writer of the book has met." But it is far from being generally true.

Some of the tribes consist of men having high intelligence, and withal unselfish. No poverty, as we know it, exists under their sway. The forlorn and friendless widow is housed, fed and protected, just as well as one of the chief's wives. The orphan is adopted and treated exactly as if of the blood of the family into which he has been admitted.

In relation to the habit of adoption a curious custom exists in some parts. A small male child would be sent by one tribe to another, and be adopted by some prominent man amongst the latter. When that child grew up, however bitter the warfare raging between the tribes might be, he took no part, but freely passed from one tribe to the other, bearing messages, or living with either as he saw fit.

Family affection among the Papuans is very strong, but loyalty to the man's tribe for the time being serves it even stronger.

Intercourse with white men does nothing to kill the Papuan's faith in his old beliefs. Neither does it break him off the habit of running amok. Without the slightest warning, and without cause, he will slay friends or foe alike until he is pulled down. When the homicidal fit passes the man is all right again. The frenzy is quite inexplicable, and members of Captain Monckton's escort, when they felt it coming on, would ask to be shut up or ironed until the fit had passed.

Throughout New Guinea there have been discovered ancient pottery, carved shells, and stone implements, all clearly belonging to a race existing long prior to the Papuan. Under a stratum of cold-bearing graves was found a volcanic glass hatchet, and certainly not that of any weapon used by savages.—The Sailor.

The Eye and Ear Compared.

Describing the structure of the eye to Prof. Pear, at a recent Edinburgh lecture to young people, said that both the eye and the ear might be regarded as messages received from the outside world. But whereas the, ear was a gentlemanly kind of messenger, reporting the messages received with tolerable accuracy, the eye so interfered with messages by adding to them and subtracting from them that it was altogether unreliable. Prof. Pear illustrated his meaning with great force by burning carbonate of sodium, in the light of which his face, to the astonishment of the audience, appeared to be as dark as that of a Malay.

"BOXING THEN AND NOW."

Curiosities About Fights and Fighters In the Past.

The history of British boxing calls to mind many strange characters. From the rugged personality of rare old James Figg, England's first champion, to the dapper "dancing master" type as exemplified by Bombardier Wells in modern times, may be a far cry, but in between every conceivable kind of champion has held sway at one time or another.

Many pugilists have been sealers preachers of the Gospel, says Mr. Harry E. Cleveland ("Pal"), in "Fisticuffs." Isaac Perrina, the Birmingham Goliath," for a time "held forth" at a Handsworth chapel, where he was also a choir leader, but eventually became a publican in Manchester.

William Thompson, alias. "Bendigo," was one of the best as well as one of the most eccentric men who ever entered a ring. He was a born clown, and his acrobatic feats were extraordinary. But when he was under the influence of drink he was the terror of Nottingham.

On one occasion he stripped a butcher's shop and flung the joints of meat at the crowd who were jeering at him. He had been in jail for the twenty-eighth time, when one Sunday the chaplain took his text from the conflict between David and Goliath. This so impressed the ex-pugilist that later he said to the clergyman, "Sir, your sermon touched me in the right spot. It reminded me of my fights with Ben Caunt. He was a giant, and I hit him in the same spot as David hit Goliath. I should like to know more about that bloke David. He must have been a good 'un for a lightweight."

Elizabeth Wilkinson, of Clerkenwell, "having had some words with Hannah Hybrid," challenged her to fight for three guineas. Each woman was to hold half a crown in each hand, and the first woman that dropped the money was to lose the battle. Her opponent accepted the challenge, and added: "She (the challenger) may expect a good thumping."

The following is the epitaph on the tombstone of Sandy McKay, who died shortly after his fight with Simon Byrne, the Irish champion:

Strong and athletic was my frame,
Far from my native home I came,
And manly fought with Simon Byrne,
Alas! but lived not to return.
Reader, take warning by my fate,
Or you may rue your case too late;
If you have ever fought before,
Determine now to fight no more.

In the "good old days" fights were quite common in prison. Discipline was very lax and the turnkeys were often bribed to shut their eyes to the "milling." Once a convict under sentence of death fought another prisoner. A ring was formed, and there were seconds, timekeeper, and referee. A few days later, when the condemned man was hanged, it was noticed he had a black eye.

It is not generally known, by the way, that a pugilist was buried in Westminster Abbey. This was John Broughton, "the father of English boxing," who invented the boxing glove.

Keeping London Clean.

Keeping London clean is an expensive undertaking.

Few people know, for example, that every hundredweight of refuse removed from dustbins costs the authorities a fraction under sixpence. Every day 5,000 tons of dirt and dust are collected, by means of 1,320 vehicles.

Some of the tasks that now confront London's army of spring-cleaners are gigantic. Take Victoria Station. Cleaning the station, which has a bigger area of glass roof than any other station—occupies the best part of six months.

Over forty-five tons of paint, made up of thirty-four tons of white lead and eleven tons of linseed oil, are used, at a cost of approximately £40 a ton.

One of the biggest spring-cleaning jobs ever undertaken was the dusting and renovating of the British Museum Library. Two hundred and fifty men were kept busy for fourteen months. Re-decorating the dome and walls of the great reading-room took 250,000 leaves of beaten gold.

Another big renovating job carried out periodically is spring-cleaning Tower Bridge. Twenty tons of paint are used in the process, which occupies roughly five months.

Figures In Scottish History.

"Black Douglas" was James Douglas, ninth and last earl of one branch of the Douglas family in Scotland. He was early in life engaged in schemes against James II., and then fled to England, where he had a pension from the crown, and was made Knight of the Garter. In 1484 he leagued himself with the exiled Duke of Albany, and invaded Scotland, when he was taken prisoner at Lochmaben. On being brought before the court he turned his back upon the King. The compassionate King James III. spared his life on condition of his taking the cowl. He then entered the monastic seclusion at Lindores, where he died.

Good Old Time "Ads."

No one denies that the modern advertisement man is a genius in the way he extols the merits of his wares, but the "ad." man of 1657 was pretty good. He thus displays himself in a newspaper of that date;

"The drink called coffee is a very wholesome and physical drink, having many excellent virtues, closes the orifices of the stomach, fortifies the health, helpeth digestion, quickeneth the spirit, maketh the heart gladsome, is good against sore eyes, coughs, or colds, rhumes, consumption, headaches, dropsie, gout, scurvy, king's evil, and many others."

Fond of Books.

The fondness of the termites or "white ants" for feeding on books is said to be in part responsible for the slow culturnl growth of many tropical countries.

The stranger signed the hotel register, "King of Italy," and was soon accosted by the manager, who demanded that his guest sign his proper name, adding: "You are not the King of Italy, you know."

"No," agreed the guest, "but I travel under the name—it's my incognito."

BEFORE MY BABY CAME

I Was Greatly Benefited by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Sydenham, Ont. —"I took your medicine before my baby was born, and it was a great help to me. I was very poorly until I had started to take it. I just felt as though I was tired out all the time and would have fainting spells, which his face, to the astonishment of the audience, appeared to be as dark as that of a Malay. My nerves would bother me until I could get little rest night or day. I was told by a friend to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I only took a few bottles and it helped me wonderfully. I would recommend it to any woman. I am doing what I can to recommend this good medicine. I will lend that little book you sent me to my one I can help. You can with the greatest of pleasure use my name in regard to the Vegetable Compound if it will help others take it."—Mrs. HARVEY MILLIGAN, Sydenham, Ont.

It is remarkable how many cases have been reported similar to this one. Many women are poorly at such times and get into a weakened, run-down condition, when it is essential to the mother, as well as the child, that her strength be kept up.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is an excellent tonic for the mother at this time. It is prepared from medicinal roots and herbs, and does not contain any harmful drugs. It may be taken in safety by the nursing mother.

McCORMICK'S
JERSEY CREAM SODA BISCUITS

Biggest Island in the World

No one knows whence the Papuans came; they are of many different tribes and languages. Sir William Macgregor once said casually that he believed the interior of the island to be uninhabited, but he changed that opinion subsequently. Capt. Monckton does not believe that there is even a small extent of the island which has not been traversed, used or occupied by Papuans.

He ascended higher than any man had done previously in New Guinea; he penetrated deeper into the country, but he never found a tract lacking occupation by natives.

The Snowy Mountains, a range at the head of the Fly river, have never been measured, for the reason that the summits are clothed in everlasting clouds. If a rare glimpse is caught, there is not time to get the measuring instruments before the clouds come again.

Commander Rothwell, of the Merrie England, once caught a sight of a very high peak, and took a sextant angle; he got a second angle after the ship had steamed a mile. From this he made out that the height of the peak sighted was between 27,000 and 28,000 feet. If that is the case, New Guinea contains one of the highest, if not the highest, ranges of mountains in the world.

At a height of 9,000 feet Captain Monckton found native villages. At 12,000 feet he could see a long valley studded with woodlands and lakes.

The waters from the lakes formed waterfalls visible from the sea; the summit of that mountain range contained scenery more like the lake-studded Highlands of Scotland than anything else.

In that neighborhood also is a strange natural feature named the Jolcano. Imagine the Nelson monument in Trafalgar Square lacking Nelson, and five times the diameter. That would resemble it. It is about 60 feet high with a diameter of about 20 feet at the base, and very little less at the top. A solid, flat-topped terrace extends for about 200 yards from the Column, the clean-cut sides of which give the whole thing the appearance of some vast ancient church.

The writer's references to the native are mostly appreciative, except where the latter are still savages. In his expedition he frequently entered villages in which were many articles looted from miners who had probably been murdered. Revolvers, picks, shovels, clothing and miners' dishes were found, but the villagers, having guilty consciences, fled.

It is a fashion, however, with many writers of books of travel to depict the New Guinea native as of a childish form of intelligence. This may be right of the men the writer of the book has met. But it is far from being generally true.

Some of the tribes consist of men having high intelligence, and withal unselfish. No poverty, as we know it, exists under their sway. The forlorn and friendless widow is housed, fed and protected, just as well as one of the chief's wives. The orphan is adopted and treated exactly as if of the blood of the family into which he has been admitted.

In relation to the habit of adoption a curious custom exists in some parts. A small male child would be sent by one tribe to another, and be adopted by some prominent man amongst the latter. When that child grew up, however bitter the warfare raging between the tribes might be, he took no part, but freely passed from one tribe to the other, bearing messages, or living with either as he saw fit.

Family affection among the Papuans is very strong, but loyalty to the man they for the time being serve is even stronger.

Intercourse with white men does nothing to kill the Papuan's faith in his old beliefs. Neither does it break him off the habit of running amok. Without the slightest warning, and without cause, he will slay friends or foe alike until he is pulled down. When the homicidal fit passes the man is all right again. The frenzy is quite unexplainable, and members of Captain Monckton's escort, when they felt it coming on, would ask to be shut up or ironed until the fit had passed.

Throughout New Guinea there have been discovered ancient pottery, carved shells, and stone implements, all clearly belonging to a race existing long prior to the Papuan. Under a stratum of gold-bearing gravel was found a volcanic glass battleaxe, and certainly not that of any weapon used by savages.—The Sailor.

The Eye and Ear Compared.

Describing the structure of the eye Prof. Pear, at a recent Edinburgh lecture to young people, said that both the eye and the ear might be regarded as messages received from the outside world. But whereas the ear was a gentlemanly kind of messenger, reporting the messages received with tolerable accuracy, the eye as interfered with messages by adding to them and subtracting from them that it was altogether unreliable. Prof. Pear illustrated his meaning with great force by burning a cartridge of sodium, in the light of which his face, to the amusement of the audience, appeared to be as dark as that of a Malay.

London's Underground Railway.

Last year the Underground carried 1,172,000,000 passengers, an increase of 72,000,000 over the preceding year. The tubes and buses ran 163,000,000 car miles, an increase of 7,500,000 miles.

The History of Boxing.

The history of British boxing calls to mind many strange characters. From the rugged personality of rare old James Figg, England's first champion, to the dapper "dancing master" type as exemplified by Bombardier Wells in modern times, may be a far cry, but in between every conceivable kind of champion has held sway at one time or another.

Many pugilists have been zealous preachers of the Gospel, says Mr. Harry E. Cleveland ("Pat"). In "Pisticuffs," Isaac Perrins, the Birmingham Goliath," for a time "held forth" at a Handsworth chapel, where he was also a choir leader, but eventually became a publican in Manchester.

William Thompson, alias "Bendigo," was one of the best as well as one of the most eccentric men who ever entered a ring. He was a born clown, and his acrobatic feats were extraordinary. But when he was under the influence of drink he was the terror of Nottingham.

On one occasion he stripped a butcher's shop and flung the joints of meat at the crowd who were jeering at him. He had been in jail for the twenty-eighth time, when one Sunday the chaplain took his text from the conflict between David and Goliath. This so impressed the ex-pugilist that later he said to the clergyman, "Sir, your sermon touched me in the right spot. It reminded me of my fights with Ben Caunt. He was a giant, and I hit him in the same spot as David hit Goliath. I should like to know more about that bloke David. He must have been a good 'un for a lightweight."

Elizabeth Wilkinson, of Clerkenwell, "having had some words with Hannah Hyfield," challenged her to fight for three guineas. Each woman was to hold half a crown in each hand, and the first woman that dropped the money was to lose the battle. Her opponent accepted the challenge, and added: "She (the challenger) may expect a good thumping."

The following is the epitaph on the tombstone of Sandy McKay, who died shortly after his fight with Simon Byrne, the Irish champion:

Strong and athletic was my frame,
Far from my native home I came,
And manly fought with Simon Byrne,
Alas! but lived not to return.
Reader, take warning by my fate,
Or you may rue your case too late;
If you have ever fought before,
Determine now to fight no more.

In the "good old days" fights were quite common in prison. Discipline was very lax and the turnkeys were often bribed to shut their eyes to the "milling." Once a convict under sentence of death fought another prisoner. A ring was formed, and there were seconds, timekeeper, and referee. A few days later, when the condemned man was hanged, it was noticed he had a black eye.

It is not generally known, by the way, that a pugilist was buried in Westminster Abbey. This was John Broughton, "the father of English boxing," who invented the boxing glove.

Keeping London Clean.

Keeping London clean is an expensive undertaking.

Few people know, for example, that every hundredweight of refuse removed from dustbins costs the authorities a fraction under sixpence. Every day 5,000 tons of dirt and dust are collected, by means of 1,320 vehicles.

Some of the tasks that now confront London's army of spring-cleaners are gigantic. Take Victoria Station. Cleaning the station, which has a bigger area of glass roof than any other station—occupies the best part of six months.

Over forty-five tons of paint, made up of thirty-four tons of white lead and eleven tons of linseed oil, are used, at a cost of approximately £40 a ton.

One of the biggest spring-cleaning jobs ever undertaken was the dusting and renovating of the British Museum Library. Two hundred and fifty men were kept busy for fourteen months. Re-decorating the dome and walls of the great reading-room took 250,000 leaves of beaten gold.

Another big renovating job carried out periodically is spring-cleaning Tower Bridge. Twenty tons of paint are used in the process, which occupies roughly five months.

Figures in Scottish History.

"Black Douglas" was James Douglas, ninth and last earl of one branch of the Douglas family in Scotland. He was early in life engaged in schemes against James II., and then fled to England, where he had a pension from the crown, and was made Knight of the Garter. In 1484 he leagued himself with the exiled Duke of Albany, and invaded Scotland, when he was taken prisoner at Lochmaben. On being brought before the court he turned his back upon the King. The compassionate King James III. spared his life on condition of his taking the cowl. He then entered the monastic seclusion at Lindores, where he died.

Good Old Time "Ads."

No one denies that the modern advertisement man is a genius in the way he extols the merits of his wares, but the "ad." man of 1657 was pretty good. He thus displays himself in a newspaper of that date:

"The drink called coffee is a very wholesome and physical drink, having many excellent virtues, closes the orifice of the stomach, fortifies the health, helpeth digestion, quickeneth the spirit, maketh the heart gladsome, is good against eye sore, coughs, or colds, rhumes, consumption, headaches, dropsie, gout, scurvy, king's evil, and many others."

Fond of Books.

The fondness of the termites or "white ants" for feeding on books is said to be in part responsible for the slow cultural growth of many tropical countries.

The stranger signed the hotel register, "King of Italy," and was soon accosted by the manager, who demanded that his guest sign his proper name, adding: "You are not the King of Italy, you know."

"No," agreed the guest, "but I travel under the name—it's my incognito."

FAREWELL TO REV. MR. BLACKLOCK

On Sunday evening, Nov. 18th, the Rev. A. L. Blacklock, of the Presbyterian Church, Wilton, preached his farewell sermon, the Rev. Mr. Blacklock having been called to a larger sphere of duties as pastor to a Presbyterian Church in Boston, Mass.

The Presbyterian congregation and the whole community at large were grieved to lose one who had so nobly fulfilled his sacred duties during his sojourn among us, and thus endeared himself to so many; yet, at the same time they rejoiced, too, in his success of a call to a larger field, where he might fit himself for better service unto mankind.

His parting sermon were words for his people to don God's whole armour of righteousness so as to be ever ready to further our Heavenly Father's cause.

Some old cynic has said that life is chiefly remarkable for its disappointments. It may be so, but the sadness of losing one who had so endeared himself, was overcome on Monday evening, Nov. 19th, by those more refined sentiments which were manifested in giving the Rev. Mr. Blacklock a social farewell. An informal "At Home" was tendered him, and an impromptu programme was delightfully rendered. Mrs. Ferrier, of Yarker, rang several solos, one of which, "Nearer My God to Thee", deserves special mention. Dr. J. J. Munroe, of Odessa, rendered violin selections in his usual good form, much to the enjoyment of all. The Rev. Mr. Blacklock gave his ever good support with recitations and violin solos, and Mr. Harvey Mills kept the crowd in a jovial humor with his affable manner and wholesome side-splitting stories, —and the ladies—God bless them—for their abundant supply of provisions, which gave further zest to the entertainment.

During the "At Home" the Rev. Mr. Blacklock was requested to come forward by Mr. William Mills, who presented the Pastor with an address and a token of deep affection in the form of a substantial check on behalf of the members and adherents, simply as a recognition of the zeal, energy and success with which the Rev. Mr. Blacklock fulfilled the duties of his sacred calling.

No less conspicuous were the girl members of the Wilton Girls' Soft Ball Team, who occupied the front seats, displaying their usual zeal and respect for their friend and manager. Miss Dorothy Neilson, aided by Miss Luella Peters, on behalf of the members of the Girls' Ball Team, also presented Rev. Mr. Blacklock with a token of their admiration as a friend and manager.

Mr. Blacklock replied to both presentations in his good natured manner, and as the worthy can only see they have done their duty—so the Pastor expressed—he had only tried to do his, and even so while severing his connection with Wilton, one could discern that affection for his people and friends here, was tugging at his heartstrings, yet duty called for his labors in another Gospel vineyard, and so the Rev. Mr. Blacklock leaves his people with a blessing upon his endeavors to extend the Kingdom of our Divine Master.

The Orchestra will be in attendance on the evening of Dec. 6th, at the Bazaar. Everybody welcome. No admission fee will be charged. 48a

Mother Had to Be Parted From Baby Boy

Little Jack is in a distant city. His mother is far away. Jack's aunt tries to the old saying about distance making the heart grow fonder, Jack's mother longs and longs for a sight of her little man. Now if it were only a case of miles and dollars she might somehow or other come home occasionally, but it's more than that. She has consumption.

When she thinks of the once happy times with Jack's father and children it mighty hard to keep from tears. She won't let Daddy bring Jack down to see her, despite the tug at the heart strings. "No," she says, "Jackie must not come, he might get consumption, too." So Jack lives with his grandmother, Daddy works in a machine shop, and mother is faithfully obeying doctor's and nurse's orders at the Muskoka Hospital for Consumptives. She hopes to be home for Christmas—healthy and happy.

Contributions to old Muskoka Hospital in its worthy cause may be sent to Hon. W. A. Charters, 223 College Street, Toronto.

FAREWELL TO REV. MR. BLACKLOCK

On Sunday evening, Nov. 18th, the Rev. A. L. Blacklock, of the Presbyterian Church, Wilton, preached his farewell sermon, the Rev. Mr. Blacklock having been called to a larger sphere of duties as pastor to a Presbyterian Church in Boston, Mass.

The Presbyterian congregation and the whole community at large were grieved to lose one who had so nobly fulfilled his sacred duties during his sojourn among us, and thus endeared himself to so many; yet, at the same time they rejoiced, too, in his success of a call to a larger field, where he might fit himself for better service unto mankind.

His parting sermon were words for his people to don God's whole armour of righteousness so as to be ever ready to further our Heavenly Father's cause.

Some old cynic has said that life is chiefly remarkable for its disappointments. It may be so, but the sadness of losing one who had so endeared himself, was overcome on Monday evening, Nov. 19th, by those more refined sentiments which were manifested in giving the Rev. Mr. Blacklock, a social farewell. An informal "At Home" was tendered him, and an impromptu programme was delightfully rendered. Mrs. Ferrier, of Yarker, sang several solos, one of which, "Nearer My God to Thee", deserves special mention. Dr. J. Munroe, of Odessa, rendered violin selections in his usual good form, much to the enjoyment of all. The Rev. Mr. Blacklock gave his ever good support with recitations and violin solos, and Mr. Harvey Mills kept the crowd in a jovial humor with his affable manner and wholesome side-splitting stories, —and the ladies—God bless them—for their abundant supply of provisions, which gave further zest to the entertainment.

During the "At Home" the Rev. Mr. Blacklock was requested to come forward by Mr. William Mills, who presented the Pastor with an address and a token of deep affection in the form of a substantial check on behalf of the members and adherents, simply as a recognition of the zeal, energy and success with which the Rev. Mr. Blacklock fulfilled the duties of his sacred calling.

No less conspicuous were the girl members of the Wilton Girls' Soft Ball Team, who occupied the front seats, displaying their usual zeal and respect for their friend and manager. Miss Dorothy Neilson, aided by Miss Luella Peters, on behalf of the members of the Girls' Ball Team, also presented Rev. Mr. Blacklock with a token of their admiration as a friend and manager.

Mr. Blacklock replied to both presentations in his good natured manner, and as the worthy can only see they have done their duty—so the Pastor expressed—he had only tried to do his, and even so while severing his connection with Wilton, one could discern that affection for his people and friends here, was tugging at his heartstrings, yet duty called for his labors in another Gospel vineyard, and so the Rev. Mr. Blacklock leaves his people with a blessing upon his endeavors to extend the Kingdom of our Divine Master.

The Orchestra will be in attendance on the evening of Dec. 6th, at the Bazaar. Everybody welcome. No admission fee will be charged. 48a

Mother Had to Be Parted From Baby Boy

Little Jack is in a distant city. His mother is many miles away, and true to the old saying about distance making the heart grow fonder, Jackie's mother longs and longs for a sight of her little man. Now if it were only a case of miles and dollars she might somehow or other come home occasionally, but it's more than that. She is consumptive.

So Jack thinks of the once happy triangle—mother, Daddy and child—in his mighty heart he cries from tears she won't let Daddy bring her "darn" to see her, despite the tug at the heart strings. "No," she says, "Jackie must not come, he might get consumption, too." So Jack lives with his grandmother, Daddy works in a machine shop, and mother is faithfully obeying doctor's and nurse's orders at the Muskoka Hospital for Consumptives. She hopes to be home for Christmas—healthy and happy.

Contributions to aid Muskoka Hospital in its work may be sent to Hon. W. A. Charlton, 131 College Street, Toronto.

OBITUARY

Mrs. H. N. Chase.

Into a Godly home in the Village of Newburgh, Martha A. Rook was born. Her father, John Rook, was Sunday School Superintendent and choir leader, and she was carried as a child in arms into the sanctuary. Naturally she joined the church at an unusually early age. She was a regular church-goer, a member of the choir and helper. On marrying H. N. Chase she removed to Frankford in 1886. Twenty years ago they removed to Napanee. For twenty-five years an invalid, she suffered above many. Few men lavish the thought, care and time upon a beloved helpmate that it was hers to enjoy. The end came quietly and she slept away. At the private service on Tuesday, at 10.30 a.m., friends gathered, and relatives, Henry Chase, from Frankford; Mrs. Fred Newman (an aunt) and daughter, from Picton; Mrs. H. King, a sister, from Croydon; Mrs. G. S. Kingdom, another sister, came from Peterboro'. Another sister, Mrs. L. Johnston, of Lockport, N.Y., was unable to be present. After the service was conducted by the Pastor, Rev. A. J. Terrill, interment followed at the Riverview cemetery.

The warmest sympathy from the whole church and town has gone out to the bereaved husband and his only child, Miss Vera, in their sorrow and loneliness.

Useful Animals.

Every nationality must have its own answer to the question, "What animal is most useful to man?" In some parts of the world the camel is invaluable, in others the reindeer, while even the donkey is an absolute resource in many countries.

Speaking generally, members of the ox tribe are the most useful animals. They are friends to all sorts of peoples. They give to milk and, good for food, the hides make leather, the horns and hoofs make handles for cutlery, and even the blood is used for many purposes. And in some countries the ox is used as a draught animal.

For centuries, of course, the horse has been the "friend of man," but with the advent of mechanical traction he has largely lost his place as an absolute necessity.

Are We Losing Our Teeth?

There is, unfortunately, little room for doubt on this question. In spite of the fact that our teeth are attended to as never before, they are constantly going, a fact amply proved in the late war, when hardly a recruit in the Old Country came up to the standards of the Old Army, so far as his teeth were concerned.

Not only are our teeth feeble and liable to early decay, but our jaws are getting too small to take their full complement of teeth. The reason is that nature invariably dispenses with the unnecessary. With soft foods, perfectly cooked and easily digested, our teeth are no longer an absolute necessity to our livelihood, and so they are gradually tending to vanish.

Bernhardt's Advice.

Sarah Bernhardt, who is now in her seventy-eighth year, has just published a novel in Paris and is at work on a volume of advice to actors to be called "Conseils aux Comediens," her principal advice is: "Be sincere."

The Lyre Bird.

The lyre bird of Australia is a mimic. In the early morning hours it is at its best, duplicating the whistle of a locomotive, the barking of a dog, the call of a magpie, and the buzz of a circular saw in varying tones.

Outlawed Moth Baggage.

Empty grain bags have been outlawed in Guatemala, their importation being prohibited by a recent decree. The purpose is to prevent the introduction of a moth, called the "gorgojo," found in many of the coffee-producing countries and very harmful to the coffee bean.

AIRPLANES MAY AID ELOPERS

Science Seems to Have Given Sweethearts Another Way to Trick Their Irate Parents.

Will modern lovers elope by air?

It is on record that at least one enterprising couple have made such an attempt. Unfortunately the plan was nipped in the bud owing to unforeseen circumstances. But there is little reason to doubt that before long aerial Don Juans will soar away with their fair burdens.

It is interesting to recall the various means of effecting elopements. They are as old as time. First they took place on foot with perhaps the aid of a rowing boat to help cross a river. Horses, too, were in great demand and many a happy maid rode pillion snatched away from under the very eyes of her irate parents. Later came the couch to aid Romeo and Juliet and what a gallant "say love against the world" air it added to the romance. Trains and automobiles have also played their part in "love's young dream," but the future "stunt" will be to elope by airplane.

The airplane waxer will have to be on his guard against the vigilance of the law which has already found the flying machine useful in the execution of justice. Thus a policeman in Los Angeles attempted to arrest a Japanese aviator for debt. The man promptly flew off while the policeman gave chase in an automobile. The pursuit continued until the aviator was compelled to come down through lack of gasoline.

A somewhat similar occurrence took place in Florida. A negro servant in a fashionable hotel stole a very valuable brooch. He ran away but detectives discovered, by means of wireless, that he was on board a ship off Bermuda. The vessel was delayed a few days off the coast while it was decided to bring him back by hydroplane, the machine being offered by Harold McCormick. The owner, accompanied by a detective, acted as pilot. In a few minutes they were alongside the ship, the thief was arrested and taken back a prisoner.—Sydney Levy in the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Caught 28,000,000 Fish.

Fishing is not like farming. The farmer can reckon pretty well what his crops are going to yield, but the fisherman merely guesses.

Our East coast fishermen, for instance, guessed that they would be visited in the middle of last September by herrings. But the herrings did not come, according to London answers. Then, when all hope had been relinquished the herrings turned up one day—some 28,000,000 of them.

Perhaps the late summer had made them lose count of the calendar and delay their visit.

Fishermen who had been looking glum returned with beaming faces. Three hundred and fifty boats, after dreary days of waiting, came back with loads averaging 80 crans each—that is, 80,000 herrings. Some boats had more, one bringing in 100,000 fish. The total fish landed in one day equaled 28,000,000, with millions more to follow.

Herrings, like swallows, have their migrating periods. The swallows fly free, but the poor herrings—or a goodly portion of them—are cooked and eaten.

Asleep.

The Woman at service could not resist the temptation of watching a man on the opposite side of the church who had fallen asleep during the middle of the sermon. He did not move or create any disturbance, and he looked so comfortable and peaceful that her neighbors smiled at each other indulgently and did not rouse him.

The Woman speculated a little on how and when he would wake up. When she had worked it out to her own satisfaction she again bestowed her attention on the sermon, still keeping half an eye on the man asleep.

At the close of the sermon, when the congregation knelt, the man evidently sensed the stir around him as that of the audience departing. He stood up quickly, grabbed his hat and overcoat and started to make his exit. Then he did wake up.—Chicago Journal.

One on Him.

The telephone bell at police headquarters jangled sharply.

"Police headquarters," answered Fred Loucks, operator.

"Where?" asked a surprised voice over the wire.

"This is the police station," informed the operator.

"Well, my name is Jones and I'm stopping at the Claypool hotel. Some one left word for me to call Mr. Cell at Main 1750. Is he there?"

"Yes, we have several Mr. Cells here," replied Loucks, "but their language is a dead one."

"That's on me, old timer," retorted the inquirer, as he hung up.

A few days ago, Mr. Loucks said, a sweet voice inquired whether Mary could answer the phone.—Indianapolis News.

Finds It Hard to Collect.

Lending money to kings is an experience which Mrs. Roberta Menger Corwin, Hill Terrace, Brooklyn, but lately of Paris, declares is exciting, but not altogether profitable. She arrived in New York from Paris bent on visiting the American State department to seek aid in collecting 5,000,000 francs, which she says she loaned Prince William of Wied, who occupied the throne of Albania for seven months before the war.—Minneapolis Journal.

Address and Presentation

A great many of the members of the Odessa Sunday School and of the Church, and also their neighbours, surprised Mr. and Mrs. Lachlan McLean on Thursday night, Nov. 22nd, when they gathered at the manse to spend the evening. All enjoyed the duetts that were played by Mrs. Mabee and Mrs. Holmes, to say "par excellence" in that art. Before the dainty refreshments were served by the ladies, were served Mr. and Mrs. McLean were called to the centre of the gathering, and the following address was read:—

Dear Mr. and Mrs. McLean,

We, your friends and neighbours, are gathered here this evening to extend to you a welcome and to show our appreciation of the services you are rendering in connection with the Sunday School and Church.

While you have only been with us a few months, we have already realized the interests of the Sunday School and Church are foremost in your lives.

While the event originated in the Sunday School, its influence was felt by several other members of the church, who asked that they to, might have the privilege of uniting with us and participate in the evening's enjoyment. We trust that this work of labour and love for the advancement of God's Kingdom on earth may grow, and we may all hear the message:

"Go labour on while it is day,
The world's dark night is hastening on;
Speed, speed the work, cast sloth away,
It is not thus that souls are won."

We ask you to accept this sum of money and other personal gifts as a token of our appreciation of your services, and trust you may be spared for many years of usefulness in our midst.

Signed on behalf of the Sunday School and Church.

OBITUARY

Mrs. H. N. Chase.

Into a Godly home in the Village of Newburgh, Martha A. Rook was born. Her father, John Rook, was Sunday School Superintendent and choir leader, and she was carried as a child in arms into the sanctuary. Naturally she joined the church at an unusually early age. She was a regular church-goer, a member of the choir and helper. On marrying H. N. Chase she removed to Frankford in 1886. Twenty years ago they removed to Napanee. For twenty-five years an invalid, she suffered above many. Few men lavish the thought, care and time upon a beloved helpmate that it was hers to enjoy. The end came quietly and she slept away. At the private service on Tuesday, at 10.30 a.m., friends gathered, and relatives, Henry Chase, from Frankford; Mrs. Fred Newman (an aunt) and daughter, from Picton; Mrs. H. King, a sister, from Croydon; Mrs. G. S. Kingdom, another sister, came from Peterboro'. Another sister, Mrs. L. Johnston, of Lockport, N.Y., was unable to be present. After the service was conducted by the Pastor, Rev. A. J. Terrill, interment followed at the Riverview cemetery.

The warmest sympathy from the whole church and town has gone out to the bereaved husband and his only child, Miss Vera, in their sorrow and loneliness.

Useful Animals.

Every nationality must have its own answer to the question, "What animal is most useful to man?" In some parts of the world the camel is invaluable, in others the reindeer, while even the donkey is an absolute resource in many countries.

Speaking generally, members of the ox tribe are the most useful animals. They are friends to all sorts of peoples. They give us milk and beef for food, the hides make leather, horns and bones make handles for cutlery, and even the blood is used for many purposes. And in some countries the ox is used as a draught animal.

For centuries, of course, the horse has been the "friend of man," but with the advent of mechanical traction he has largely lost his place in absolute necessity.

Are We Losing Our Teeth?

There is, unfortunately, little room for doubt on this question. In spite of the fact that our teeth are attended to as never before, they are gradually going, a fact amply proved in the late war, when hardly a recruit in the Old Country came up to the standards of the Old Army, so far as his teeth were concerned.

Not only are our teeth feeble and liable to early decay, but our jaws are getting too small to take their full complement of teeth. The reason is that nature invariably dispenses with the unnecessary. With soft foods, perfectly cooked and easily digested, our teeth are no longer an absolute necessity to our livelihood, and so they are gradually tending to vanish.

The lyre bird of Australia is a mimic. In the early morning hours it is at its best, duplicating the whistle of a locomotive, the barking of a dog, the call of a magpie, and the buzz of a circular saw in varying tones.

AIRPLANES MAY AID ELOPERS

Science Seems to Have Given Sweethearts Another Way to Trick Their Irate Parents.

Will modern lovers elope by air?

It is on record that at least one enterprising couple have made such an attempt. Unfortunately the plan was nipped in the bud owing to unforeseen circumstances. But there is little reason to doubt that before long aerial Don Juans will soar away with their fair burdens.

It is interesting to recall the various means of effecting elopements. They are as old as time. First they took place on foot with perhaps the aid of a rowing boat to help cross a river. Horses, too, were in great demand and many a happy maid rode pillion snatched away from under the very eyes of her irate parents. Later came the touch to aid Romeo and Juliet and what a gallant "my love against the world" air it added to the romance. Trains and automobiles have also played their part in "love's young dream," but the future "stunt" will be to elope by airplane.

The airplane wooer will have to be on his guard against the vigilance of the law which has already found the flying machine useful in the execution of justice. Thus a policeman in Los Angeles attempted to arrest a Japanese aviator for debt. The man promptly flew off while the policeman gave chase in an automobile. The pursuit continued until the aviator was compelled to come down through lack of gasoline.

A somewhat similar occurrence took place in Florida. A negro servant in a fashionable hotel stole a very valuable brooch. He ran away but detectives discovered, by means of wireless, that he was on board a ship off Bermuda. The vessel was delayed a few days off the coast while it was decided to bring him back by hydroplane, the machine being offered by Harold McCormick. The owner, accompanied by a detective, acted as pilot. In a few minutes they were alongside the ship, the thief was arrested and taken back a prisoner.—Sydney Levy in the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Caught 28,000,000 Fish.

Fishing is not like farming. The farmer can reckon pretty well what his crops are going to yield, but the fisherman merely guesses.

Our East coast fishermen, for instance, guessed that they would be visited in the middle of last September by herrings. But the herrings did not come, according to London Answers. Then, when all hope had been relinquished the herrings turned up one day—some 28,000,000 of them.

Perhaps the late summer had made them lose count of the calendar and delay their visit.

Fishermen who had been looking glum returned with beaming faces. Three hundred and fifty boats, after dreary days of waiting, came back with loads averaging 80 crans each—that is, 80,000 herrings. Some boats had more, one bringing in 100,000 fish. The total fish landed in one day equaled 28,000,000, with millions more to follow.

Herrings, like swallows, have their migrating periods. The swallows fly free, but the poor herrings—or a goodly portion of them—are cooked and eaten.

Asleep.

The Woman at service could not resist the temptation of watching a man on the opposite side of the church who had fallen asleep during the middle of the sermon. He did not snore or create any disturbance, and he looked so comfortable and peaceful that his neighbors smiled at each other indulgently and did not rouse him.

The Woman speculated a little on how and when he would wake up. When she had worked it out to her own satisfaction she again bestowed her attention on the sermon, still keeping half an eye on the man asleep.

At the close of the sermon, when the congregation knelt, the man evidently sensed the stir around him as that of the audience departing. He stood up quickly, grabbed his hat and overcoat and started to make his exit. Then he did wake up.—Chicago Journal.

One on Him.

The telephone bell at police headquarters jangled sharply.

"Police headquarters," answered Fred Loucks, operator.

"Where?" asked a surprised voice over the wire.

"This is the police station," informed the operator.

"Well, my name is Jones and I'm stopping at the Claypool hotel. Some one left word for me to call Mr. Cell at Main 1750. Is he there?"

"Yes, we have several Mr. Cells here," replied Loucks, "but their language is a dead one."

"That's one on me, old timer," retorted the inquirer, as he hung up.

A few days ago, Mr. Loucks said, a sweet voice inquired whether Mary could answer the phone.—Indianapolis News.

Finds It Hard to Collect.

Lending money to kings is an experience which Mrs. Roberta Meager Corwin Hill Tearle, formerly of Brooklyn, but lately of Paris, declares is exciting, but not altogether profitable. She arrived in New York from Paris bent on visiting the American Treasury department to seek aid in collecting 5,000,000 francs, which, she says, she loaned Prince William of Wied, who occupied the throne of Albania for seven months before the war.—Minneapolis Journal.

Address and Presentation

A great many of the members of the Odessa Sunday School and of the Church, and also their neighbours, surprised Mr. and Mrs. Lachlan McLean on Thursday night, Nov. 22nd, when they gathered at the home to spend the evening. All crowded the parlors that were played by Mrs. Mabee and Mrs. Holmes, who are "par excellence" in that art. Before the dainty refreshments by night by the ladies, were served. Mr. and Mrs. McLean were called to the centre of the gathering, and the following address was read:—

Dear Mr. and Mrs. McLean,

We, your friends and neighbours, are gathered here this evening to extend to you a welcome and to show our appreciation of the services you are rendering in connection with the Sunday School and Church.

While you have only been with us a few months, we have already realized the interests of the Sunday School and Church are foremost in your lives.

While the event originated in the Sunday School, its influence was felt by several other members of the church, who asked that they too might have the privilege of uniting with us and participate in the evening's enjoyment. We trust that this work of labour and love for the advancement of God's Kingdom on earth may grow, and we may all hear the message:

"Go labour on while it is day,
The world's dark night is hastening on;
Speed, speed the work, cast sloth away.
It is not thus that souls are won."

We ask you to accept this sum of money and other personal gifts as a token of our appreciation of your services, and trust you may be spared for many years of usefulness in our midst.

Signed on behalf of the Sunday School and Church.

S. W. CLARK,
Superintendent.
SOFORD P. DIXON,
Pastor.

Mr. McLean, in a few words, expressed for himself and Mrs. McLean their deep appreciation of the kindness and thoughtfulness of the community in which they have come to live in thus coming to their home.

PLATE OF FAMOUS OLD BATTALION PRESENTED TO DOMINION OF CANADA

Was Originally Hundredth Regiment of Line and Formed of Canadians at Time of Indian Mutiny—Prince of Wales Presents Tablet to Premier King.

London, Nov. 22.—The Prince of Wales to-day handed to Premier King a silver tablet commemorating the gift of the regimental plate of the first battalion of the Leinster Regiment to the Dominion of Canada. The tablet records that the plate was given on disbandment of the battalion as a token of regard for the Dominion which gave birth to the battalion, to be held in trust until such time as the battalion is again raised.

The first battalion of the Leinster Regiment disbanded last year owing to the reorganization of the army following a reduction of the general strength on creation of the Irish Free State. The battalion, originally the hundredth regiment of the line, was raised in Canada at the time of the Indian Mutiny when troops were urgently needed. When the army was re-organized on the territorial system the regiment became the first battalion of the Leinsters, but up to the last the subsidiary title was the Royal Canadians and the members bore a maple leaf on the collar.

The plate now presented to Canada comprises a considerable collection. Many pieces were given to Canadians when the regiment was formed nearly seventy years back. The collection will probably be exhibited at Ottawa.

WISE AND OTHERWISE.

"Yes, sir, what sort of a rug?"
"Well, it's for a living-room. It orterbe kinda green an' not too rough, an' lay flat. You know, the kind of a rug a feller can pett on school."

Corns cause much suffering, but Holloway's Corn Remover offers a speedy, sure, and satisfactory relief.

"So," sobbed Illma Vaselineovitch, "Ivan Ninespotski died in battle! Do you say he uttered my name as he was dying?"

"Part of it," replied the returned soldier; "part of it."

A pleasant medicine for children is Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator, and it is excellent for driving worms from the system.

"Yoor daughter recites very well," the pastor's wife remarked to Mrs. Muddleby at the church social.

"Yes," said Mrs. Muddleby. "I'm goin' to give her a course in elocution." Then she smiled and added: "To acrter finish her off, you know."

The Friend of All Sufferers.—Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil is a valuable remedy to all those who suffer pain. It holds out hope to everyone and realizes it by stilling suffering everywhere. It is a liniment that has the blessing of half a continent. It is on sale everywhere and can be found wherever enquired for.

A Lowland farmer on his deathbed recommended his wife to marry their "servant-man," and said that he could not die happily till she promised to do so.

"Oh, gudeman," she replied, "ye may die in peace, for Sandy and I have settled that already."

Relieves Asthma at Once. If you could read the thousands of unsolicited letters received by the makers from grateful users you, too, would realize the remarkable powers of Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Asthma Remedy. All cases, incipient and chronic, are benefited by this great family remedy. Why suffer or experiment with worthless preparations when the genuine Kellogg's can be purchased everywhere.

He was an argumentative local Councillor, and was crushing an opponent's case.

"Gentlemen," he said, "you may say with Councillor Smith, that this is a case of six of one and half a dozen of the other. But I say, No"—a pause for emphasis—"No; it is nothing of the sort. It is exactly the contrary."

Miller's Worm Powders seldom fail. They immediately attack the worms and expel them from the system. They are complete in themselves, not only as a worm destroyer, but as a highly beneficial medicine for children, correcting weak digestion and restoring the debilitated system to healthfulness, without which the growth of the child will be retarded and its constitution weakened.

Pat was telling Mike how he picked winners at the races. "Ye see, I hold up a list of the horses and get the wife to shut her eyes and jab a hatpin into the list, an', begorra, the one that hatpin goes through wins every time."

"It's a great scheme ye have, Pat," said Mike, "and, faith, I'll try the same meself. But not with a hatpin; it's a fork I'll stick so I'll get three winners first, second an' third."

Fresh Supplies in Demand. Wherever Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil has been introduced it increased. Supplies have been ordered, showing that wherever it goes this excellent Oil impresses as a sure and powerful remedy. No matter in what latitude it may be found its potency is never impaired. It is put up in the most portable shape in bottles and can be carried without fear of breakage.

When the late Lord Randolph Churchill was in America he visited Philadelphia, and while collecting statistics relating to the state prisons of Pennsylvania he was referred to the head of the state prisons board, Colwallader Biddle. Before calling upon Mr. Biddle, however, Lord Randolph got into the hands of some wags of the Union League Club.

"You've got the name wrong," said one of these merry jesters. "It's not Cadwallader Biddle, but Bidcallader Waddle."

"Don't mind what he says, Lord Randolph," exclaimed another. "The real name is Waddlecall Diddlebar."

A third member took the ex-chancellor of the exchequer aside and imparted to him in confidence that he was being gulled on all sides.

"The actual name," confided his false friend, "is Diddbullder Widdle."

And when Lord Randolph drove to the prisons board that afternoon he was by much the worst that he stammered:

"Will you take this card to Mr. Bid —cad—well—wad—did — dollader, what's his name? I mean the chief of the board, but I forget his extraordinary nomenclature combination."

No need to worry if the radiator of your car is filled with the proper mixture of water and alcohol. Potentively can't freeze. Full directions at Wallace's.

TO EXPLORE WILD AUSTRALIA

Centre of Vast Continent Is Aim of Group of Scientists.

A vast area in central Australia, that has remained virtually a mystery because of its inaccessibility, is to be penetrated by a group of British and American scientists, under the auspices of the British-American Exploration syndicate.

Two of the explorers are C. W. Rogers, of San Diego, and Sergt. A. Waelly, who was with the Eighteenth United States Engineers in France. Final arrangements will be made in Townsville, Australia, and the party will sail around Cape York and across the Gulf of Carpentaria to Port Darwin, where final stores will be shipped. An endeavor will be made to land between Port Darwin and Broome.

The party intends to proceed inland through country inhabited by native tribes, which are said to be hostile to white men. The explorers hope to conciliate the tribe members and to gain valuable assistance from them.

The equipment of the party will include a small wireless telegraph plant by which it is hoped that communication may be maintained with cattle stations on the northwest coast. A motion picture machine will be used and pictures will be taken of features of the country and tribes, if possible.

It is estimated that the expedition will be away between one and two years. It hopes to work across Australia to the south.

Age of the Novel.

As the Elizabethan age was the age of the drama, the nineteenth century has been the age of the novel. At a certain level of general culture, with certain combinations of economic and social conditions in force, it would be well worth while to explore), certain artistic and literary forms impose themselves. These forms the writer is almost compelled to accept, either because he relies on his writing for his living, or because he feels instinctively that he must embrace the means necessary to reaching the largest possible audience. I myself make no doubt that Shakespeare was largely "comfortable" with the drama; some of the Shakespearean forms, I think, were not. With the greatest master of English literature now living, Mr. Hardy, it went against the grain to accept the novel form; from the first (he has lately told us) he preferred poetry, and the sureness of his instinct has been abundantly shown by the astonishing poetic achievements of his later years, when the necessity of accepting the novel form no longer existed for him. George Gissing even more reluctantly accepted the novel, and won a minor triumph in a form he detested. In his work you can actually see inclination at war with destiny, and his style (which was naturally that of the secular highbrow general ideas) suffered obviously as a result. On the other side, the highest English poetry in the nineteenth century might well be written as the history of an unsuccessful attempt to discover a poetic form that should be as natural to the age as the novel.—J. Middleton Murry, in "The Problem of Style."

Novelist Proved His Case.

It may be recalled that Charles Dickens, the famous novelist, employs spontaneous combustion to give force to one of the episodes in his fascinating story known as "Bleak House."

One of the dark characters of the story is old Krook, proprietor of a rag and bone warehouse. He is a grasping drunkard, consuming great quantities of gin. One day two men, occupying an upper room in the old warehouse, smelt burning, and on going below to investigate, found a smouldering heap of something looking like charred old rags. At the inquest the coroner's jury held that old Krook came to his end by spontaneous combustion.

Some critics of Dickens challenged this as being impossible. The account of Krook's death was, therefore, said to be a blemish on the whole story.

Dickens replied by citing a similar case that had occurred in Paris, France, and was confirmed by a report of several eminent medical men who had thoroughly investigated the matter.

Restores Ancient Honor.

After a lapse of 208 years, the office of hereditary Keeper of Stirling Castle, the ancient residence of the Stuart kings, has been restored by King George to the Earl of Mar and Kellie. This office was conferred on an ancestor of the present earl in the year 1370, and held by the family with one break, till 1715. The then earl took sides with the Stuarts and being defeated in Sheriffmuir, was deprived of his title.

At the ceremony of restoration the earl presented his royal warrant of office to the military commander of the castle, and received in return the key on a red velvet cushion. Taking over the key, the earl said that King George had forgiven the act which had deprived the Erskine family of an honor highly prized by it, and which had now been restored.

Some Rights of Royalty.

King George has the right by statute to the head of every whale caught on the coasts of his kingdom. The tail is to go to the Queen, that her wardrobe shall be furnished with whalebone. The King is also entitled to every sturgeon taken and landed in the United Kingdom, and should receive, too, every year from divers persons a certain number of two white doves, two white hares, a catapult, a pound of cumin seed, a horse and a halter, a pair of scarlet hose, and a silver needle from his tailor.

WOMEN'S WAYS.

Eminent English Novelist Attempts an Explanation.

"All human being are strange, but all can be understood if we will put ourselves in their place," says Mr. W. L. George in the Royal Magazine. "If women sometimes understand men better than men do women, it is because they make this effort, while most men are too lazy to ask themselves what they would feel if they were in the women's position, just shrug their shoulders, say, 'So like a woman!' and leave it at that. It is a shame, then, that men should fail to see what is passing in the woman's mind.

"When we come to women's attitude to clothes we strike a vital part of their nature. A popular theory (very quaintly) like would become very dull.

"It is, however, when we come to love that the investication of woman becomes most interesting, because love provides an environment in which we must be drawn from a new hat. In many forms I have found myself saying: 'Love is women's one adventure.' I mean that while men have career, money, or art to pursue, women concentrates all her energies about the capture of the little god. But the little god is a very dangerous domestic pet.

"It was a man who suggested to me that: 'Love though blind is impudently not dumb, and uses speech to conceal the truth.' Women complain equally of his silver tongue, long past the gentle passion, whose chief delight was to make marriages. It is her case I have in mind when I say: 'Romance is woman's compensation for the dullness of life.'

"This naturally does not apply to all women; it does not entirely apply to the energetic girds who are to-day making their own careers. There are as liable to fall in love as the old-fashioned women, but when they do it is not always a success. I am thinking of one who, rather late, married a successful engineer and gave up her own work, a prosperous typewriting office. She is very unhappy, and I sum her up to myself: 'Only a great love can compensate a woman for the loss of a freedom which she has enjoyed.'"

Fireflies.

The statement that the light of fireflies and other phosphorescent insects is produced without any sensible decree of heat has often been repeated, writes Sanny Ross, and as to the quantity of heat that would be required to produce a similar amount of light by artificial methods, no information is supplied by Prof. Macintosh. He says that a temperature approaching 2,000 degrees Fahrenheit would be necessary to make a light equivalent to that emitted by an ordinary firefly — an enormous waste of energy in all industrial methods of producing light at present limitated by man. The very simplicity of the mechanism employed by nature in phosphorescent insects is baffling.

Effect of Water Shed.

A curious result of a study of the Blue Ridge mountain region in North Carolina and Virginia is the showing that the Atlantic is slowly eating away the water sheds that have hitherto flowed toward the Mississippi. This arises from the fact that the Blue Ridge, instead of being a crest with strong slopes on each side, is an escarpment separating a mountainous upland on the southeast, and the high-level headwaters of the streams that flow toward the Mississippi are continually losing breath by the retreat of the escarpment, through the progressive erosion of the low-level headwaters of the Atlantic-seeking streams. From a practical point of view, of course, the change is very slow.

Star Near Earth.

The star Alpha Centauri, one of the nearest to the earth, consists, as the telescope shows, of two suns, one of which is five or six times brighter than the other. But observations by Roberts at the Cape of Good Hope Observatory led to the conclusion that the two components of Alpha Centauri, much as they differ in brightness, are really twice as heavy as our own sun. It seems to follow from these facts that one of those twin suns is losing its light and in the course of ages may become only a gigantic opaque planet, while its companion will continue to blaze with solar splendor.

Didn't Need Nerve Tonic.

"You are in a very bad condition," said a physician to a weak-looking patient. "Just take this prescription to the chemist. It will cost you a dollar." "Thanks," said the patient, "but you might lend me the money." Then the doctor, in amazement, took back the paper, and made out a fresh prescription. "Take this one," he said. "It will cost you a quarter; the other prescription was for your nerves."

How Do You Feel When You Wake Up in The Morning?

Once you open your eyes are you wide awake? Do you feel thoroughly refreshed? Are you full of life and energy? Are you glowing with health and is it a joy to be alive? If you experience these feelings you are in perfect health. But—how often do you feeling tired? Does it take you sometime to get thoroughly awake? Is it an effort to get out of bed? Do you feel depressed, weak, lifeless? This is the way Mrs. Lytle felt and this is the way she was relieved:

"Having had a very strenuous time for some months last year, I found myself weak and easily overcome with any extra exertion. As soon as I placed my head on the pillow at night my brain began to race and jump from one thing to another. It would be hours before I could get to sleep and when I did sleep it was only fitful. I would get up next morning more tired than when I laid down. It was an effort to dress. I had to fairly force myself to do the housework. At that I had to stop and rest every little while. Dodd's was recommended to me. I found it was all I expected and more. Its building and toning qualities were daily noticeable. I have every confidence in Carnol as a splendid strengthening tonic for women. I strongly recommend Carnol to every woman who is feeling as I felt."—Mrs. R. J. Lytle, 235 12th Avenue W., Calgary.

Romances of Married Life

The centenary of the birth of a Victorian poet who immortalized his wife in the most widely read poem of its time, "The Angel in the House," occurred on July 23rd.

Love had been the theme of poetry from time immemorial, but it had not always been the love of husband and wife. In fact, until Coventry Patmore set himself to write a great poem on married lovers, the romance of matrimony, no poet of much importance in the world had ever taken that for his theme.

Coventry Patmore was always annoyed when people identified Honoria Churchill and Felix Vaughan, the fictitious characters of the poem, with Emily Augusta Andrews and himself, for Honoria was the daughter of a dean and lived in a deanery in a cathedral city, whilst Emily Andrews, who became Emily Patmore, was the daughter of a Congregational minister and lived at Wandsworth.

That seemed sufficient. Yet the poem has the following inscription: "This poem is inscribed to the memory of her by whom and for whom I became a poet," and it is quite certain that one of the most idyllic marriages a poet ever made was the true source of "The Angel in the House."

By common consent Patmore's Emily was an "angel," both "in the house" and out of it. Millais, then a young man, but destined to become president of the Royal Academy, painted her portrait. Thomas Woolner, the finest sculptor of his day, made a medallion of her lovely head, and Robert Browning wrote a poem about her, and, best of all, her husband, out of the experience of her daily love and service, wrote a poem which became a "best seller," running into a quarter of a million copies.

Tennyson, who had his own taste in feminine charm, was captivated by Patmore's wife, and Ruskin and Carlyle were among her outspoken admirers. She died after fifteen perfect years of married life.

The Pre-Raphaelite room at the Tate Gallery is dotted all over with the face and features of Elizabeth Eleanor Siddall, who, being exceedingly beautiful, was constantly painted and drawn by Dante Gabriel Rossetti, who eventually married her. She was a favorite model of many other painters, and it is she who is floating down the stream among scattered flowers in Millais' famous picture "Ophelia."

She enjoyed only two years of married life, and the poet-painter was inconsolable at her loss that he had all his manuscript poems, which he said she had inspired, buried in her grave, and it was not for many years, and then at the continued solicitation of his friends, that he would consent to their recovery.

Burns has immortalized Jean Armour, his wife, in several of his wonderful songs, and chiefly the most natural and beautiful of all his love lyrics, written, not before, but after marriage:—

O'er the airts the wind can blaw
I dearly like the west,
For there the bonnie lassie lives,
The lassie I lo'e best.

If was at a time when he was temporarily at a distance from his wife, and the west wind came from her to him. She had, too, a good Martin view, and thus Burns says:—

There's not a bonnie bird that sings
But minds me o' my Jean.

Milton also immortalized his second wife, who appears to have won all his love. Their married life lasted only a year. To Katherine Woodcock the great sonnet was written which resembles the fantasy one of Petrarch to his dead Laura.

Methought I saw my late espoused saint
Brought to me like Alcestis from the grave.

It was probably this great sonnet on dreaming of the return of a dead wife which Millais had in mind when he painted his great picture "Speak! Speak!"

The Smallest Fish.

Probably the smallest fish in the world are to be found in the mountain lake, Buhl, in the island of Luzon, Philippines. This fish, which the natives call the "sunarpad," is the most minute vertebrae animal known to science. It weighs only half a grain, and half an inch is its maximum length. The natives catch it with a net of exceedingly fine mesh —scarcely more than a coarse cloth— which is used as a sieve. In this manner great quantities of the tiny fishes are captured, and being dried in a mass in the sun without any other addition, are seasoned with pepper and other spices and pressed into flat round cakes. Inasmuch as a single cake contains from 2,000 to 4,000 fishes, the smallness of the latter will be realized.

A New Chemical.

Treating wool or woollen goods with a newly discovered chemical called "eulan," which is both colorless and odorless, makes the goods higher offensive to moths. The chemical is the discovery of a German chemist, who based his experiments on the observed fact that moths avoid cloth colored with certain dyes, such, for example, as cosin.

Tay Alias Tea.

This advertisement appeared in the London Public Adviser just fifteen years after Montreal was founded: "Tast excellent and by all Physitians approved China Drink, called by the Chinese Teha, by other nations Tay, alias Tea, is sold at the Sultaness Head, a cophee-house in Sweetings Rents, by the Royal Exchange, London."

FAT MEN ARE POOR RISKS.

Insurance Companies Find Lean Persons More Acceptable.

Let me have men about me that are fat,
Sleek-headed men, such as sleep o' nights;
Yon Cassius has a lean and hungry look;
He thinks too much; such men are dangerous.
—Shakespeare's "Julius Caesar."

"When the great English bard wrote these lines he apparently was not concerned about the effect of excess weight upon longevity," said Dr. George C. Ruhland, health commissioner.

Insurance companies, declared the commissioner, are convinced, through many years' of experience, that fat men are more dangerous and the lean are more desirable, from the standpoint of underwriting insurance risks.

Volumes of statistics could be brought to bear, for instance, to show that, after 25 years old, overweight has a definite and highly appreciable effect on mortality.

"Overweight, we are told, is a serious impairment among insured lives, the gravity increasing with the excess in weight over the average for the height and age," said Dr. Ruhland.

"This is true, of course, in ages over 35. In younger persons, a limited amount of overweight is an advantage, as such persons usually have a lower death rate from tuberculosis.

"Among men less than 5 feet 7 inches tall, at the age period between 40 and 44 years, an excess of 20 per cent. in weight involves an added mortality risk. A 40 per cent. increase in weight in such individuals involves an increased mortality of nearly 80 per cent.

"Among tall men, that is, those over 5 feet 10 inches in height, the adverse situation is even more marked. Among them, at ages 40 to 44, a 20 per cent. excess in weight adds to the mortality, while a 40 per cent. excess in weight doubles the mortality.

In general, underweight is an advantage unless it is too marked. Below the age of 40, tall men who are 20 per cent. underweight have a 20 per cent. increase in mortality, while those 30 per cent. underweight have a death rate of 50 per cent. greater than normal.

"But for those over 40 there are no such penalties. Underweight then is an advantage and those persons have the best mortality rates."

Occasional comparison of one's weight with recognized correct height and weight tables and consultation with a physician when a marked difference appears were suggested by the commissioner for those who are either greatly under or over weight. Moderately overweight persons need not worry particularly, the commissioner said. — Milwaukee Journal.

Fined For a Fashion!

As far back as the reign of Edward I. there was a form of jumper in vogue which was known as the note-bardie.

In Henry IV.'s time the scalloping of ladies' skirts was not allowed, for in 1462 a law was passed against "the cutting of the edges of sleeves or the borders of gowns into the form of letter, leaves, or other devices."

Even handkerchiefs were once regulated by law. There was an edict dated June 2nd, 1785, and issued by Louis XVI., at the request of Marie Antoinette, which decreed that "the length of handkerchiefs shall be equal to their width." Since then they have been square; and it seems likely that they will remain so.

The top-hat was first introduced in England by a Strand haberdasher named Hetherington. Such a large crowd was attracted that he was summoned on a charge of breach of the peace, and was required to give bonds to the value of £500.

Men In Their Prime.

From 23 to 49 for the average man. Long ago a man was considered at his strongest and most beautiful between 20 and 30, at his best as a leader or manager from 30 to 40, as an experienced man of business from 40 to 50, and as a councillor or judge of other men's troubles from 50 to 60. Roughly these divisions are to some extent still correct. Modern life, however, with its increased opportunities for travel and education, has so speeded up conditions that young men of business and politics have by the twenties often acquired enough experience to allow them to rise to their prime early in life. At the other end of life, altered social conditions and better medical attention have allowed physical efficiency to be retained far longer.

Lost In Transaction.

It is just a hundred years since the British infantryman, by order of the Duke of York, discarded the breeches, gaiters, and shoes that had constituted half his uniform, and appeared in the blue-grey trousers and half-boots of the new dispensation. As usual, the private soldier was no gainer by the change. Hitherto he had been provided with a waistcoat by a grateful nation, but with the advent of trousers, then more expensive than breeches, the waistcoat became one of the "necessaries" the private had to "find" out of his shilling a day.

Alcohol From Acorns.

It has recently been stated that alcohol can be made from acorns. When shelled they contain about 40 per cent. of starch, which can be readily saccharified and then converted into alcohol. The alcohol, it is suggested, can then be used as a motor fuel.

Spider's Web Industry.

In Madagascar experiments have been made with a spider's web as a substitute for silk. The results are so encouraging that there are hopes that a great industry will be the result.

"Wombat is a much bigger man than he was."
"He is bigger than I ever supposed he could be."
"What do you mean?"
"Notwithstanding his rapid growth he still wears the same sized hat."

Romances of Married Life

The centenary of the birth of a Victorian poet who immortalized his wife in the most widely read poem of his time. "The Angel in the House," occurred on July 23rd.

Love had been the theme of poetry from time immemorial, but it had not always been the love of husband and wife. In fact, until Coventry Patmore set himself to write a great poem on married lovers, the romance of matrimony, no poet of much importance in the world had ever taken that for his theme.

Coventry Patmore was always annoyed when people identified Honoria Churchill and Felix Vaughan, the fictitious characters of the poem, with Emily Augusta Andrews and Edmund, for Honoria was the daughter of a dean and lived in a deanery in a cathedral city, whilst Emily Andrews, who became Emily Patmore, was the daughter of a Congregational minister and lived at Wandsworth.

That seemed sufficient. Yet the poem has the following inscription:

This poem is inscribed to the memory of her by whom and for whom I became a poet," and it is quite certain that one of the most idyllic married lives a poet ever made was the true source of "The Angel in the House."

By common consent Patmore's Emily was an "angel," both "in the house" and out of it. Millais, then a young man, but destined to become president of the Royal Academy, painted her portrait. Thomas Woolner, the finest sculptor of his day, made a medallion of her lovely head, and Robert Browning wrote a poem about her, and, best of all, her husband, out of the experience of her daily love and service, wrote a poem which became a "best seller," running into a quarter of a million copies.

Tennyson, who had his own taste in feminine charm, was captivated by Patmore's wife, and Ruskin and Clayle were among her outspoken admirers. She died after fifteen perfect years of married life.

The Pre-Raphaelite room at the Tate Gallery is dotted all over with the face and features of Elizabeth Eleanor Siddall, who, being exceedingly beautiful, was constantly painted and drawn by Dante Gabriel Rossetti, who eventually married her. She was a favorite model of many other painters, and it is she who is leaning down the stream among scattered flowers in Millais' famous picture "Ophelia."

She enjoyed only two years of married life, and the poet-painter was so incomfortable at her loss that he had all his manuscript poems, which he said she had inspired, buried in her grave, and it was not for many years, and then at the continued solicitation of his friends, that he would consent to their recovery.

Burns has immortalized Jean Armour, his wife, in several of his wonderful songs, and chiefly the most natural and beautiful of all his love lyrics, written, not before, but after marriage:—

Of a' the airts the wind can blaw
I dearly like the west,
For there the bonnie lassie lives,
The lassie I lo'e best.

It was at a time when he was temporarily at a distance from his wife, and the west wind came from her to him. She had, too, a good singing voice, and thus Burns says:—

There's not a bonnie bird that sings
But minds me o' my Jean.

Milton also immortalized his second wife, who appears to have won all his love. Their married life lasted only a year. To Katherine Woodcock the great sonnet was written which resembles the famous one of Petrarch to his dead Laura.

Methought I saw my late espoused saint
Brought to me like Alcestis from the grave.

It was probably this great sonnet of dreaming of the return of a dead wife which Millais had in mind when he painted his great picture "Speak! Speak!"

The Smallest Fish.

Probably the smallest fish in the world are to be found in the mountain lake, Buhl, in the island of Luzon, Philippines. This fish, which the natives call the "sunrapah," is the most minute vertebrate animal known to science. It weighs only half a grain, and half an inch is its maximum length. The natives catch it with a net of exceedingly fine mesh —scarcely more than a coarse cloth, which is used as a sieve. In this manner great quantities of the tiny fishes are captured, and being dried in a mass in the sun without any other cooking, are seasoned with pepper and other spices and pressed into flat round cakes. Inasmuch as a single cake contains from 2,000 to 4,000 fishes, the smallness of the latter will be realized.

A New Chemical.

Treating wool or woollen goods with a newly discovered chemical called "eulan," which is both colorless and odorless, makes the goods highly offensive to moths. The chemical is the discovery of a German chemist, who based his experiments on the observed fact that moths avoid cloth colored with certain dyes, such, for example, as cosin.

Tay Alias Tee.

This advertisement appeared in the London Public Adviser just fifteen years after Montreal was founded: "That excellent and by all Physitians approved China Drink, called by the Chinese Teha, by other nations Tay, alias Tee, is sold at the Sultaness Head, a cophee-house in Sweetings Renta, by the Royall Exchange, London."

FAT MEN ARE POOR RISKS.

Insurance Companies Find Lean Persons More Acceptable.

Let me have men about me that are fat,
Sleek-headed men, such as sleep o' nights;
Yon Cassius has a lean and hungry look;
He thinks too much; such men are dangerous.
—Shakespeare's "Julius Caesar."

"When the great English bard wrote these lines he apparently was not concerned about the effect of excess weight upon longevity," said Dr. George C. Ruhland, health commissioner.

Insurance companies, declared the commissioner, are convinced, through many years' of experience, that fat men are more dangerous and the lean are more desirable, from the standpoint of underwriting insurance risks.

Volumes of statistics could be brought to bear, for instance, to show that, after 35 years old, overweight has a definite and highly appreciable effect on mortality.

"Overweight, we are told, is a serious impairment among insured lives, the gravity increasing with the excess in weight over the average for the height and age," said Dr. Ruhland.

"This is true, of course, in ages over 25. In younger persons, a limited amount of overweight is an advantage, as such persons usually have a lower death rate from tuberculosis.

"Among men less than 5 feet 7 inches tall, at the age period between 40 and 44 years, an excess of 20 per cent. in weight involves an added mortality risk. A 40 per cent. increase in weight in such individuals involves an increased mortality of nearly 80 per cent.

"Among tall men, that is, those over 5 feet 10 inches in height, the adverse situation is even more marked. Among them, at ages 40 to 44, a 20 per cent. excess in weight adds to the mortality, while a 40 per cent. excess in weight doubles the mortality.

In general, underweight is an advantage unless it is too marked. Below the age of 40, tall men who are 20 per cent. underweight have a 20 per cent. increase in mortality, while those 20 per cent. underweight have a death rate of 50 per cent. greater than normal.

"But for those over 40 there are no such penalties. Underweight then is an advantage and those persons have the best mortality rate."

Occasional comparison of one's weight with recognized correct height and weight tables and consultation with a physician when a marked difference appears were suggested by the commissioner for those who are either greatly under or over weight. Moderately offweight persons need not worry particularly, the commissioner said. — Milwaukee Journal.

Fined For a Fashion!

As far back as the reign of Edward I. there was a form of jumper in vogue which was known as the cote-hardie.

In Henry IV.'s time the scalloping of ladies' skirts was not allowed, for in 1462 a law was passed against "the cutting of the edges of sleeves or the borders of gown into the form of letter, leaves, or other devices."

Even handkerchiefs were once regulated by law. There was an edict dated June 2nd, 1785, and issued by Louis XVI., at the request of Marie Antoinette, which decreed that "the length of handkerchiefs shall be equal to their width." Since then they have been square; and it seems likely that they will remain so.

The top-hat was first introduced in England by a Strand haberdasher named Hetherington. Such a large crowd was attracted that he was summoned on a charge of breach of the peace, and was required to give bonds to the value of £500.

Men In Their Prime.

From 28 to 49 for the average man. Long ago a man was considered at his strongest and most beautiful between 26 and 30, at his best as a leader or manager from 30 to 40, as an experienced man of business from 40 to 50, and as a councillor or judge of other men's troubles from 50 to 60. Roughly these divisions are to some extent still correct. Modern life, however, with its increased opportunities for travel and education, has so speeded up conditions that young men of business and politics have by the twenties often acquired enough experience to allow them to rise to their prime early in life. At the other end of life, altered social conditions and better medical attention have allowed physical efficiency to be retained far longer.

Lost In Transaction.

It is just a hundred years since the British infantryman, by order of the Duke of York, discarded the breeches, gaiters, and shoes that had constituted half his uniform, and appeared in the blue-grey trousers and half-boots of the new dispensation. As usual, the private soldier was no gainer by the change. Hitherto he had been provided with a waistcoat by a grateful nation, but with the advent of trousers, then more expensive than breeches, the waistcoat became one of the "necessaries" the private had to "find" out of his shilling a day.

Alcohol From Acorns.

It has recently been stated that alcohol can be made from acorns. When shelled they contain about 40 per cent. of starch, which can be readily saccharified and then converted into alcohol. The alcohol, it is suggested, can then be used as a motor fuel.

Spider's Web Industry.

In Madagascar experiments have been made with a spider's web as a substitute for silk. The results are so encouraging that there are hopes that a great industry will be the result.

"Wombat is a much bigger man than he was."

"He is bigger than I ever supposed he could be."

"What do you mean?"

"Notwithstanding his rapid growth he still wears the same sized hat."

What strange customs they must have had at wedding feasts in Kingston fifty years ago. Fatal Accident.

A sad accident occurred on Dundas street on Wednesday afternoon about 3 o'clock, resulting in the death of Mrs. Wm. Miles. The unfortunate lady, in company with her daughter-in-law, started across the street near the Hydro Office. When part way across her companion stopped to let a car pass, but Mrs. Miles, who was an aged lady, stepped in front of the car, which was going very slowly, and was knocked over, her head striking the pavement. The injured lady was removed to Wilson's Shoe Store, but expired shortly after. The car was driven by Mr. Meagher, of Read, who, it is said, was travelling very slowly in low gear.

An inquest was opened at five o'clock, but adjourned until Monday, December 3rd, at 2 o'clock. It is thought that the cause of death was a concussion or a ruptured blood-vessel produced when she fell backward, striking the back of the skull on the sidewalk.

Forming a Rebekah Lodge.

Monday evening about forty-five ladies and gentlemen, mostly ladies, gathered in the rooms of Argyll Lodge No. 212, I.O.O.F., for the purpose of completing arrangements for the organization and installation of a Rebekah Lodge in Napanee. Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Clark, and Mr. and Mrs. Sam. Jordan, of Kingston, were present and rendered valuable assistance and information in the details necessary for the completion of the organization scheme. By a unanimous vote the name chosen for this new lodge will be "Queen of Sheba". A charter has been applied for and the institution will take place in the near future, with a membership of between forty-five and fifty. The meeting nights were fixed for the second and fourth Mondays in each month. The home of the new lodge will in all probability be in the basement of the Argyll lodge, as arrangements are already under way to that end. At the completion of the business an adjournment was made to the club room adjoining, where light refreshments were served by the ladies. The gathering was bubbling over with enthusiasm and we predict for this new organization a high degree of success in every way.

"Lor', massa, I steered dat 'boat,' was the answer.

"And do you remember when George took the back of the cherry tree?" continued the humorist.

The negro looked puzzled for a moment. Then, with a broad grin, he said : "Why, massa, I done drove dat black myself."

HISTORICAL SOCIETY

The Historical Society will begin its regular meetings on Friday, December 7th. The lecturer for the occasion is Mr. M. B. Baker, of Queen's University. Dr. Baker is the head of the Geological Department, and a master of his subject. He will lecture here on the beginning and development of life, tracing its progress from the records left us in the sands and rocks, the rivers and seas. The lecture is accompanied by interesting lantern slides.

Under other circumstances it would cost a good deal to hear such a lecture. But the Historical Society provides it free to all.

The lecture is to be held in the Historical Hall over the Public Library.

A Treasure House

It has been fittingly said that there is a veritable treasure house in the Family Herald and Weekly Star of Montreal. It is brimful of instructive reading for the whole family. A library in itself and it is doubtless true that the reading of it from week to week is in the best sense a liberal education. As for women, where on this Continent or elsewhere will they find anything to approach it? The premiums to be presented to each subscriber is spoken of as something wonderful.

New Christmas Cards.

Latest English and American designs, at prices to suit all purchasers. Your name printed on same if desired. At Hooper's Drug Store.

$2.50 or $3.50 is just about what you want to spend for your boy or girl's Xmas present. What about a Brownie or Kodak? These are sold in Napanee only at Wallace's.

The negro looked puzzled for a moment. Then, with a broad grin, he said: "Why, massa, I done drove dat hack myself."

At Kingston Fifty Years Ago.

What strange customs they must have had at wedding feasts in Kingston fifty years ago. The Whig of Tuesday tells of the baking of a relative of a Kingston lady half a century ago; but here is The Whig's yarn just as it appeared in that reliable journal: "Aged Fruit Cake: In speaking about fruit cake, a Kingston lady says that recently she ate a piece of the wedding cake of a relative that was baked fifty years ago."

Listen! Look! Nov. 30th, 1923

We're coming to Selby in autumn once more,
There's just thirty cents to be left at the door;
The play of the season. I'm sure there's no other,
For it is entitled "An Old-fashioned Mother."

The play will be funny, of that it is certain,
Right from the start to the last final curtain.
When it is finished, I'm sure you will sing,
While you are feeling so happy and gay, "God Save the King". 48a

Fatal Accident.

A sad accident occurred on Dundas street on Wednesday afternoon about 5 o'clock, resulting in the death of Mrs. Wm. Miles. The unfortunate lady, in company with her daughter-in-law, started across the street near the Hydro Office. When part way across her companion stopped to let a car pass, but Mrs. Miles, who was an aged lady, stepped in front of the car, which was going very slowly, and was knocked over, her head striking the pavement. The injured lady was removed to Wilson's Shoe Store, but expired shortly after. The car was driven by Mr. Meagher, of Read, who, it is said, was travelling very slowly in low gear.

An inquest was opened at five o'clock, but adjourned until Monday, December 3rd, at 2 o'clock. It is thought that the cause of death was a concussion or a ruptured blood-vessel produced when she fell backward, striking the back of the skull on the sidewalk.

Forming a Rebekah Lodge.

Monday evening about forty-five ladies and gentlemen, mostly ladies, gathered in the rooms of Argyll Lodge No. 212, I.O.O.F., for the purpose of completing arrangements for the organization and installation of a Rebekah Lodge in Napanee. Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Clark, and Mr. and Mrs. Sam. Jordan, of Kingston, were present and rendered valuable assistance and information in the details necessary for the completion of the organization scheme. By a unanimous vote the name chosen for this new lodge will be "Queen of Shoba". A charter has been applied for and institution will take place in the near future, with a membership of between forty-five and fifty. The meeting nights were fixed for the second and fourth Mondays in each month. The home of the new lodge will in all probability be in the beautiful lodge rooms of Argyll lodge, as arrangements are already under way to that end. At the completion of the business an adjournment was made to the club room adjoining, where light refreshments were served by the ladies. The gathering was bubbling over with enthusiasm and we predict for this new organization a high degree of success in every way.

BETHANY

Once more the funeral bells toll in our midst, telling out the mournful news that death continues to lay its iron hands upon another within our gates. The people of Bethany had not recovered from the shock of the decease of one of her valued and honoured citizens, when again in the early hours of the morning, Friday, Nov. 23rd, the call came suddenly and unexpectedly to the home of Mr. Samuel Walmsley, in the death of his beloved wife, Myrtle Teresea Hambly.

Eight weeks ago Mrs. Walmsley fell and broke her leg and was, consequently, laid aside, but even this seemed to have had no unusually serious effect upon her health, for to all around her she seemed to make great progress towards recovery. It was not in the dreams of anyone that anything so serious was following so closely behind. Here it is quite understood that her untimely death comes as a great shock to the family and community at large.

The deceased came from a family well honoured and highly respected. She was the 7th daughter of the late John and Mary Hambly, of Bethany, where nearly her entire life was spent highly to this day. There were also five brothers of the deceased, making in all a family of twelve children, and with the exception of three, all survive. The deceased was married to Mr. S. Walmsley on the 12th of October, twenty-five years ago, and this happy wedlock found expression in a very joyous and prosperous home life. A hearty welcome was ever accorded to all who called at this home, and a sympathy that never failed to express itself in a most practical way was always assured to those in sorrow, suffering or distress. The temperament and disposition of the deceased cannot be better sized up than in the words of a neighbour who deeply mourned her death, "She was as good as Gold", and this seems to be the feeling that was everywhere uppermost.

In addition to all the foregoing, the throng of people who turned out for the funeral was a most impressive evidence both of genuine respect and sincerest sympathy, for the church was crowded to overflow. There was not standing room in the church so thickly were the people packed in. The Pastor, the Rev. W. H. Truscott, had charge of the service, and spoke very fittingly from the words, "Arise ye and depart for this is not your home". The flowers were beautiful and abundant. Besides the husband's beautiful wreath, wreaths and sprays were sent by the following:—Brothers and Sisters (united), J. Walmsley, Dr. Stratton, Karl Sexsmith, Bill and Richard Sts., Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Clarke, Mr. and Mrs. P. Davy and Bethany Ladies' Aid.

Following the service the body was borne to the grave by six neighbours and friends, and many tender and sympathetic expressions were conveyed to the sorrowing husband by a host of friends from far and near by whom he is held in high respect by all.

The following is a copy of the letter of sympathy from Bethany Ladies' Aid:—

Bethany, Dec. 3rd, 1923.

Dear Mr. Walmsley,—We the members of the Bethany Ladies' Aid, beg to convey to you our deepest sympathy in your sad bereavement.

May the Lord bless and comfort you in all your hours of need is their prayer.

I remain,
Yours faithfully,
Mrs. Victor Martin,
Secretary.

Mr. (Billy) Miller is still confined to the house, and we regret to say is enduring much suffering, and the sympathy of the whole community goes out to he and Mrs. Miller at this time.

We are delighted to hear that Mr. Karl Sexsmith, of Gosport, is recovering from an attack of blood poisoning.

Miss Phyllis Truscott is spending a few weeks at Mr. W. B. Nolan's, Hay Bay, convalescing.

GRETNA

On Thursday evening last a most enjoyable time was spent at the home of Mr. Bismark Edgar, when a splendid radio concert was given by Mr. E. Smith, of Napanee. The machine operated by Mr. Smith, gave us selections from Pittsburg, New York, Zion City, etc. While the atmosphere of the night was not by any means the best, yet the numbers given were remarkably clear and distinct, and proved a means of enjoyable entertainment to the large crowd gathered there. The ladies served lunch, and but for the approaching hour of midnight there was no desire to depart. A hearty vote of thanks was tendered Mr. Smith, who generously offered to come again if wanted.

Dowling, of Ottawa, visited Mrs. Roy Garrison recently. — Mrs. Earl Trumpour, of Adolphustown, spent the week-end with his friend, Mr. Vernon Mills. — In spite of the storm on Friday night, about thirty friends were entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Sharp. — Mrs. McGinness is visiting her daughter, Mrs. W. Dingee.—Quite a few from this neighborhood attended the funeral of the late Mr. S. Close at his home on Monday last.—Mr. and Mrs. C. A. They lost all their household goods and most of their clothing. Through charity everything was restored to them and they began housekeeping the next day in the next house, Mr. Hinch's. There were nine children.—Mr. and Mrs. Fred Switzer's little daughter, Genevieve, of Desmond, spent Sunday last with her brother, Mr. Bert Amey, and wife. Also Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Youmalls, of the village, spent Sunday evening with them.—Mr. and Mrs. Tipson spent Tuesday last with Mrs. Greenway and Mrs. Jas. Her mother, Mrs. Edgar, accompanied her home for a few days' visit.—The Public School concert in the Parish Hall, on Tuesday evening last, was a decided success, financially, and a large crowd filled the hall to the doors. There was an excellent programme given by the children, and the teachers, Miss Ruth Wilson and Mrs. Harold Fairbairn, deserve great credit for the excellent manner in which the children were trained. — Mr. Albert Salisbury, River Road, left this Friday morning for Amherst Island, to spend a few days with her daughter, Miss Olive Salisbury, who is teaching school at Stella.—We would like to know why we have to pay 3c. each for bread here, when it can be bought in Napanee for 16c. a large loaf done up in paper. Also at Harrowsmith for 16c. a large loaf, and in Odessa for 12c. a loaf. If the bakers from Kingston would come out here they would sell a good lot to the people. Flour is cheaper at time of writing, just like it was before the war.—The Public School concert at Bicknell's Corners school house will be held on December 20th. An excellent programme is being prepared by teacher and pupils. Admission 15c. Every one welcome.

NEWBURGH

The unusually mild weather has given householders great relief in the matter of fuel.

We are approaching the time of year when aspirants for municipal honors should be cultivating their broadest smile. In municipalities like Newburgh we never know what to expect. Sometimes nominations are allowed to go by default, while other times some of the wise ones get together and precipitate a bomb at the last minute. Of the two courses we prefer the latter for then the deliquencies of the Council, if there are any, are brought to the light and interest is aroused. It also gives members of the Council a chance to defend their action and clear up impressions that are the result of mere gossip. We owe fair treatment to a citizen who faithfully devotes his time in the interests of the municipality, as he does it, in this municipality, without remuneration. Sometimes there is an endeavour to discount the honor of the position, but honor there is all the same. Any citizen who receives enough votes to elect him must be held in some esteem by his fellow citizens. It is well though to have an election, that there may be a chance for discrimination.

Mr. Geo. B. Paul has bought a block of timber from Mr. J. M. Ramsay, and has men employed cutting wood, saw logs, etc. This affords people who burn wood an opportunity to get a supply.

Rev. Mr. Neal, of Adolphustown, gave an address at the weekly meeting in Union Church, on Tuesday evening, which was much appreciated.

Dr. Perkins, who is a Medical Missionary on the Island of Java, and who is home on furlough, addressed the congregation on Sunday night, giving an account of his work, the circumstances and the people with whom he had to deal. What lent greater interest to the address was the fact that Dr. Perkins dealt with conditions in a part of the world with which people in general are not familiar.

Dr. Lawson, of Verona, gave his lecture on "A Trip to the Holy Lands", on Thursday evening, at the regular week night meeting. The lecture was full of interest and much enjoyed.

Mr. William Sutton has been "under the weather" for some time, is, we are glad to say, slightly improved.

Some of the farmers who left Napanee in disgust, on Poultry Day, on account of the slump in prices, unloaded at Vandervoort Bros.', who bought same at over two tons. This gives one some idea of the extent of the chicken industry in this locality, but only a few were there with a small fraction of the number who appeared on the streets of Napanee on that day.

Mail Orders promptly filled at Wallace's Drug Store.

Empty Holly Boxes for enclosing Christmas gifts, at Hooper's. Also suitable tags, cards and seals.

Mr. Campbell also addressed the Council.

On motion the Advisory Agricultural Council were all re-elected for 1924.

The account of the Council for the year was on motion ordered paid.

A hearty vote of thanks was tendered the Council for their services during the year.

He had interviewed Mr. Wellers, of the Hydro, and was informed that the Commission would be glad to instal whatever number of ornamental lights the Council desires. The capital cost would be borne by the Commission and the town would be billed on an annual rate, which would mean that the town would have no capital outlay whatever to make and would simply pay for the lights in just the same way as they do for the present system. On motion the report was adopted.

NEW RUBBER WHEEL WILL TAKE SHOCKS

Is Claimed to Have Effect of Large Soft Tires and Shock Absorbers

A flexible rubber automobile wheel, which distorts without structural injury and is resilient to a high degree, has been placed on the market by an American company.

The structural backbone of the wheel is a body of thin, porous wood and rubber plies amalgamated and interspaced into one unit. The process of amalgamation is one of interlacing the wood and rubber rather than one of lamination, so that an inseparable union is made between the rubber and wood elements. Concavity of design and flexibility of the material used permit a distortion of approximately 1½ inches under load or shock, at much the same effect as that produced by large cross-section tires and shock absorbers is obtained by this wheel.

Some of the advantages claimed for the wheel are that it is waterproof, non-rusting, easily cleaned and free from all squeaks and rattles. It is also claimed that the factor of resiliency lessens the stress on axles and springs and therefore reduces the chance of breakage. Road rumble is said to be eliminated.

The wheel requires no variation in standard wheel application practice. It is adapted to any standard rim or hub and permits use of the standard strait valve with outside inflation.

Henrietta—What kind of a husband would you advise me to look out for?

Charlotte—You let husbands alone, my dear—it's asking for trouble—you get a single man."

HUGE POWER OF LIGHTNING.

Flash During Thunderstorm Greater Than Anything Produced by Man.

When a great storm is raging, with flashes of lightning illuminating the sky and thunder crashes declaring our ears, we realize something of the stupendous power of electricity.

If a cat's back is rubbed in the dark during hot, dry weather, sparks will often fly from it. They are perfectly harmless, though they are identified with lightning flashes, and the crackling that accompanies them is thunder on a small scale.

In a thunderstorm the earth represents your hand and the clouds are the cat's back. The pressure that causes a flash of lightning may be as much as 1,000,000,000 volts — that is, 5,000,000 times greater than that which is used for household lighting.

Could we collect and harness the power set free by a single flash of lightning, we should have at our disposal a force greater than anything that can be produced by man.

In a famous scientist's laboratory the experiment was tried of producing a million-volt spark. It leaped a ten-foot gap with a noise like the explosion of a bomb and came near to wrecking the entire building. This is the highest pressure that has so far been produced artificially.

Most of the lightning in a thunderstorm does not come near the earth but flashes from cloud to cloud. Occasionally a fork of lightning leaps from cloud to earth, and then usually in its path is destroyed.—London Tit-Bits.

Valuable Tire Hints.

Put your partly worn tires on the front wheels and always put the new ones on the rear wheels. The principle of tire rotation is entirely misunderstood. It increases the tire mileage at least fifty per cent. Carried out many times.

The service which dealers called on to give on the front wheels is much less severe than on the rear wheels. Tires, largely worn out in service on the rear wheels, will run for hundreds of miles more if placed on the front ends, if transferred to the front wheels.

The chief objection to rotation of tires comes from motorists who use non-skid tires on the front wheels only. They find the projections on the front wheels make the steering more difficult. The steering is a matter of practice, however, and under ordinary will be saved if the rotation plan is tried.

Because they stay up is no reason for neglecting the state of your tires. Most drivers pay little attention to such matters and drive recklessly through all sorts of difficulties without regard to the effect on their tires. Tires need constant attention as well as the motor. They must be tried up and the wheels adjusted regularly. Gashes and cuts, made by sharp stones or trolley rails, should be treated and cared for just as any other wound.

Look for these defects regularly, make a habit of this and you will add many miles to your tire record and thereby save a great deal of money. In the list of materials necessary for temporary emergency repairs should also be fingerprints of rubber and closing surface cement, small tire tubes, tire irons, several tire patches for weak spots in casing, outside lined pieces for building temporary blowouts in shoe.

Some Peculiar Newspapers.

In the Cameroons, before the world war, a peculiar newspaper was printed, the print of which was made by means of a mimeograph machine. The mail to interior districts would be delayed 18 months. It was known as the Grenadier News Chart, and the editor advised his readers to use it as a pocket knife scratcher when read.

Some years before the war the Journal des Jumbos appeared in Paris. Its prospectus declared that it would be "absolutely useless, and that it would be in direct and shameful opposition to every one of the principles that they have had the use of theirs before and since." It went on to say: "This Journal will deal with all the medical, surgical, ever-reliable, sparkling, and quite quivering articles to the human leg of either sex."

Cause of Seminole War.

The Seminole war was a war between the Seminole Indians of Florida and the United States Government, resulting from the refusal of the red men to remove to lands west of the Mississippi river in accordance with a treaty made with some of their chiefs in 1832. The war broke out in 1835 and lasted seven years. The Indians signed a treaty of submission in 1839 and, after many days, were removed to Indian territory. Osceola, the Seminole leader, at whose instigation the original treaty was repudiated, was captured and cast into prison, where he died in 1837. The war cost the United States $20,000,000 and hundreds of lives.

Value of Movies.

What motion pictures can do is shown by the experiences of a young home missionary in the Blue Ridge Mountains who travelled by horse or mule, visits the hills and delivered his message at the crossroads to forty or fifty people. Some one provided him with an inexpensive automobile and a portable motion-picture equipment which he mounted on the rear of his car. His services now are attended by 400 to 500 people, who travel for miles over the mountains to reach them.

Train Girls' Tastes.

Every year one of the famous Parisian dressmakers permits each of his lady employes to take one dress and have it made up according to her own taste.

WORLD'S INCREASING WHEAT PRODUCTION

The Wall Street Journal gives some interesting figures in regard to the increased production of wheat throughout the world which has necessarily affected the American wheat market.

Excluding Russia, as there are no reliable reports as to the amount of wheat produced in that country this cyar, continental Europe will produce about 1,265,000,000 bushels, or nearly 240,000,000 bushels more than last year.

North Africa, which ships its wheat to Europe, is reported by the Journal to have produced as much as 71,000,000 bushels this year.

Before the war, South America produced an average of 282,000,000 bushels; last year it raised 343,000,000 bushels, and this year the acreage in Argentina is 8.9 per cent larger than last year.

Between 1900 and 1913 Canada averaged 197,000,000 bushels of wheat; in 1921 it produced 300,000,000 bushels; in 1922 400,000,000 bushels, and this year 470,000,000 bushels, and the extent to which Canada can continue to expand its wheat area is almost without limit for years to come.

No possible change in the economic conditions of Europe could, therefore, increase the demand for wheat to such an extent as to absorb the world's increasing production at prices which are necessary to yield a profit to American farmers.

MINERAL OUTPUT RISES ALL THROUGH CANADA

A report on the mineral production of Canada for the first six months of 1923 has just been issued by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. This report shows that the mining industry has recovered almost entirely from the slump of the last few years. The production of the mineral commodities covered amounts to $57,152,248 in value as against $60,361,109 for the same period last year, an increase of 44 per cent. The production of metallic minerals is valued at $39,244,614, while that of the non-metallics amounts to $47,907,634. These show increases of 48 per cent and 41 per cent., respectively, the corresponding productions for 1922 being $26,475,544 and $33,885,565.

The receipts from the market amounted to $658.65, expenditures $427.64, leaving a balance of $231.01. On motion the report was adopted.

Councillor Tustin, Chairman of Streets, said there was nothing of importance to report in his department. Expenses were now down to a minimum, as only two men, Messrs. Duncan and Woods, were working.

Councillor Paul, Chairman of Fire, Water and Light, reported re placing ornamental lights on the Market Square. He had interviewed Mr. Wolters, of the Hydro, and was informed that the Commission would be glad to instal whatever number of ornamental lights the Council desires. The capital cost would be borne by the Commission and the town would be billed on an annual rate, which would mean that the town would have no capital outlay whatever to make and would simply pay for the lights in part the same way as they do for the present system. On motion the report was adopted.

Mr. Paul also reported that Mr. Frank Allison asked for a light at the new railway crossing, west of the Condensary, and also Mr. Bute had requested that a light be placed on the street leading from Bridge street to the skating rink.

On motion Constable Cook was granted a new uniform.

On motion the Streets Committee were empowered to decorate our streets with evergreens to encourage the Christmas spirit.

Councillor Tustin reported that the Committee found things at the Disposal Works in very bad shape, but since that time everything had been straightened out and put in first-class working order. He strongly recommended that the plant be thoroughly cleaned at least twice a year.

NEW RUBBER WHEEL WILL TAKE SHOCKS

Is Claimed to Have Effect of Large Soft Tires and Shock Absorbers

A flexible rubber automobile wheel, which distorts without structural injury and is resilient to a high degree, has been placed on the market by an American company.

The structural backbone of the wheel is a body of thin, porous wood and rubber plies amalgamated and interjoined into one unit. The process of amalgamation is one of interlacing the wood and rubber rather than one of lamination, so that an integral mass is made between the rubber and wood elements. Concavity of design and flexibility of the material permit a distortion of approximately 1½ inches under load or shock so that much the same effect as that produced by large cross-section tires and shock absorbers is obtained by this wheel.

Some of the advantages claimed for the wheel are that it is waterproof, non-rusting, easily cleaned and free from all squeaks and rattles. It is also claimed that the factor of resiliency lessens the stress on axles and springs and therefore reduces the chance of breakage. Road rumble is said to be eliminated.

The wheel requires no variation in standard wheel application practice. It is adapted to any standard rim or hub and permits use of the standard strait valve with outside inflation.

HUGE POWER OF LIGHTNING.

Flash During Thunderstorm Greater Than Anything Produced by Man.

When a great storm is raging, with flashes of lightning illuminating the sky and thunder crashes deafening our ears, we realize something of the stupendous powers of electricity.

If a cat's back is rubbed in the dark during hot, dry weather, sparks will often fly from it. They are perfectly harmless, though they are identical with lightning flashes, and the crackling that accompanies them is thunder on a small scale.

In a thunderstorm the earth represents your hand and the clouds are the cat's back. The pressure that causes a flash of lightning may be as much as 1,000,000,000 volts—that is, 5,000,000 times greater than that which is used for household lighting.

Could we collect and harness the power set free by a single flash of lightning, we should have at our disposal a force greater than anything that can be produced by man.

In a famous scientist's laboratory the experiment was tried of producing a million-volt spark. It leaped a ten-foot gap with a noise like the explosion of a bomb and came near to wrecking the entire building. This is the highest pressure that has so far been produced artificially.

Most of the lightning in a thunderstorm does not come near the earth, but flashes from cloud to cloud. Occasionally a fire tracks from cloud to earth and then anything in its path is destroyed.—London Tit-Bits.

Vulcanize Tire Risks.

Put your partly worn tires on the front wheels and always put the good ones on the rear wheels. The principle of the caterpillar, of course, is followed, and increases the tire mileage at least fifty per cent. Careful tests have proven this.

The service which tires are called on to give on the front wheels is much less severe than on the rear wheels. Tires, nearly worn out in service on the rear wheels, will run for hundreds of miles more and even thousands, if transferred to the front wheels.

The chief objection to reading of tires comes from motorists who run non-skid tires on the front wheels only. They find the steering on the front wheels make the steering more difficult. The steering is a matter of practice, however, and much expense will be saved if the rotation plan is tried.

Because they stay up is no reason for neglecting the state of your tires. Most drivers pay little attention to such matters and drive recklessly through all sorts of difficulties without regard to the effect on their tires. Tires need constant attention as well as the motor. They must be tuned up and the wheels adjusted regularly. Gashes and cuts, made by sharp stones or trolley switches, should be treated and cared for just as any other wound.

Look for them before a regularly make a habit of this and your tires add many miles to your tire record and obtain full service from your tires. In the list of minor troubles temporary emergencies due to road and tire conditions fall cuts and gashes in the tread, punctures and closing surface cuts on casings and tubes, tire sleeve and tube patches for any size tire, and a compound for temporary blowouts in tubes.

Some Peculiar Newspapers.

In the Caucasus, but no longer world war a peaceful foreign correspondent, the print of which is guaranteed that a man might read it by moonlight to shuffle off coil. Founded in 1821 apparently the first number of Bethabel's Political Handkerchief, a newspaper printed on cotton to "meet the stamp duty." The newspaper consisted of 18 inches by 11 inches and for eight cents. A sad day that was started in Greenock in 1829. It was known as the Greenock Anti-Cant, and the editor advised his readers to use it as a pocket handkerchief when read.

Some years before the war the Journal des Dames reported a curiosity. Its proprietors declared that it filled a "long-felt want," and that it would be "a friend and counsellor to all who wish to keep their legs fit, and to all who, unhappily, have worn out, wrecked and ruined what they have lost the use of through bad roadways." It went on to say: "This journal will deal with all that is medical, surgical, experimental, sporting, or exact expenses relative to the human legs of either sex."

Cause of Seminole War.

The Seminole war was a war between the Seminole Indians of Florida and the United States Government, resulting from the refusal of the red men to remove to lands west of the Mississippi river in accordance with a treaty made with some of their chiefs in 1832. The war broke out in 1835 and lasted seven years. The Indians signed a treaty of submission in 1839 and, after many delays, were removed to Indian territory. Osceola, the Seminole leader, at whose instigation the original treaty was repudiated, was captured and cast into prison, where he died in 1837. The war cost the United States $20,000,000 and hundreds of lives.

Value of Movies.

What motion pictures can do is shown by the experience of a young Swiss missionary in the Blue Ridge Mountains who travelled by horse or mule into the hills and delivered his message at the crossroads to forty or fifty people. Some one provided him with an inexpensive automobile and a portable motion-picture equipment which he mounted on the rear of his car. His services now are attended by 400 to 500 people, who travel for miles over the mountains to reach them.

WORLD'S INCREASING WHEAT PRODUCTION

The Wall Street Journal gives some interesting figures in regard to the increased production of wheat throughout the world which has necessarily affected the American wheat market.

Excluding Russia, as there are no reliable reports as to the amount of wheat produced in that country this year, continental Europe will produce about 1,265,000,000 bushels, or nearly 240,000,000 bushels more than last year.

North Africa, which ships its wheat to Europe, is reported by the Journal to have produced as much as 71,000,000 bushels this year.

Before the war, South America produced an average of 282,000,000 bushels; last year it raised 343,000,000 bushels, and this year the acreage in Argentina is 8.9 per cent larger than last year.

Between 1900 and 1913 Canada averaged 197,000,000 bushels of wheat; in 1921 it produced 300,000,000 bushels; in 1922 400,000,000 bushels, and this year 470,000,000 bushels; and the extent to which Canada can continue to expand its wheat area is almost without limit for years to come.

No possible change in the economic conditions of Europe could, therefore, increase the demand for wheat to such an extent as to absorb the world's increasing production at prices which are necessary to yield a profit to American farmers.

MINERAL OUTPUT RISES ALL THROUGH CANADA

A report on the mineral production of Canada for the first six months of 1923 has just been issued by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. This report shows that the mining industry has recovered almost entirely from the slump of the last few years. The production of the mineral commodities covered amounts to $87,152,248 in value as against $60,361,109 for the same period last year, an increase of 44 per cent. The production of metallic minerals is valued at $39,244,614, while that of the non-metallics amounts to $47,907,634. These show increases of 48 per cent and 41 per cent., respectively, the corresponding productions for 1922 being $26,475,544 and $33,885,565.

"THE GOLDEN SHELL"

PALMERO THE LOVELIEST CITY IN EUROPE.

Lies In Glorious Saucer-Like Hollow, Set Round With Charming Hills —Orange and Lemon Groves— Notwithstanding Its Beauty It Has Its Drawbacks.

Palermo, according to many experienced travellers, is the loveliest city in Europe, if not in the world. Certainly it is the most beautiful town of the beautiful Mediterranean.

It lies in such a glorious saucer-like hollow, set round with charming hills and a sapphire-blue sea, that the name has long been given it of "The Golden Shell." Its orange and lemon groves, its magnificent rose gardens, its pleasant streets, its fine buildings, its ancient cathedral, its multi-colored scenes of nature and humanity, all combine to make Palermo as near a dream-city as one is likely to find this side of the Far East.

Of course, it has its drawbacks. There are terrific vendettas; there are brigand bands not far beyond the suburbs; there is constant friction between the official authorities and the peasantry of Sicily, and there is no love lost between the Italianate and simple and the Sicilian.

But, for all that, the tourist, the traveller, the visitor, the stranger will be warmly welcomed by the sunny folk of Palermo if only he comes as a friend and remains such. The city will show him enthusiastically the attractions and excitations of beautiful, charming Palermo.

He will see herds of cows and goats being driven round the city early each morning, and milked at each house in turn. So that the Sicilian is sure of getting milk fresh and clean, for the animal is milked specially for him, there and then.

Strangely enough, when a cowherd or goatherd goes round in the morning with the milk, he carries a big old-fashioned, often quite useless, gun slung across his shoulder. The curious upgoing to be merely a relic of olden days, but it seems strange to an Englishman, all the same, to see a milkman carrying such a weapon.

If you chance to have rooms at any big hotel you will find your morning tea and fruit is brought by a regular army of flower-sellers. They will even stand in a crescent shape all the way down the drive to the gates and their magnificent show of roses, supported on poles of all sorts of shapes — sticks, harps, crutches, bonquites—makes such a glorious exhibition astfew other towns can equal.

Gaily-dressed women, girls, and brown-skinned, merry-eyed lads will offer you, with smiling faces and alluring glances, oranges as big, as sweet, and as golden as ever you will see in this world at something like three a penny!

Palermo's streets abound in public fountains, for the ancient Saracens brought water to the city by enormous pipes which still stand there good as ever. So much better is in Palermo, and so little found on the hills beyond the town, that one may see each day processions of peasants, with their donkeys, coming from the mountains to carry back a supply of water.

The main street, which runs right from the harbor to Monreale, seven miles up in the hills is as straight as a die, one of the very longest and straightest roads in the world. It passes right through the high Porto Nuova, or New Gate, above which stands one of the Kings of Italy's palaces. When you stand in the room of the palace above this gate as the writer did—and look out of the window towards the harbor, then turn right and look out at the opposite window, you can actually see the whole seven miles of this wonderful road to Monreale.

The palaces climbing roses and ramblers inside the royal domain hang down over the wall for a long distance into this street, it runs alongside the gardens. Thus one sees a splendid blaze of all sorts of colored roses adorning the wall on the right, until they resemble the "Hanging Gardens of Babylon" when at their best.

The Marriage Service.

Two women reformers, Miss Maude Royden and Mrs. Creighton, endeavored to induce the House of Laity to accept amendments to the marriage service in connection with the revision of the Church of England prayer book.

They proposed to substitute, "Will thou love him and comfort him?" for "Wilt thou obey him and serve him?"

They also proposed to dispense with the giving away of the bride and with the husband's declaration, "With all my worldly goods I thee endow." They also proposed that the bride should give the bridegroom a ring. All the proposals were rejected by 114 votes to 84.

Not Vaccination.

"See that the ring is big enough. People have peculiar ideas about weddings, and the duties of the clergy," writes an English vicar in his parish magazine. "Does marriage at a registrar's office only last seven years?" was the curious question asked here a few days ago, he adds. The answer was, "No, it is for life." "A wedding was all fixed up some time ago," he says; "before I was consulted or banns put up, or the time of the morning service, and the bride could not see why the service of the church could not be put off for her wedding."

Breaking It Gently.

The young editor had just founded a new magazine—one of those highbrow things with pale gray covers and uncut pages—and was eager for applause.

"What do you think of it?" he asked the celebrated literary critic to whom he took a copy for examination.

"Well," replied the critic, warily, but warily. "The stuff you expect must certainly have been rotten."

Look not behind too often, but look forward frequently. To look back is to be reminded of errors, of troubles, of regrets. To look forward is to vision things to accomplish that in their realization can bring us pleasure and in their accomplishment untold happiness and contentment.

A SIGN OF DEATH

"You're looking worried, Jim!" remarked one workman to another.

"Yes, I am afraid there'll be a death in our street, shortly," replied Jim. "There was a rooster crowing in our yard before daylight, and it's a sign of death."

"Nonsense, man!" said his mate. "That's an old woman's tale!"

Next day the two men met again.

"Has there been a death yet, Jim?" asked the skeptical one.

"Yes," was the unexpected reply, "I killed that darned rooster, all right."

There appears to be quite a large number of clever advertisements in the side streets of London. Here are some from the book repairers':

Happy is the man
Who at his last

Boots left done right.

Miller's Worm Powders are a pleasant medicine for worm-infested children, and they will take it without objection. When directions are followed it will not injure the most delicate child, as there is nothing of an injurious nature in its composition. They will speedily rid a child of worms and restore the health of the little sufferers whose vitality has become impaired by the attacks of these internal pests.

$2.50 or $3.50 is just about what you want to spend for your boy or girl's Xmas present. What about a Brownie or Kodak? These are sold in Napanee only at Wallace's.

THE GREAT HANDEL.

Composer of Music Was Called the Great Bear.

Handel the great composer of music was called the great Bear, says Romain Rolland in "A Musical Tour." He was gigantic: broad, corpulent, with big hands and enormous feet; his arms and thighs were stupendous. His hands were so fat that the bones disappeared in the flesh, forming dimples. He walked bow-legged, with a heavy, rolling gait, very erect, with his head thrown back under its huge white wig, whose curls rippled heavily over his shoulders. He had a long horse-like face, which with age became bovine and swamped in fat; with pendant cheek and triple chin, the nose large, thick and straight, the ears red and long. His gaze was very direct; there was a quizzical gleam in his bold eye, a mocking twist at the corner of his large, finely-cut mouth. His air was impressive and jovial. When he smiled—says Burney—"his hearty, stern countenance was radiant with a flash of intelligence and wit; like the sun emerging from a cloud."

The urge to create was so tyrannical that it ended by isolating him from the rest of the world. "He never allowed himself to be interrupted by any futile visit," says Hawkins, "and his impatience to be delivered of the ideas which continually flooded his mind kept him almost always shut up." His brain was never idle, and whatever he might be doing he was no longer conscious of his surroundings. He had a habit of speaking so loudly that everybody learned what he was thinking. And what exaltation, what tears, as he wrote! He sobbed aloud when he was composing the aria "He Was Despised." "I have heard it said," reports Shield, "that when his servant took him his chocolate in the morning, he was often surprised to see him weeping and wetting with his tears the paper on which he was writing." With regard to the "Hallelujah Chorus" of the "Messiah" he himself cited the words of St. Paul: "Whether I was in my body or out of my body, as I wrote it I know not. God knows."

This huge mass of flesh was shaken by fits of fury. He swore almost with every phrase. In the orchestra "when his great white periwig was going to tremble the musicians trembled." When his cronies were inattentive he had a way of shouting "Chorus!" at them in a terrible voice that made the public jump.

Duchess Signs Herself "Lizzie."

"Lizzie" is what the Duchess of York calls herself regardless of its ordinary and plebian sound. The wedding present she and her royal spouse sent to the recent bride, Lady Rachel Cavendish, was marked simply "From Albert and Lizzie." No one knows what the Lord Chamberlain thinks about the duchess' nickname, but there is no doubt about the fact that he does not think it quite right for lesser mortals to refer to her in such an informal manner.

Just before her wedding one of the musical shows in London contained a song, about "Lizzie," it so happened that Lady Rachel attended the show, heard the song and liked it. In fact, it attained her so much that she induced the Duke of York to accompany her back to the playhouse a few nights later so that he might hear it, too. But the song was missing. Some one had told the Lord Chamberlain about it, and that personage, whose job it is to determine what is done and what is not done in the way of etiquette in royal circles, had politely but firmly had the song suppressed.

Makes New Kind of Glass.

A new kind of glass, which, if not actually unbreakable, is so tough that it has been blown into a hollow sphere and kicked about as a football without breaking, has been discovered by Dr. Horak, a Czech engineer and inventor.

When used in the form of tumblers the glass has successfully withstood the squirting of cold water immediately after being heated to a point where pieces of paper in the tumbler were charred. While the inventor does not claim that he has found the secret of unbreakable glass, he does believe he has found a way to make it possess the greatest resisting power of any glass so far known. It is admirably suited to the making of thermos bottles, which in so many cases have been too fragile.—Scientific American.

"Is that clock right?" asked the caller who had outstayed his welcome.

His hostess yawned.

"Oh, no!" she said. "That's the clock we always call the visitor."

The obdurate one sat down again.

"The visitor!" he remarked. "What a curious name to give a clock!"

His hostess ventured an explanation. "You see," she said, "we call it that because we can never make it go."

And even then he failed to see the point.

WINTER FEEDING AND CARE OF POULTRY

(Experimental Farms Note.)

Good feed and care are necessary in order to procure maximum egg production during the winter months. Stock should be comfortably housed and not overcrowded. Allow about four square feet of floor space per bird, and see that all cracks and openings at the rear and sides of the house are closed to prevent draughts, otherwise colds are likely to develop which not only retard production, but often cause the loss of birds. A little permanganate of potash used in the drinking water (enough to give a deep wine colour) will help to prevent the spreading of catarrhal colds, but in more serious cases birds should be isolated, and treated by washing the eyes, nostrils and throat with a solution of boracic acid.

Cotton used in the open from houses should be kept brushed off, and should be opened up on fine days to facilitate ventilation, this will also prevent the accumulation of moisture, which is more injurious to the health of the birds than cold. Plenty of clean litter should be provided for scratching purposes. Lice, which are usually present in certain numbers, should be kept in control. This may be done by dusting the birds with insect powder or by smearing the skin around the vent with blue ointment before the use of a pea. Care should be taken not to smear the feathers with this ointment.

A grain mixture should be fed in the litter morning and evening. Feed at the rate of about one quart per day to ten birds. A mixture consisting of equal parts cracked corn, wheat and oats has given splendid satisfaction at this Station. Buckwheat or barley may be used to replace the corn, but in such case, only the best oats available should be used in order to reduce the amount of fibre.

A dry mash should be kept in hoppers before the birds at all times. A mash consisting of 100 pounds wheat bran, 100 pounds middlings, 100 pounds corn meal, 75 pounds ground oats, 15 pounds linseed meal, 3 pounds charcoal and 100 pounds beef scraps will give good results. If skim milk, buttermilk or meat is available the beefscrap may be omitted. A portion of the above mash may be moistened with skim milk or water and fed to the birds at noon. Give them what they will eat up clean in a few minutes.

Commercial ready mixed scratch feed and mashes may be fed if preferred, but slightly greater gains have been obtained at this Station by feeding the home-mixed feed.

Grit, oyster shell and fresh water should be provided at all times. Green feed, such as cabbage, mangels, beets, turnips, clover, sprouted oats and alfalfa should also be provided daily. The latter two may be steamed and fed in the mash, or the leaves may be fed dry in racks or boxes. A dose of Epsom salts at the rate of one pound per hundred birds, given at intervals of two or three weeks, will help to keep the birds healthy and prevent intestinal disorders.

Profit from hens depends very largely upon winter egg production. Breeding plays an important part in winter production, but in order that the result from breeding may be obtained good food and care are necessary.

A laird sold a horse to an Englishman, saying, "You buy him as you see him, but he's an honest beast." The purchaser took the horse home. In a few days the horse tumbled and fell, to the damage of the rider's head. On this the angry purchaser remonstrated with the laird, whose reply was, "Well, sir, I told you he was an honest beast; many a time he has threatened to come down with me, and I kenned he would keep his word some day."

Four separate wrecks had cast up four men on a lonely island in the South Seas. There were two Scotchmen and two Englishmen. After several years a passing steamer touched and took the four aboard. Sandy and Donald found their way to the skipper's cabin, and in telling their experiences Sandy said: "It would grieve you, man, to see the English-men. Never a word did they speak all the time they were there; they were not introduced." "And how did you lads muck out?" inquired the skipper. "Aye, man, the dee I found Donald on the beach we organized a Caledonian society, a golf club, and a Presbyterian church."

OLD EARTH CELLAR BEST FOR APPLES

One of the problems of the housekeeper each year is what quantity of apples he can store economically, and another question, "Why did not my apples keep well last winter?" or "is there any way by which I can keep them better this year?" This does not apply, of course, to those who are fortunate in having the old fashioned cellar without a furnace which was cool but frost-proof, and moist without being damp. It was and is in such a cellar that apples can be kept to the best advantage and where they will best retain their flavour. The nearer the conditions approach those in this old earth cellar the better the results will be. First, the fruit should be kept as cool as possible without freezing. If the temperature can be kept between 30 and 40 degrees F., this would be best. The higher the temperature the shorter the life of the fruit.

Next in importance is retaining the moisture in the fruit. If the individual specimens are exposed to a very dry atmosphere they will wither, hence the desirability of keeping them in such a way as to retain the moisture as much as possible, even though the air of the storage may be dry. This can be obtained, to some extent, by keeping the fruit in a closed package and, better still, in addition, by wrapping each individual specimen in waxed or oiled paper, which will do much to preserve the moisture in the fruit, and to keep disease from spreading from one specimen to another. It is also desirable, if one has nothing else in storage that will be adversely affected, to keep an open vessel with water in it in the room.

A careful choice of varieties should be made if one is going to lay in several barrels, or more than the family can use in a month or so, as notwithstanding favourable conditions for storage, the length of season that any variety will remain in prime condition is limited.

"THE GOLDEN SHELL"

PALMERO THE LOVELIEST CITY IN EUROPE.

Lies In Glorious Saucer-Like Hollow, at Set Round With Charming Hills of Orange and Lemon Groves—

Notwithstanding Its Beauty It Has Its Drawbacks.

Palermo, according to many experienced travellers, is the loveliest city in Europe, if not in the world. Certainly it is the most beautiful town of the beautiful Mediterranean. It lies in such a glorious saucer-like hollow, set round with charming hills and a sapphire-blue sea, that the name has long been given it of "The Golden Shell." Its orange and lemon groves, its magnificent rose gardens, its pleasant streets, its fine buildings, its ancient cathedral, its multi-colored scenes of nature and humanity, all combine to make Palermo as near dream-city as one is likely to find this side of the Far East.

Of course, it has its drawbacks. There are terrific vendettas; there are brigand bands not far beyond the suburbs; there is constant friction between the official authorities and the peasantry of Sicily, and there is no love lost between the Italian type and simple and the Sicilian.

But, for all that, the tourist, the traveller, the visitor, the stranger will be warmly welcomed by the sunny folk of Palermo if only he comes with a friendly and romantic soul. They will show him enthusiastically the attractions and curiosities of beautiful, charming Palermo.

He will see herds of cows and goats being driven round the city early each morning, and milked at each house in turn. So that the Sicilian is sure of getting milk fresh and clean, for the animal is milked specially for him, there and then.

Strangely enough, when a cowherd or goatherd goes round in the morning with the milk, he carries a big old-fashioned, often quite useless, gun rising across his shoulder. The current appears to be merely a relic of olden days, but it seems strange to an Englishman, all the same, to see a milkman carrying such a weapon.

It is a chance to have cooms at any big hotel you will find your morning tea and toast if beautified by a regular array of flowers-roses. They will even stand in a crescent shape all the day down the drive to the gates and their magnificent show of roses, supported on poles of all sorts of shapes — anchors, harps, wreaths, bouquets—makes such a glorious exhibition as few other towns can equal.

Orange-sellers, girls, and boys, dark-skinned, merry-eyed lads will offer you, with smiling faces and alluring glances, oranges as big, as juicy, and as golden as ever you will see in this world at something like three a penny!

Palermo's streets abound in public fountains, for the ancient Saracens brought water to the city by enormous pipes, which still stand there good as ever. So much water in Palermo, and so little found on the hills beyond the town, that one may see each day processions of peasants, with their donkeys, coming from the mountains to carry back a supply of water.

The main street, which runs right from the harbor to Monreale, seven miles up in the hills, is as straight as a die, one of the very longest and straightest roads in the world. It passes right through the high Porto Nuova, or New Gate, above which stands one of the King of Italy's palaces. When you stand in the room of the palace above this gate as the writer did—and look out of the window towards the harbor, then turn right and look out at the opposite window, you can actually see the whole seven miles of this wonderful road to Monreale.

The famous climbing roses and ramblers inside the royal domain hang down over the wall for a long distance into this street, it runs alongside the gardens. Thus one sees a splendid blaze of all sorts of colored roses adorning the wall-top right, until they resemble the "Hanging Gardens of Babylon" when at their best.

The Marriage Service.

Two women reformers, Miss Maude Royden and Mrs. Creighton, endeavored to indece the House of Laity to accept amendments to the marriage service in connection with the revision of the Church of England prayer book.

They proposed to substitute, "Will thou love him and comfort him?" for "Will thou obey him and serve him?"

They also proposed to dispense with the giving away of the bride and with the husband's declaration, "With all my worldly goods I thee endow." They also proposed that the bride should give the bridegroom a ring. All the proposals were rejected by 114 votes to 84.

Not Vaccination.

"See that the ring is big enough People have peculiar ideas about weddings, and the duties of the clergy," writes an English vicar in his parish magazine. "Does marriage at a registrar's office only last seven years?" was the curious question asked here a few days ago, he adds. The answer was, "No, it is for life." "A wedding was all fixed up some time ago," he says, "before I was consulted or banns put up, for the time of the morning service, and the bride could not see why the service of the church could not be put off for her wedding."

Breaking It Gently.

The young editor had just founded a new magazine—one of those highbrow things with pale gray covers and uncut pages—and was eager for applause.

"What do you think of it?" he asked the celebrated literary critic to whom he took a copy for examination.

"Well," replied the other, wearily but warily, "the stuff you rejected must certainly have been rotten."

Look not behind too often, but look forward frequently. To look back is to be reminded of errors, of troubles, of regrets. To look forward is to vision things to accomplish that in their realization can bring us pleasure and in their accomplishment untold happiness and contentment.

Composer of Music Was Called the Great Bear.

Handel the great composer of music was called the great Bear, says Romain Rolland in "A Musical Tour." He was gigantic: broad, corpulent, with big hands and enormous feet; his arms and thighs were stupendous. His hands were so fat that the bones disappeared in the flesh, forming dimples. He walked bow-legged, with a heavy, rolling gait, very erect, with his head thrown back under its huge white wig, whose curls rippled heavily over his shoulders. He had a long horse-like face, which with age became bovine and swamped in fat; with pendant cheek and triple chin, the nose large, thick and straight, the ears red and long. His gaze was very direct; there was a quizzical gleam in his bold eye, a mocking twist at the corner of his large, finely-cut mouth. His air was impressive and jovial. When he smiled—says Burney—"his heavy, stern countenance was radiant with a flash of intelligence and wit; like the sun emerging from a cloud."

The urge to create was so tyrannical that it ended by isolating him from the rest of the world. "He never allowed himself to be interrupted by any futile visit," says Hawkins, "and his impatience to be delivered of the ideas which continually flooded his mind kept him almost always shut up." His brain was never idle, and whatever he might be doing he was never conscious of his surroundings. He had a habit of speaking so loudly that everybody learned what he was thinking. And what exultation, what tears, as he wrote! He sobbed aloud when he was compelling the aria "He Was Despised." "I have heard it said," reports Shield, "that when his servant took into his chocolate in the morning he was often surprised to see him weeping and wetting with his tears the paper on which he was writing." With regard to the "Hallelujah Chorus" of the "Messiah" he himself cried the words of St. Paul: "Whether I was in my body or out of my body, be I wrote it I know not. God knows."

This huge mass of flesh was shaken by fits of fury. He swore almost with every phrase. In the orchestra "when his great white perruque was seen to tremble the musicians trembled." When his choirs were inattentive he had a way of shouting "Chorus!" at them in a terrible voice that made them public jump.

Duchess Signs Herself "Lizzie."

"Lizzie" is what the Duchess of York calls herself regardless of its ordinary and plebian sound. The wedding present she and her royal spouse sent to the recent bride, Lady Rachel Cavendish, was marked simply "From Albert and Lizzie." No one knows what the Lord Chamberlain thinks about the duchess' nickname, but there is no doubt about the fact that he does not think it quite right for lesser mortals to refer to her in such an informal manner.

Just before her wedding one of the morning papers in London contained a story about "Lizzie." It so happened that the Duke Elizabeth attended the private board the song and liked it. In fact, it amused her so much that she induced the Duke of York to accompany her back to the playhouse a few nights later so that he might hear it, too. But the song was missing. Some one had told the Lord Chamberlain about it, and that person's name, whose job it is to determine what is done and what is not done in the way of etiquette in royal circles, had politely but firmly had the song suppressed.

OLD EARTH CELLAR BEST FOR APPLES

One of the problems of the householder each year is what quantity of apples he can store economically, and another question, "Why did not my apples keep well last winter?" or "is there any way by which I can keep them better this year?" This does not apply, of course, to those who are fortunate in having the old fashioned cellar without a furnace which was cool but frost-proof, and moist without being damp. It was and is in such a cellar that apples can be kept to the best advantage and worry they will best retain their flavour. The nearer the conditions approach those in this old earth cellar the better the results will be. First, the fruit should be kept as cool as possible without freezing. If the temperature can be kept between 36 and 39 degrees F., this would be best. The higher the temperature the shorter the life of the fruit.

Next in importance is retaining the moisture in the fruit. If the individual specimens are exposed to a very dry atmosphere they will wither, hence the desirability of keeping them in such a way as to retain the moisture as much as possible, even though the air of the storage room be dry. This can be obtained, to some extent, by keeping the fruit in a closed package and, better still, in addition, by wrapping each individual specimen in waxed or oiled paper, which will do much to preserve the moisture in the fruit, and to keep disease from spreading from one specimen to another. IN MEMORIAM.

In loving memory of John B. Alkenbrack, who departed this life on Dec. 11th, 1922.

I am sitting alone to-night, darling,
Alone in the dear old room,
And the sound of the rain
As it falls on the pane,
Makes darker the gathering gloom.
For I know it falls on a grave, darling,
A grave neath the green wood shade,
Where we laid you away one winter day,
When the flowers were beginning to fade.
Oh, lonely and drear was that hour, darling,
And my heart to its depths was stirred,
For I knew never more
Would your feet cross the floor,
Or the sound of your voice be heard.

IN MEMORIAM.

In loving memory of our dear wife and mother, Christianna Spratt, who died December 4th, 1922.

Her weary hours and days of pain,
Her troubled nights are past;
Her ever patient worn-out frame
Has found sweet rest at last.
We mourn for her, though free from pain,
All earthly sufferings o'er,
But hope to meet her once again,
On that eternal shore.

OBITUARY

The angel of death again visited our community, this time claiming the twin daughters of Mr. John Finn, little Dora Myrtle passing away on Nov. 25th, and Dorothy Eleanor only surviving her little sister till Nov. 27th. These little ones would have been two years of age on Dec. 2nd. Their mother predeceased them about three months ago. A fairer yet sadder sight than these two were darlings in their white caskets would be hard to imagine. The sympathy of all goes to Mr. Finn and his two boys, Josh and Walter, in this their third bereavement in the short space of three months. Rev. C. Hoffman, of Bath, preached a very comforting sermon on both occasions to a large number of sorrowing friends and relatives.

Digging Up Bibles.

A tale spread abroad as to the Bible has been circulated among Japanese and gathered by Dorothy Nogochi, editor of the Nichi (Heiabon), a child's magazine, who made one of the many Bible-seekers. Through a misapprehension of the Bible House in Tokio, he obtained stories and articles written for young readers of telling about the Christian Bible, and the Bible House made itself responsible for sending a copy of the translation to 3,000 public schools throughout the nation as part of the campaign. The result has been many orders from teachers and parents who have been wanting to see the book but did not know just where to apply for it. The Asahi Bulletin (Japan) says that this is only one of the many ways by which it is being discovered that the Bible is sought by many different classes of Japanese.

Clever Critic-isms.

Dr. Brander Matthews gives the brilliant critic credit as Brooklyn'ese:

"The most brilliant criticisms are usually the briefest. You remember the story of the playwright who woke up the critic and said reproachfully: 'Here I've been reading you my play in order to get your opinion, and you fall asleep.'

"'But,' yawned the critic, 'sleep is an opinion.'

"The little girl at breakfast criticized her mother's cooking beautifully:

"'Oh, mumver,' she said, 'you haven't burnt the oatmeal!'"

Little Lord Fauntleroy.

The news that Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett had taken a villa at Nikko, a summer resort in the hills 80 miles from Tokio, caused some anxiety for the safety of the veteran novelist among her many admirers. It was so long ago as 1886 that she made her great success with "Little Lord Fauntleroy." This novel, which was dramatized, brought its author over $100,000. Another play by Mrs. Burnett, "Esmeralda," ran for three years in America.

Life of Leisure.

"How did you spend the summer?"
"Mostly," replied Mr. Dustin Stax, "in listening to mother and the girls figure on where we'll spend the winter."

And when you have made your purchases do not forget that the "gift without the giver is bare", that the little card you send with your present may bear on it a message that may mean more to the recipient than the present itself, and no matter how tiny your remembrance is, it shows the evidence of love and thought and care in its selection.

IN MEMORIAM.

In loving memory of John B. Aikenbrack, who departed this life on Dec. 11th, 1922.

I am sitting alone to-night, darling,
Alone in the dear old room,
Add the sound of the rain
As it falls on the pane,
Makes it darker the gathering gloom.
For I know it falls on a grave, darling,
A grave neath the green wood shade,
Where we laid you away one winter day,
When the flowers were beginning to fade.
Oh, lonely and dreary was that hour, darling,
Aching heart to its depths was stirred,
For I knew never more
Would your face cross the floor,
Or the sound of your voice be heard.

IN MEMORIAM.

In loving memory of our dear wife and mother, Christiana Spratt, who died December 4th, 1922.

Her weary hours and days of pain,
Her troubled nights are past;
Her ever patient worn-out frame
Has found sweet rest at last.
We meant for her, though free from pain,
All earthly sufferings o'er,
But hope to meet her once again,
On that eternal shore.

OBITUARY

The angel of death again visited our community, this time claiming the twin daughters of Mr. John Finn, little Dora Myrtle passing away on Nov. 25th, and Dorothy Eleanor only surviving her little sister till Nov. 27th. These little ones would have been two years of age on Dec. 2nd. Their mother predeceased them about three months ago. A fairer yet sadder sight than these two wee darlings in their white caskets would be hard to imagine. The sympathy of all goes to Mr. Finn and his two sons, John and Walter, in this their third bereavement in the short space of three months. Rev. A. C. Hoffman, of Bath, preached a very comforting sermon on both occasions to a large number of sorrowing friends and relatives.

Candles, all colors, at Wallace's.

Beauty for Ashes.

A tired-eyed farmer in the Middle West found himself hungry for beauty and exclaimed to Dr. W. T. Noyes, editor of the Silo (Britain), a chilly sort of a fan-zine, who made one reat instead a Bible exhibit. Through the co-operation of the Bible Houses in Tokio, he obtained stories and art-color reproductions of the Bible, suitable for young readers, all telling about Our Christian Bible, and the Bible House made forty reproductions for sending a copy of the facsimile to Tokio public schools throughout the metropolitan part of the country. The result has been many letters from teachers and parents who have been wanting to see the book and did not know just where to apply for it. The Nippon Bulletin (Japan) says that this is only one of the many ways by which it is being discovered that the Bible is sought by many different classes of Japanese.

Clever Criticisms.

Dr. Brander Matthews, the brilliant critic, said at a Brooklyn tea:

"The most brilliant criticisms are usually the briefest. You remember the story of the playwright who woke up the critic and said reproachfully:

"'Here I've been reading you my play in order to get your opinion, and you fall asleep.'

"'But,' yawned the critic, 'sleep is an opinion.'

"A little girl at breakfast criticized her mother's cooking beautifully:

"'Oh, murver,' she said, 'you haven't burnt the oatmeal!'"

Little Lord Fauntleroy.

The news that Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett had taken a villa at Nikko, a summer resort in the hills 80 miles from Tokio, caused some anxiety for the safety of the veteran novelist among her many admirers. It was so long ago as 1886 that she made her great success with "Little Lord Fauntleroy." This novel, which was dramatized, brought its author over $100,000. Another play by Mrs. Burnett, "Esmeralda," ran for three years in America.

Life of Leisure.

"How did you spend the summer?"
"Mostly," replied Mr. Dustin Stax, "in listening to mother and the girls figure on where we'll spend the winter."

The Store With Hundreds of Gifts

Ready for the Xmas rush—the Store of a Hundred Gifts. Christmas bustle, Christmas glamour, Christmas glitter, Christmas cheer. Windows, pillars and walls all aglow with Christmas themes and decorations. Overflowing counters, cramming stock-rooms, thronging aisles—the Hundreds of Gifts themselves. Big gifts and little gifts; unassuming gifts and grand gifts. Man-gifts and woman-gifts, and dearest and youngest of all gifts. Through the lexicon of good gifts, they go. The old favorites, and the new. Sentimental, sensible, staple, capricious. Gifts from far away. Gifts with but one aim—to be worthy. Gifts of Christmas, with its geniality, its generosity, its warm-hearted impulses and its love.

Do your Xmas Shopping at Robinson's.

DO IT THIS WAY,—THEN "WHAT SHALL I GIVE" WILL BE NO PROBLEM AT ALL

The best way to approach your Christmas shopping is to make a list of those to whom you wish to give and to set about your purchases now while our stocks are fresh and complete; while our sales-people are fresh and ready, and before the last mad rush starts. By this method you will have time to think about individual taste and preferences of your friends.

And when you have made your purchases do not forget that the "gift without the giver is bare", that the little card you send with your present may bear on it a message that may mean more to the recipient than the present itself, and no matter how tiny your remembrance is, it shows the evidence of love and thought and care in its selection.

OBITUARY

The Late S. J. Close.

In the passing of Mr. Sam. Close another of the few links between the present life of the district and the pioneer days is severed. Mr. Close was the son of Mr. Hugh Close, who came to America in 1830, and settled in Baltimore, where he owned a large and prosperous blacksmith shop in the days when horses were more plentiful than they are now.

From Baltimore he visited friends on the Bay Front, near what is now Conway, and was persuaded to remain. When he married he moved to North Fredericksburgh, taking up land, which has ever since remained in the family. The late Sam. Close was the only surviving son, and had lived all his life on the homestead, having helped to clear the original bush and trees, and living long enough to see it one of the best farms in the district.

The four brothers have all predeceased him, and there are left to mourn his loss his four sisters, Miss Catharine Close, who lived on the farm with him; Mrs. John Curle, Mrs. Louise Curle, of Fredericksburgh, and Mrs. Julia Edgett, of Waterloo, N.Y. A niece, Miss Fannie Close, also lived at the homestead with him.

The funeral was held on Monday from his late home, the Rev. A. J. Wilson, of St. Andrew's Church, officiating. The elders of the church acted as pall-bearers, Mr. Close having been a member of the session for many years.

The very large attendance at the funeral of people from all over the surrounding country-side, testified to the high esteem in which Mr. Close was held by all who knew him.

North Fredericksburgh loses a valued citizen; those who survive, a devoted brother and friend, and St. Andrew's Church, a loyal and consistent elder.

GIRLS' SOFT BALL TEAM ENTERTAINED

It is a maxim in law, I believe, that a man's house is his castle. Ergo, he and his have a right to surrender it, if they please, for occasional intermission from the cares of life, and so Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Simmons, of Wilton, opened the doors of their spacious home on Friday evening, the 23rd and 30th ults., for the social enjoyment of the Girls' Wilton Soft Ball Team and their friends. On these two occasions anticipation was much, but far surpassed by realization, and I think the coldest cynic, looking in upon those evenings, would have become conscious of a thaw in his heart.

Mr. and Mrs. Simmons welcomed all, dispensing with the straight jacket of etiquette, and every lady and gentleman were made to feel thoroughly at home.

The fore part of the evenings were spent in games, and entertainment by the loud-speaking radio, after which the mazes of the light fantastic were tripped, music being supplied from far radio orchestras, being augmented with local Victrola and violin music.

At midnight lunches were served, and on the latter evening "Neptune's delicacies in abundance tickled the palate, then again trippings on the polished floors to the music, was enjoyed until leave taking, which was done amid the strains of "Good Night Ladies", and the thanks and congratulations of all for the thoughtfulness of their kind hostess and her hospitable spouse, who are doing so much to promote cordiality of feeling among the younger set in this community.

And watched with expressions pained
The milkmaid's stunts,
And both said at once,
"Our relations are going to be strained."

Why can't a man see himself as others see him when he barks, bites, kicks, snarls, frowns, glowers, sweers, smirks? Why doesn't the whole world see him during those wonderful moments in his life when he smiles, laughs, lends a helping hand, comforts a sufferer, secretly puts coal into a bin of the needy, gives credit where credit is due?

It is a maxim in law, I believe, that a man's house is his castle. Ergo, he and his have a right to surrender it, if they please, for occasional intermission from the cares of life, and so Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Simmons, of Wilton, opened the doors of their spacious home on Friday evenings, the 23rd and 30th ults., for the social enjoyment of the Girls' Wilton Soft Ball Team and their friends. On these two occasions anticipation was much, but far surpassed by realization, and I think the coldest cynic, looking in upon those evenings, would have become conscious of a thaw in his heart.

Mr. and Mrs. Simmons welcomed all, dispensing with the straight jacket of etiquette, and every lady and gentleman were made to feel thoroughly at home.

The fore part of the evenings were spent in games, and entertainment by the loud-speaking radio, after which the mazes of the light fantastic were tripped, music being supplied from far radio orchestras, being augmented with local Victrola and violin music.

At midnight lunches were served, and on the latter evening neptune's delicacies in abundance tickled the palate, then again trippingly on the polished floors to the music, was enjoyed until leave taking, which was done amid the strains of "Good Night Ladies", and the thanks and congratulations of all for the thoughtfulness of their kind hostess and her hospitable spouse, who are doing so much to promote gaiety of feeling among the younger set in this community.

Two microbes sat on a pantry shelf
And, watched with expressions pained
The silkmaid's stunts,
And both said at once,
"Our relations are going to be strained."

Why can't a man see himself as others see him when he barks, bites, kicks, snarls, frowns, glowers, swears, smirks? Why doesn't the whole world see him during those wonderful moments in his life when he smiles, laughs, lends a helping hand, comforts a sufferer, secretly puts coal into a bin of the needy, gives credit where credit is due?

COOK MOST FAMOUS OF MODERN LIARS

As a Texas judge said in passing sentence upon one of the most notorious liars on record : "History gave us Ananias and Sapphira. They are forgotten,—but we still have Dr. Cook." The sentence was one of fourteen years and nine months' imprisonment and a fine of $12,000 for a large oil swindle. It is not for the oil swindle that Cook will be remembered, but for the claims he put forward to having discovered the North Pole and to have been the first man to scale Mount McKinley, the loftiest peak on the continent. The claims were debated for years, and perhaps there are people yet who believe that Cook climbed Mount McKinley, though it is hardly possible that they still believe in his North Pole claim, for he admitted later on that he didn't know whether he had been at the Pole. The truth probably is that he was not nearer than 500 miles from the Pole. Yet when he made his original announcement he was everywhere acclaimed, for it was the most sensational announcement of any kind in years. He was showered with honors from learned societies and universities, honors that were later withdrawn when investigations failed to produce any evidence in his favor.

Said He Reached the Pole.

Cook is a Brooklyn doctor of German descent and is said to have a remarkable physique and great charm of manner. He has had considerable experience in Arctic travel before he made the trip that resulted in his claim, for he was surgeon on the first Peary expedition in 1891 and 1892. In 1897 and 1898 he was surgeon, anthropologist and photographer to the, Belgian Antarctic Expedition, and in 1901 he went north with Peary again. In 1907 with John R. Bradley, a New Yorker, he went to Etah, Greenland, a little more than 600 miles from the Pole, and spent the Summer hunting. Bradley later returned to New York and Cook headed North. Bradley explained that the purpose of the expedition was a dash for the Pole, that Cook had discovered a new route and had good dogs, and three about it because he feared the rivalry of Peary who was then in the Arctic. Cook was not heard of until 1909, when a despatch reached the world through Copenhagen that he had reached the Pole and was returning in triumph. The University of Copenhagen received him with every honor, and rapturously conferred degrees upon him. Royalty and high men, and choice of flowers were hung round his neck.

Denounced by Peary.

The first cold breath to blow upon him was that of Philip Lydon, then a London newspaper correspondent, who suggested that Cook had not reached the real pole, rendered up his diaries and scientific observations and his instruments. Only a few days later Peary who had reached a telegraph wire sent the message to the world that he and not Cook was the discoverer of the Pole, and that the doctor had never been out of sight of the other of Peary champions. Perhaps there was a third champion, for which Captain Joseph Bernier spoke on the other day, when he expressed his spectful doubt that either of them had ever been handy to church and school, of course. He said that Peary had stolen his provisions. Peary said that Cook had appropriated Eskimo whom Peary had trained for Arctic exploration. Cook received a damaging blow when the University of Copenhagen was obliged to admit that the records submitted by Cook fell some distance short of proofs of Holy Writ.

The Faker Unmasked.

Cook was asked to send additional proofs, and after a short delay they were forwarded in charge of his secretary. The University after examining them protested that they were not the original records but merely what purported to be a copy. Cook said the originals were too precious to let out of his hands, but promised that his wife would take them over later. She failed to do so. In the meantime he had sold the story of his adventure to a New York paper for $30,000. It was pointed out that some of the photographs which were appearing had been taken eight years before. He admitted this when he could no longer deny it, and explained that he had passed over the same ground. Then appeared Captain A. L. W. Loose, a navigator, and George H. Dunkle, an insurance agent, who confessed that they had been employed by Cook to make astronomical records that would bolster up his claim, and that these had been sent to the University. In the end the humiliated University had to admit that it, like some millions more, had been the victim of fraud. An authority said that he did not believe that Cook had down on a street with the finest of instruments, would be able to figure out his latitude and longitude.

The McKinley Claim.

The Mount McKinley adventure occurred in 1906. Cook made one unsuccessful attempt to scale the peak, and then made a second trip with a party that included Dr. Herschel Parker, inventor and scientist. The party failed to find a way up, and returned leaving Cook to explore some glaciers, so he said. A month later he telegraphed that with one companion he had reached the summit, describing dramatically the terrible adventure which later he amplified in a book. It was not until he became involved in the North Pole claim that Parker's investigation was made of his claims about Mount McKinley. Then an affidavit was received from the lone packer who had accompanied him to the effect that in Glacier he had been nearer to the summit than fourteen miles; that he had falsified dates in his journal; that he directed; and that the photograph of the alleged summit was the photograph of a peak twenty miles away. It was also brought to light that the barometer with which Cook said he had registered an altitude of 20,390 feet would not scale higher than 18,000 feet. Even after these damaging exposures, when the name "Cook" became a synonym for "colossal liar," he was able to live off the public. In the oil field swindle he is supposed to have reaped a fortune.

CUSTOMS OF ANCIENT.

Divorce Practiced Among Egyptians 500 Years Before Christ.

Prof. Sir W. M. Flinders-Petrie, the world-renowned Egyptologist, in his new book, "Social Work in Ancient Egypt," says that divorce was practiced among the Egyptians as early as five hundred years before Christ.

The following speech, made by an ancient Egyptian at his breakfast table, addressed to his wife, was sufficient to legally cut the nuptial knot:

"I have abandoned thee as wife, I am removed from thee. I have no claim on earth upon thee. I am said unto thee, 'Make for thyself a husband in any place to which thou shall go'."

An Egyptian, too, could marry his sister—and often did.

"If I have no more than these two children, it is right that they should marry each another," says an Egyptian parent in the tale of Setna. Polygahy was practiced, but was not widespread. They had much womanly wisdom, as witness this:—

"Be not rude to a woman in her house if you desire her thoroughly. Do not say, 'What is that? Bring it me,' when a hand is put it in its right place and thine eye hath seen it. When thou art silent thou knowest her qualities, and it is a joy to be with her."

Egyptian philosophy was, however, apt to be tempered with a crude insistence upon the inevitability of death, which found expression in eat, drink, and be merry for tomorrow we may die" attitude to worldliness.

To this end a model mummy in its coffin was carried round the banqueting chamber after a feast and exhibited to each guest, in order, as Pinturicchio says, "to exhort them, while filled with wine, to make use of things present in that all will soon be earth in it." A New Yorker, any one would have thought.

Prof. Petrie gives many interesting details of the building of the Great Pyramid. This colossal structure, when resting on fifty-three acres, covered the equivalent of 13,000,000 bricks, which in twenty years by 100,000 men, of whom 4,000 were skilled masons.

Ten years were first spent in building the great causeway and preparing the site. The stone was then hewn months in each year when the Nile floods were out. Prof. Petrie demonstrates the astonishing skill of the ancient builders which was necessary to accomplish the internal task, and pays a tribute to those who with "nameless devotion gave the strength of the people, their pure and prime."

It was the pharaoh Cufu, a gigantic and indefatigably organized subject-king, who was the driving force behind of men at a season when the floods made other work impossible.

Vacuum Bottles.

Most people use vacuum flasks, more than they realize, for keeping things hot, and cold, and fresh, but they were. For picnic purposes and travelling they are almost indispensable.

The flask that is in constant use should be filled with cold water when not in use, and then emptied, and then washed with warm soapy water, rinsed and dried. It should then be left in an airy place without the cork until it is required for use again. Rinse with hot water and wipe before using.

Corks require special care, as they are liable to absorb the odor of hot beverages. It is a wise plan to have a special cork for each flask, so that one can be used for tea, another for coffee, and so on, where using each.

When soup or hot milk has been the beverage used the flask should be washed with very hot water. Tea will never "taste of the tin" if milk is added after the tea has been poured out. When picnicking or travelling it is well worth while to carry a little milk in a bottle. Coffee can be made from any of the well-known essences of this kind and never have been kept hot in the flask. Cocoa can be made in the same way.

Flowers' Bed Time.

Different flowers have different closing times. Two common waterlily retires about four o'clock in the afternoon, the daisy and buttercup much later in the evening. These facts and processes, being susceptible to climatic changes, go to bed or soon as the heat of the day is over and the evening chill sets in. The goat's beard, something like a dandelion, is growing in tall grass, shuts up its flowers at noon, and does not open them again till the next morning. For this reason the flower is sometimes called "John-go-to-bed-at-noon." The scarlet pimpernel, found in most British cornfields, shuts its petals when the sky gets dark and cloudy. Thus, it has earned for itself the name of "Shepherd's Weather Glass."

Perpetual Sodas.

There is one girl in New York who is "fed up." Her job is to drink nut sundaes, soda, all the soda fountain concoctions there are, or to order them at any rate and go through the motions. She is a spotter. Besides detecting dishonesty and seeing if the ticket system of the fountain is working properly there is the service business to look at, satisfied customers and all that. The schoolgirl just the same as in spotting in a jewellery store. The first essential is courtesy to the waiter as to every customer, and the second is alertness.

Practiced.

"What's the chances of getting a job around here?" asked the man with a service button who had successfully gold-bricked his way through two years in the army.

"Why, that's darn close to an ex-soldier, buddy," replied the foreman, "but we haven't got much to do these days." "Oh, that's all right. You'll find it doesn't take very much to keep me busy."

Sports and Insurance.

A certain club in Glasgow has insured itself against possible claims by persons injured by balls hit outside the playing pitch. The annual premium works out at the modest sum of six cents per player.

Teacher—How many seasons are there?

Izzy—Two, busy and dull.

When "company" comes most housekeepers are particular to serve "Daly's Good Tea." Why not enjoy it all the year round? Like all good things it is cheaper in the end. For sale at Wallace's Drug Store.

DUCHESS TO GO IN MOVIES.

Tells of Struggle Trying to Live on $47.08 a Week.

Another British peeress is about to desert the higher life for the movies—this time it is the beautiful Duchess of Leigster, wife of the premier duke, marquis, and earl of Ireland.

Just now the duchess is living in genteel poverty in a tiny flat at the south coast resort of Bournemouth, to struggle along on an allowance of $47.08 a week.

Two years ago the duchess was May Etheridge, musical comedy star. She married Lord Edward Fitzgerald, the second heir to the dukedom of Leinster. A year later a third heir arrived.

"When we were poor," she has confided, "I took my husband and the baby to stay at my mother's house in Brixton. That happened several times, and my mother would feel like a slave to make us comfortable.

"Now I find myself, a duchess, compelled to live a miserable existence on an allowance of $47.08 a week, made to me by the duke's family," the duchess continued. "The only money I have ever had beyond that was $3.50, which I won on Payrua in the last Derby. Years ago I had beautiful jewels. Now I have nothing.

"Now you understand why I want to go to work. I think I am best qualified for the films, and I am looking for a job.

The seventh Duchess of Leinster, seventh Marchioness of Kildare, seventh Countess Offaly, seventh Viscountess of Leinster, twenty-fifth Countess of Kildare and thirty-first Baroness Offaly threw off the reserve that goes with the 718-year-old nobility of the Fitzgerald family, plucked a bit of fur from the near-beaskin hearth rug, and, using it as a mustache, shuffled across the room in the Chaplinesque manner to show her talent as a mimic.

Riding the Flume.

In the mountains of Sierra Nevada, the water chute, or flume, is used as a means of travelling from one spot to another. The flume is V shaped and made of wood. It stands on wooden trestles, sometimes, where it crosses deep ravines, of immense height. A swift and strong current of water, chiefly used for floating logs and sawn timber, is constantly running down the chute. The boat made to navicate the flume is also V shaped, and fits inside it. It can be floated down at a good speed in about an inch of water. Only one passenger is carried at a time, and he has to sit as far forward as possible in order to lift up the back of the little craft. In steep places the pace is great, quite twenty miles an hour being reached. Riding the flume is full of thrills, though the little craft runs smoothly and, as there is no machinery, without vibration. But when once it has started on its journey it cannot be stopped until it reaches its destination. The sensation of rushing alone through space in the heart of the mountains is one it is a mode of travelling that only recommends itself to the strong-nerved.

Patagonia Like Eria.

Irish people are fond of boasting of the immunity of their island from snakes. It is true that Ireland does not possess any of the three kinds of British snakes, but she is by no means the only country as blessed. There are no snakes in New Zealand, and very few poisonous insects. New Zealand has a spider which is fatally poisonous, and, of course, it has its mosquitoes, but on the whole it is the poisonous variety, and this is the more strange because the rattlesnake is quite common in the northern part of the United States. Here and there in the ranges of British Columbia a few stray rattlers may be found, but as a rule the border line between the two countries marks the northern-most limit of this deadly reptile. Patagonia is another snakeless country. There are no snakes in Iceland, while Japan and Tasmania are also places where these reptiles are very rare.

Marsh Filled With Ducks.

In the wide artesian marsh of Crook and Creek valley, three miles east of Meade, Kan., thousands of wild water fowls are making their home. In many places the ducklings are so numerous that one can scarcely make his way through the tall grass without stepping on them.

From the present outlook this marshy region will be a hunter's paradise the coming fall and winter. There are several thousand acres in this immense bog bottom, and it has long been a famous resort and nesting place for aquatic fowls during flood years.

Beetles Eat Church.

The beetle which cost old England $500,000 by its appetite for the roof beams of Westminster Hall, has now endangered the safety of the roof of Limehouse parish church in the East End of London. This beautiful gleaming white Portland stone church was in a respectable neighborhood a few hundreds of years ago, when it was built. Nowadays it is so disreputable that Lloyd-George's Conservative opponents called his attacks on the origin of some of the peerage years ago, "limehouse."

Lightning Passed Through Building.

During a storm at Norwich, Eng., lightning struck the chimney of the local Young Men's Christian Association premises. A man reading in one room saw it pass out in a ball of blue flame and noticed a smell of burning. No damage, however, was done.

Easy!

"Give the feminine of hero" was a question put to pupils of a Chicago high school. One bright scholar answered: "Shero."

It Testifies for Itself.—Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil needs no testimonial of its power other than itself. Whoever tries it for coughs or colds, for cuts or contusions, for sprains or bruises, or pains in the joints, will well know that the medicine proves itself and needs no guarantee. This shows why this Oil is in general use.

HOW OPIUM IS SMUGGLED.

Some of the Methods Resorted To In India.

The latest Burma Excise Report shows that the ingenuity of smugglers in inventing novel methods of concealing opium is by no means exhausted. Contraband was found during the year concealed in double-bottomed tubs, tiffin-carriers, bamboo, pillows, cheroots, honey pots, specially constructed Burmese guns, false-bottomed hookahs, bales of tobacco, loaves of bread and pots of the Burmah fish paste known as ngapi.

Match boxes filled with opium were packed with genuine match boxes in complete packets. An earthen pot with a betelnut tree growing in it, a hollow stone image of Gautama, and similar figures of elephants were used as receptacles. Perhaps the newest and cleverest device discovered was that of a Chinese passenger on board of a Bhamo mail steamer whose baggage was being searched by a Burman inspector, and who had two large baskets of walnuts covered with two large sheets of what appeared to be tarpaulin.

On examination the sheets were found to be composed of thin book canvas smeared with desiccated opium weighing 220 tolas (5½ lbs.) The device was extremely ingenious and would have defied detection had the smuggler not lost his nerve and offered a bribe to the searching officer. The sheets were odorless and pliable. Only by taste could the opium be detected. On immersing a portion in water the opium readily separated from the canvas.

Weathervane 250 Years Old.

Wide interest attaches to the 250th birthday of the old copper dragon of the Church of St. Mary-le-Bow, Cheapside, London, not only because of the age and historic interest of this old relic which is still in active service, but because its present birthday marks a renaissance of the copper weathervane. The increasing use of the weathervane on larger buildings is ascribed for the most part to the growing use of the tower in architecture.

The copper dragon of St. Mary's was placed in use in 1573, during the reign of "Good Queen Bess," from its lofty perch 221 feet above the sidewalk, it has looked down upon, and indeed participated in, many strange episodes in London life. Besides rendering faithful service through the changing winds of centuries, it has served as a symbol for the city of London itself, for, 250 years ago, when it was not safe for a great of the city was represented by the cross of St. George emblazoned on the wing of a dragon, just as it is represented there to-day.

This quaint copper dragon saw the rise and fall of Oliver Cromwell, the coming and passing of the Revolution and the Great Interregnum. It survived unscathed the great fire of London in 1666, so realistically described in the first of Samuel Pepys' diaries.

The dragon is made of sheet copper and is eight feet six inches long. It has been taken down for regilding on four different occasions, but the copper itself has withstood the elements unharmed.

Singing-Lamp to Warn Miners.

Fire-damp is probably more dreaded by miners than any other menace of their calling. Its presence leads to explosions, breathing it is dangerous and its approach is so insidious that the damage may be done before it is discovered. Safety lamps have been in common use for many years to prevent fire damp explosions, the famous Davire lamp being the one best known. Now comes an improvement on the Davies lamp and the the invention of a Briton. This new lamp not only is a safety lamp from the explosive side of mining, but a real illuminating lamp, but it is also a fire damp protector. Its peculiar feature resembles a bunch of tuning forks and they are made so sensitive that the presence of even so small an amount of fire damp in the air as two per cent. will cause the lamp to sing. In fact the greater amount of the fire damp increases in the air, the lamp sings more loudly and more shrilly, affording ample warning to the underground worker of the deadly menace.

Pinholes Drilled In Steel.

Making an adding machine required the drilling of ten holes in a plate a thirty-second of an inch thick, each hole to be accurate to a thousandth of an inch, yet no bigger than a pin in diameter, says the Washington Star. The result was a machine for the purpose machine that stands about 12 inches high. The drill which was built carries six spindles, each holding a drill of number six Morse gauge, which is about the size of the pin of ordinary use.

Each little sliver of steel that does the work is driven by a belt running from a pulley on a cam head and therefore works at the same speed as that of the wheel above. The actual drilling requires ten seconds.

Nearing the End.

"I am not going to talk long this evening," said the speaker. "I've been cured of that. The other night I was making a speech when a man entered the hall and took a seat right in front of me. I had not been talking an hour when I noticed he was becoming fidgety. Finally he arose and said:

"'Shay, how long you been lecturin'?'

"'About four years, my friend,' I replied.

"'Well,' re remarked, as he sat down, 'I'll stick around; you must be near through'."

Savage Mother Owl.

As she was hanging out clothes a farmer's wife, near Monroe, Ind., was savagely attacked by a big brown owl. Flying from a neighboring tree, the bird peaked at the woman's head and eye and pulled out several shreds of hair. The injury to the eye necessitated an operation. It was found afterward that the owl had a nest of young birds close by.

GREAT BALLOONS TO MAKE SKY POWER

To "harness the thunderbolt" has been one of the great dreams of civilized man from old Zeus, god of the Greeks, who played about at will with lightning, down to our own Charles P. Steinmetz.

The latest scheme, which is remarkable in that it proposes to draw electric power from the air in fair weather as well as in foul, is the idea of Dr. Plauson of Hamburg. He has recently suggested that atmospheric electric power plants, stationed all over the world, will in the future do away with the necessity for generating steam.

Dr. Plauson's plan proposes the construction of enormous balloons, to be made of metal entirely and filled with hydrogen or helium. On the metallic balloon surfaces he proposes to erect hundreds of sharp steel points, which are to act as tiny lightning rods. They will be treated with radium preparations in order to make the surrounding air a good conductor by reason of the radium rays passing through it.

These balloons are to be sent up to a height of 1,500 feet and joined together. A metallic cable is to lead off the electric charges collected by the system and conduct them to a spark gap, whose other terminal is to be connected with the earth. Thus, whenever the atmospheric energy stored up by the balloons reaches a certain pressure, there will be a discharge of miniature lightning across the spark gap. As the balloons will continue to collect charges after each discharge, Dr. Plauson concludes that the flow will be continuous.

This lightning, of course, cannot by itself be made to perform any work directly. But the inventor proposes to employ the discharge-flashes for the production of high-frequency alternating currents in coils of wire connected to the terminals of the spark gap. These coils are to be modeled after those designed by and named after Tesla. The energy delivered by the Tesla coils is to drive special resonance motors invented by Plauson, which will in turn drive electric dynamos or generators of ordinary design.

Dr. Plauson proposes to erect his stations particularly in places such as moors, mountains, steppes, deserts, lakes and seas, where there will be no interference with or from established industrial machinery or buildings. For a district of area such as the state of Texas, he claims, there would be available power from the atmosphere to the extent of 720,000,000 horse power, if he is right, it means that science has at last found a refuge for the day when there will be no more coal in the earth.

COOK MOST FAMOUS OF MODERN LIARS

As a Texas judge said in passing sentence upon one of the most notorious liars on record: "History gave us Ananias and Sapphira. They are forgotten—but we still have Dr. Cook." The sentence was one of fourteen years and nine months' imprisonment and a fine of $12,000 for a large oil swindle. It is not for the oil swindle that Cook will be remembered, but for the claims he put forward to having discovered the North Pole and to have been the first man to scale Mount McKinley, the loftiest peak on the continent. The claims were debated for years, and perhaps there are people yet who believe that Cook climbed Mount McKinley, though it is hardly possible that they still believe in his North Pole claim, for he admitted later on that he didn't know whether he had been at the Pole. The truth probably is that he was not nearer than 500 miles from the Pole. Yet when he made his original announcement he was everywhere acclaimed, for it was the most sensational moment of any kind in years. He was showered with honors from learned societies and universities, honors that were later withdrawn when investigations failed to produce any evidence in his favor.

Said He Reached the Pole.

Cook is a Brooklyn doctor of German descent and is said to have a remarkable physique and great charm of manner. He has had considerable experience of Arctic travel before he made the trip that resulted in his claim, for he was surgeon on the first Peary expedition in 1891 and 1892. In 1897 and 1898 he was surgeon, anthropologist and photographer to the Belgian Antarctic Expedition, and in 1901 he went north with Peary again. In 1907 with John R. Bradley, a New Yorker, he went to Etah, Greenland, a little more than 600 miles from the Pole, and spent the Summer hunting. Bradley later returned to New York and Cook heard that Bradley explained that the purpose of the expedition was a dash for the Pole, but Cook had discovered a few routes and had not said anything about it because he feared the rivalry of Peary who was then in the Arctic. Cook was not heard of until 1909, when a despatch reached the world through Copenhagen that he had reached the Pole and was returning in triumph. The University of Copenhagen received him with every honor, and rapturously conferred degrees upon him. Royalty welcomed him, and chains of flowers were hung round his neck.

Denounced by Peary.

The first cold breath to blow upon him was that of Philip Gibbs, then a London newspaper correspondent, who suggested that Cook had not given the real proofs, consisting of his diaries and scientific observations, to the University. Only a few days later Peary who had reached a telegraph wire sent the message to the world that he and not Cook was the discoverer of the Pole, and that the discovery had never been out of sight of land. Immediately, as it seemed, the world divided into hostile camps, one composed of the Cook champions and the other of Peary champions. Perhaps there was a third group, for which Captain Joseph Bernier spoke the other day, when he expressed regret that neither of them had been there. Cook defended himself, of course. He said that Peary had stolen his provisions. Peary said that Cook had appropriated Eskimos whom Peary had trained for Arctic exploration. Cook received a damaging blow when the University of Copenhagen was obliged to admit that the records submitted by Cook fell some distance short of proofs of Holy Writ.

The Faker Unmasked.

Cook was asked to send additional proof, and after a short delay they were forwarded in charge of his secretary. The University after examining them protested that they were not the original records but merely what purported to be a copy. Cook said the originals were too precious to be let out of his hands, but promised that his wife would take them over later. She failed to do so. In the meantime he had sold the story of his adventure to a New York paper for $30,000. It was pointed out that some of the photographs which were appearing had been taken eight years before. He admitted this when he could no longer deny it, and explained that he had passed over the same ground. Then appeared Captain A. L. W. Loose, a navigator, and George H. Dunkle, an insurance agent, who confessed that they had been employed by Cook to make astronomical records that would help to back up his claim, and that these had been sent to the University. In the end the humiliated University had to admit that it, like some millions more, had been the victim of fraud. An authority said that he did not believe that Cook set down on a street with the finest of instruments, would be able to figure out his latitude and longitude.

The McKinley Claim.

The Mount McKinley adventure occurred in 1906. Cook made one unsuccessful attempt to scale the peak, and then made a second trip with a party that included Dr. Herschel Parker, inventor and scientist. The party failed to find a way up, and returned leaving Cook to explore some glaciers as he said. A month later he telegraphed that with one companion he had reached the summit, describing dramatically his terrible adventures, which later he amplified in a book. It was not until he became involved in the North Pole controversy that an investigation was made of his claims about Mount McKinley. Then an affidavit was received from the lone packer who had accompanied him to the effect that they had never been nearer to the summit than fourteen miles; that he had falsified dates and entries at Cook's direction, and that the photograph of the alleged summit was the photograph of a peak twenty miles away. It was also brought to light that the barometer with which Cook said he had registered an altitude of 20,890 feet would not scale higher than 18,000 feet. Even after these damaging exposures, when the name "Cook" became a synonym for "colossal liar," he was able to live off the public. In the oil field swindle he is supposed to have reaped a fortune.

CUSTOMS OF ANCIENT.

Divorce Practiced Among Egyptians 5000 Years Before Christ.

Prof. Sir W. M. Flinders-Petrie, the world-renowned Egyptologist, in his new book, "Social Work in Ancient Egypt," says that divorce was practiced among the Egyptians as early as five hundred years before Christ.

The following speech, made by an ancient Egyptian at his breakfast table, addressed to his wife, was sufficient to legally cut the nuptial knot:

"I have abandoned thee as wife. I am removed from thee. I have no claim on earth upon thee. I have said unto thee, 'Make for thyself a husband in any place to which thou shalt go.'"

An Egyptian, too, could marry his sister—and often did.

"If I have no more than these two children, it is right that they should marry one another," says an Egyptian parent in the tale of Setna. Polygamy was practiced, but was not widespread. They had much womanly wisdom, as witness this:—

"Behold, it is made to a woman in her house if thou know her thoroughly. Do not say, 'What hath put it in its right place and thine eye hath seen it.' Do not on those art silent thou knowest her qualities, and it is a joy to be with her."

Egyptian philosophy was, however, apt to be tinctured with a crude insistence upon the inevitability of death, which found expression in an oft-read, drink, and be merry for tomorrow we may die" attitude to-wards life.

To this end a model mummy in its case was often made to stand during big chamber after a feast and exhibited to each guest, in order, as Plutarch says, "to exhort them, while filled with wine, to make merry and comfort in that all will soon be such as it." A little unnecessary, one would have thought.

Prof. Petrie gives many interesting details of the building of the Great Pyramid. This colossal structure, whose casing cover thirteen acres, was built in twenty years by 100,000 men, of whom 4,000 were skilled masons.

Tenpence-ha'penny was the daily wage of the workmen, and the building operations attain the "astonishing skill of organization" which was necessary to accomplish this herculean task, and ridicules those who write "nonsense about the oppression of the people, their tears and groans."

It was, he points out, a gigantic and intensely dignified spiritual undertaking, which gave work to thousands of men for a season when the floods locked other work impossible.

Vacuum Bottles.

Most people own vacuum flasks, now that they are so much cheaper than they were. For picnic purposes and travelling they are a great boon and practically indispensable.

The flask that is in constant use should be filled with cold water when-ever it has been emptied, and then placed in a cool and airy place; rinsed and dried. It should then be set in an airy place without the cork on-till it is required for use, when it should with hot or cold water before filling.

Corks require special care, as they are liable to lodge in the edge of hot beverages. It is a wise plan to have several corks ready for use, so that if one can be dried and scrubbed, when necessary, before using again.

Warm soap or cold milk has been the beverage used the flask should be washed with very hot water. Tea will never "taste of the tin" if milk is added after the tea has been poured out. When picnicking or travelling it is well to have a whisk with to carry a little milk in a bottle. Coffee can be made from a pint of the well-known essences if the milk and water have been kept hot in the flask. Cocoa can be made in the same way.

Flowers' Bed Time.

Different flowers have different closing times. The common waterlily retires about four o'clock in the afternoon, but a little to the east of much later in the evening. Tulips and crocuses, being susceptible to climatic changes, go to bed as soon as the heat of the day is over and the evening chill sets in. The goat's beard, something like a dandelion, and growing in tall grass, shuts up its flowers at noon, and does not open them again till the next morning. For this reason the flower is sometimes called "John-go-to-bed-at-noon." The scarlet pimpernel, found in most British cornfields, shuts its petals when the sky gets dark and cloudy. Thus, it has earned for itself the name of "Shepherd's Weather Glass."

Perpetual Sodas.

There is one girl in New York who is "fed up." Her job is to drink out sundaes, sodas, all the soda fountain concoctions there are, or to order them at any rate and go through the motions. She is a spotter. Besides detecting dishonesty and seeing if the ticket systems of the fountains work properly there is the service to handle a look at the quality of syrups and all of that. The technic is just the same as in spotting in a jewelry store. The first essential is complete disguise as an ordinary customer and the second is alertness.

Practiced.

"What's the chances of getting a job driving a hearse?" asked the man with a service button who had successfully gold-bricked his way through two years in the army.

"I hate to turn down an ex-soldier, buddy," replied the foreman, "but we haven't got much do to these days."

"Oh, that's all right. You'll find it doesn't take very much to keep me busy."

Sports and Insurance.

A cricket club in Glasgow has insured itself against possible claims by players injured by balls hit outside the playing pitch. The annual premium works out at the modest sum of 40 cents per player.

Teacher—How many seasons are there?

Izzy—Two, busy and dull.

When "company" comes most housekeepers are particular to serve "Daby's Good Tea." Why not enjoy it all the year round? Like most good things it is cheaper in the end. For sale at Wallace's Drug Store.

DUCHESS TO GO IN MOVIES.

Tells of Struggle Trying to Live on $47.08 a Week.

Another British peeress is about to desert the higher life for the movies—this time it is the beautiful Duchess of Leinster, wife of the premier duke, marquis, and earl of Ireland.

Just now the duchess is living in genteel poverty in a tiny flat in the south coast resort of Bournemouth, to struggle along on an allowance of $47.08 a week.

Ten years ago the duchess was May Etheridge, musical comedy star. She married Lord Edward Fitzgerald, the second heir to the dukedom of Leinster. A year later a child was born.

"When we were poor," she has confided, "I took my husband and the baby to stay at my mother's house in Brixton. That happened several times, and my mother worked like a slave to make us comfortable.

"Now I find myself, a duchess, compelled to live a miserable existence on an allowance of $47.08 a week, made to me by the duke's family," the duchess continued. "The money I have ever had beyond that was $3.50, which I won on Pharos in the last Derby. Years ago I had beautiful jewels. Now I have nothing.

"Now you understand why I want to go to work. I think I am best qualified for the films, and I am looking for a job.

The seventh Duchess of Leinster, seventh Marchioness of Kildare, seventh Countess Offaly, seventh Viscountess of Leinster, twenty-fifth Baroness Offaly threw off the reserve that goes with the 715-year-old name of the Fitzgerald family, plucked a bit of fur from the near-bearskin hearth rug, and, using it as a moustache, shuffled across the room in the Chaplinesque manner to show her talent as a mimic.

Riding the Flume.

In the mountains of Sierra Nevada, the water chute, or flume, is used as a means of travelling from one spot to another. The flume is V shaped and made of wood. It stands on wooden trestles, sometimes where it crosses deep ravines, of immense height. A swift and strong current of water, chiefly used for floating logs and sawn timber, is constantly running down the chute. The boat made to navigate the flume is also V shaped, and fits inside it. It can be floated down at a good speed in about an inch of water. Only one passenger is carried at a time, and he has to sit as far forward as possible in order to tilt up the back of the little craft. In steep places the pace is great, quite twenty miles an hour being reached. Riding the flume is full of thrills, though the little craft runs smoothly and, as there is no machinery, without vibration. But once it has started on the journey it cannot be stopped until it reaches its destination. The sensation of rushing down through space at such a speed is wonderful. But it is a mode of travelling that only experienced hill folk to the strong-nerved.

Patagonia Like Erin.

Irish people are fond of boasting of the immunity of their island from all kinds of pests. It is true that Ireland does not possess any of the three kinds of British snakes, but size is by no means the only country so blessed. There are no snakes in New Zealand, and very few poisonous insects. New Zealand has a spider which is rather poisonous, and, of course, it has its mosquitoes, but on the whole it is a very healthy country. Patagonia is another snakeless country. There are no snakes in Iceland, while Japan and Tasmania are also places where these reptiles are very rare.

Marsh Filled With Ducks.

In the wide artesian marsh of Crook and Creek valley, three miles east of Meade, Kan., thousands of wild water fowls are making their home. In many places the ducklings are so numerous that one can scarcely make his way through the tall grass without stepping on them.

From the present outlook this marshy region will be a hunter's paradise the coming fall and winter. There are several thousand acres in this immense hay bottom, and it has long been a famous resort and nesting place for aquatic fowls during flood years.

Beetles Eat Church.

The beetle which cost old England $500,000 by its appetite for the roof beams of Westminster Hall, has now endangered the safety of the roof of Limehouse polish church in the East End of London. This beautiful gleaming white Portland stone church was in a respectable neighborhood of merchants and sea captains when it was built. Nowadays it is so disreputable that Lloyd-George's Conservative opponents called his attacks on the "origin of the species of the peerage years ago, "limehousing."

Lightning Passed Through Building.

During a storm at Norwich, Eng., lightning struck the chimney of the local Young Men's Christian Association premises. A man reading in one room saw it pass out in a ball of blue flame and noticed a smell of burning. No damage, however, was done.

Easy!

"Give the feminine of hero" was a question put to pupils in a South London secondary school. One bright scholar answered: "Shero."

It Testifies for Itself—Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil needs no testimonial of its powers other than itself. Whoever tries it for coughs or colds, for cuts or contusions, for sprains or burns, for pains in the limbs or body, will know that the remedy proves itself and needs no guarantee. This shows why this Oil is in general use.

HOW OPIUM IS SMUGGLED.

Some of the Methods Resorted To In India.

The latest Burma Excise Report shows that the ingenuity of smugglers in inventing novel methods of concealing opium is by no means exhausted. Contraband was found during the year concealed in double-bottomed tubs, tiffin-carriers, hamboos, hollow bread, pots of the Burmah fish paste known as ngapi.

Match boxes filled with opium were packed with genuine match boxes in complete packets. An earthen pot with a betelnut tree growing in it, a hollow stone image of Buddha, and similar figures of elephants were used as receptacles. Perhaps the newest and cleverest device discovered was that of a Chinese passenger on board of a Bhamo mail steamer whose baggage was being searched by a Burman inspector, and who had two large baskets of earth filled with two large sheets of what appeared to be tarpaulin.

On examination the sheets were found to be composed of thin book canvas smeared with desiccated opium weighing 220 tolas (5½ lbs.). The device was extremely ingenious and would have defied detection had the smuggler not lost his nerve and offered a bribe to the searching officer. The sheets were destroyed forthwith. Only by taste could the opium be detected. On immersing a portion in water the opium readily separated from the canvas.

Weathervane 350 Years Old.

Wide interest attaches to the 356th birthday of the old copper dragon of the weathervane at St. Mary's, Cheapside, London, not only because of the age and historic interest of the old relic which is still in active service, but because its present birthday marks a renaissance of the copper weathervane. The increasing use of the weathercock on larger buildings is ascribed for the most part to the growing use of the tower in architecture.

The copper dragon of St. Mary's was placed in use in 1573, during the reign of "Good Queen Bess." From its lofty perch 221 feet above the sidewalk, it has looked down upon, and viewed participated in, many strange episodes in London life. Besides rendering faithful service through the changing winds of centuries, it has served as a symbol of the city of London itself, for 325 years ago, when it was put up, the crest of the city was represented by the cross of St. George emblazoned on the wing of a dragon, just as it is represented there to-day.

This quaint copper dragon saw the rise and fall of Oliver Cromwell, the coming and passing of the Revolution and the Great Interregnum. It survived unscathed the great fire of London in 1666, and practically unscathed in the dirty of Samuel Pepys.

The dragon is made of sheet copper and is eight feet six inches long. It has been taken down for repairing on four different occasions, but the dragon itself has withstood the elements unharmed.

Singing-Lamp to Warn Miners.

Fire-damp is probably more dreaded by miners than any other menace of their calling. Its presence leads to explosions, breathing it is dangerous and its approach is so insidious that the damage may be done before it is discovered. Safety lamps have been in common use for many years to prevent fire damp explosions, the famous Davies lamp being the one best known. Now comes an improvement on the Davies lamp and also the invention of a Briton. This new lamp not only is a safety lamp but gives the explosive side of mining and a real illuminating lamp, but it also is a dandy damp protector. Its pinched frame resembles a bunch of tuning forks and they are made so sensitive that the presence of even so small an amount of fire damp in the air as 1½ per cent. will cause the lamp to sing, or vibrate a musical note. As the fire damp increases in the air, the lamp sings more buttress-like and shrilly, affording ample warning to the underground worker of the deadly menace.

Pinholes Drilled In Steel.

Making an adding machine required the drilling of ten holes in a plate a thirty-second of an inch thick, each hole to be accurate to a thousandth of an inch, yet no bigger than a pin hole, says the Washington Star. The result was a most ingenious machine that stands about 12 inches high. The drill which was built carries ten spindles, each holding a drill of number six size. Gauging which is about the size of the pin of ordinary use.

Each drill driver of steel that does the work is driven by a belt operating through a cam head and thereby turns at the same speed as that of its neighbors. The actual drilling requires ten seconds.

Nearing the End.

"I am not going to talk long this evening," said the preacher. "I've been cured of that. The other night I was making a speech when a man arose in the gallery and took a seat right in the front row. I had not been talking an hour when I noticed he was becoming restless. Finally he arose and asked:

"'Say, how long you been lecturin'?'

"'About four years, my friend,' I replied.

"'Well,' re remarked, as he sat down. 'I'll stick around; you must be near through.'"

Savage Mother Owl.

As she was hanging out clothes a farmer's wife, near Muncie, Ind., was savagely attacked by a big brown owl. Flying from a neighboring tree, the bird pecked the woman's head and eye and pulled out several tufts of hair. The injury to the eye necessitated an operation. It was found afterward that the owl had a nest of young birds close by.

GREAT BALLOONS TO MAKE SKY POWER

To "harness the thunderbolt" has been one of the great dreams of civilized man from old Zeus, god of the Greeks, who played about at will with lightning, down to our own Charles F. Steinmetz.

The latest scheme, which is remarkable in that it proposes to draw electric power from the air in fair weather as well as in foul, is the idea of Dr. Plauson of Hamburg. He has recently suggested that atmospheric-electric power plants, stationed all over the world, will in the future do away with the necessity for generating steam.

Dr. Plauson's plan proposes the construction of enormous balloons to be made of metal entirely and filled with hydrogen or helium. On the metallic balloon surfaces he proposes to erect hundreds of sharp steel points, which are to act as tiny lightning rods. They will be treated with radium preparations if called for to make the surrounding air a good conductor by reason of the radium rays passing through it.

These balloons are to be sent up to a height of 1,500 feet and joined together. A metallic cable is to lead off the electric charges collected by the system and conduct them to a spark gap, whose other terminal is to be connected with the earth. Thus, wherever the atmospheric energy stored up by the balloons reaches a certain pressure, there will be a discharge of miniature lightning across the spark gap. As the balloons will continue to collect charges after each discharge, Dr. Plauson concludes that the flow will be continuous.

This lightning, of course, cannot by itself be made to perform any work directly. But the inventor proposes to employ the discharge-flashes for the generation of high-frequency alternating currents in coils of wire connected to the terminals of the spark gap. These coils are to be modeled after those designed by and named after Tesla. The energy delivered by the Tesla coils is to drive special resonance motors invented by Plauson, which will in turn drive electric dynamos or generators of ordinary design.

Dr. Plauson proposes to erect his stations particularly in places such as moors, mountains, steppes, deserts, lakes and seas, where there will be no interference with or from established industrial machinery or buildings. For a district of area such as the state of Texas, he claims, there would be available power from the atmosphere to the extent of 720,000,000 horse power. If he is right, it means that science has at last found a refuge for the day when there will be no more coal in the earth.

BABYLONIAN TABLETS

CONTAIN ACCOUNT OF THE FALL OF MAN.

Professor at Pennsylvania University Deciphers Clay Tablet of About 2100 B.C. — Resembles Biblical Story In Reference to Forbidden Food.

Dr. Edward Chiera, assistant professor of Assyriology of the University of Pennsylvania, has deciphered a Babylonian clay tablet of about 2100 B.C., which contained an account of the fall of man paralleling the account in Genesis in many particulars.

The account is in the form of a dialogue between a man and a god. It resembles the Biblical story in reference to a forbidden food, to the disobedience of man, to man's unlawful attainment of knowledge, to his being driven into a desert and compelled to labor. His adoption of clothing as a result of knowledge is also indicated.

The god—which Babylonian god is not indicated—drives man away in self-defence rather than as a punishment. Man is accused of aspiring to a place with the gods, a theme which has been treated in other Babylonian literature. The moral consideration is unimportant in the Babylonian legend, man's position being like that of Prometheus, a criminal in the eyes of a god, but a patriot from the point of view of man.

"The date of this tablet, is about 2100 or 2200 B.C.," says Dr. Chiera. "The writing of the Hebrew account took place, according to the best authorities, at some later date (about 1400 B.C.). The tablet is in the Sumerian language, and formerly belonged to the library of the temple at Sippar, from which excavations for the University of Pennsylvania have recovered several thousand tablets.

According to the Assyriologist, the ancient Babylonian story was apparently taken over by the Hebrews and adjusted to fit their monotheistic system. It was formed a long series of antiquities to prove that the original account of Genesis was Babylonian, and that, while the Hebrews modified it, they retained many features in the Bible story which are inconsistent with the Hebrew theology.

In this resumes, for the priority of the Babylonian account as against the Hebrew, Dr. Chiera says:

"The first point of variance in Genesis from what we would expect to find in an account civilized Hebrews is the fact that they placed the scene in a garden. A garden presupposes an agricultural state. We know that the Hebrews worshipped Yahweh, or Jehovah, did not dwell in a garden, but, as a god of a nomadic tribe, he dwelt on the mount of Sinai. Therefore the placing of the story in Genesis is entirely wrong, if we are to regard the story of Hebrew origin.

"The Hebrew prophets are constantly battling against the civilized inhabitant of an agricultural colony, and seeking to induce their people to go back to the primitive simplicity of nomadic life. We should not imagine that they would put the beginning of the race in a place where they did not want their people to be later on."

The Sumerian text just deciphered is the oldest account of the fall of man. Supposed proportions of it have been found in clay documents of the same age, but nothing nearly so complete relates to the fall had been found up to ancient a date.

The Hebrews, in the opinion of Dr. Chiera, appropriated the story, not during the captivity, but after their return from Babylon in 539 B.C. By that time they had forgotten the original meaning of the story, and probably regarded the "tree of knowledge" as identical with the tree which replaced the Sumerian. A friend and collector, according to Egypt of a date shortly after 3100 B.C., indicates, that Semitic-Babylonian was the common language then prevailing, and was used in international messages by the Pharaohs. Egyptian, Hittite and other nations. Palestine was the cross-roads between Egypt and Babylonia, the two great centers of early civilization.

The Hebrews of Palestine could easily master the Babylonian-Semitic language, which was much like their own, and drew heavily on it for their culture and for the illustrations of their religion, according to Dr. Chiera.

Candles of Dried Fish.

Alaska has done her best in announcing her material and fantastic features, now that that faraway land is in the spotlight.

The latest odd offering in her publicity is the Siwash Indian announcement that they know of a fish, much like a smelt, to which they have given the name eulachon that can be dried and used as a candle, being so full of heavy fish oil that it burns nearly as well as spermaceti candle.

So the fish supplies food, the oil is extracted for use in cooking and in preparation of skins for wearing apparel, and the surplus fish are dried for candles to be used in the long winter evenings, and the whole proposition may be taken to indicate the belief that other parts of the world will have to go pretty lively to equal that story.

RELIC OF BURIAL CUSTOM.

Stuffed Parrot Near Grave of Duchess Buried In Westminster Abbey.

It was once the curious custom in England to carry wax effigies of the dead — if they were distinguished enough—in their funeral processions. It was also customary to leave the effigies near the grave for some time thereafter, and the mourning friends of the deceased were used to compose elegies, rhymed laments and similar productions, which they would write fairly out on paper and pin to the clothing of the effigy. A number of the quaint old effigies are still preserved at Westminster Abbey, where they are stored in the Islip Chapel, and one at least, that of Frances, Duchess of Richmond, is still to be seen beside her grave in Henry VII.'s chapel.

The fair duchess was something of a figure at the court of Charles II. and she was for some years a particular favorite of the merry monarch. Her effigy at Westminster is magnificently dressed in the robes she wore on some great occasion—the coronation perhaps of Queen Anne—and beside it on its perch is the stuffed body of her grace's pet parrot. It is a strange thing to be seen in this last resting place of the great and famous. Doubtless it is the only creature not human on whom such distinction has been conferred.

The story goes that the parrot died of grief within a few days of its mistress, and that it was carried to her funeral procession on account of her great affection for it. How it happened to be left in the abbey and why it has never been dispossessed of its place there is no one seems to know. It has been there a long now, watching like Tut-Ankh-Amen's two guardian statues over the last slumbers of its fair mistress, that it may fairly be brought to have established a precedent right to its post of honor.—Youth's Companion.

Marks and Rubles Sale.

Although marks and rubles are a good deal like prophets, with no standing in their own home towns, there is an excellent market for them in some districts of New York.

There is a stocky little man who talks large numbers in Russian and German and offers currency of those two countries to garment workers—operators, cutters, finishers, pressers, foreign. He sells six-figured Russian notes for 25 cents, except when it is raining, when you may have them for 15 cents, because, he said, he takes cold easily.

The money man said he had been out of work when a friend told him how he could sell those rubles and marks and do right well at it. He said he couldn't see why people wanted that foot money" until he began to ask them. He knows now and he uses his knowledge to boom business.

"They buy this money," he explained, "only to hold it, to own it. When they were in Russia 100,000 rubles was a czar's fortune. There were two rubles for a dollar, but each ruble was worth many dollars when you bought something. They just want to hold this money now, that's all. It makes them feel rich, even if no one will take it in a store."

Skimmed Milk Ivory.

A material that resembles ivory is made from skimmed milk by a process worked out by an Englishman. The material being non-inflammable, odorless and can be drilled, fluted and dyed, it has a multitude of uses as a substitute for ivory, ebony, amber, tortoiseshell, horn, and other similar products. It may be used also as an atmospheric imitation of many natural products of great price, among them being Cambay jade and lapis lazuli.

A brilliant polish is easily obtained and it can be bent, pressed, cast, to resist cutting, machined, or enchined. As it is a non-conductor of electricity, it may be used in making decorative radio and lighting fittings. Also it has been found valuable for ships' cabins, handrails, automobile fittings, and in the making of boxes, buckles, buttons, jewellery, fancy ornaments, cigarette holders, combs, brushes, carriage handles, parts of furniture, pencils and penholders, organ stops, and piano keys.

The Last Waltzwash.

The well known Elysian Fish of New York was talking about a certain "whitewash" report.

"That report," he said, "reminds me of a little boy who was taken by his mother to visit a cemetery.

"The little boy went from plot to plot, from tomb to tomb, reading the inscriptions with awe and delight. Then, when he had read them all, he said:

"Now take me to the other cemetery, ma!'

"The other cemetery?' said his mother. 'Whatever cemetery do you mean, dear?'

"The one,' said the little boy, 'where the bad people are buried.'"

Why the Crescent?

Here is a new explanation of the Turkish crescent. When Alexander the Great, so the story runs, was besieging ancient Byzantium, a vital night attack was revealed by the bright shining of the crescent moon, and the grateful citizens adopted it as their symbol. When the Romans came they adopted the crescent flag for the new city of Constantine, and when Mohammed II. conquered the great capital in 1453 he added its emblem to his own flag, hitherto plain red, continuing to his followers that the new standard represented Constantinople in a field of blood.

England's Diving Thrush.

The English brook-hunting dipper is an oddity—a bird which has become a waterbird. Deeper and deeper it thrusts its head into the water seeking for aquatic insects and other insects, says an authority. At length it came to disappear altogether, and became a diver. Still it has not acquired even yet any of the characteristics of the true diving birds. Its feet are unwebbed. It is still a thrush.

IT SOUNDED TOO GOOD

A woman, wearing an anxious expression, called at an insurance office one morning.

"I understand," she said, "that for $5 I can insure my house for $1,000."

"Yes," replied the agent, "that is right."

"And," continued the woman, anxiously, "do you make any inquiries as to the origin of the fire?"

"Certainly," was the prompt reply.

"Oh !" and she turned to leave the office. "I thought there was a catch in it somewhere."

"I Had General Debility," Writes Mrs. Pelletier.

General Debility or a run-down condition of the system may be due to overwork, going out too soon after an illness, worry, neglecting to take proper care of one's health, sleeplessness, etc. Its symptoms are weakness, lack of energy. The person so afflicted is easily fatigued, nervous, depressed. Headaches, nervous dyspepsia are other symptoms of nervous debility. Building up the system with Carnol is the way Mrs. Pelletier was benefited. Her letter follows:

"I had general debility. I was all run down. I hadn't any appetite and could only digest liquids. I was nervous, quickly alarmed and I was losing weight. The least exertion tired me. I consulted my doctor. He said I had general debility. He told me to take several bottles of Carnol because I needed building up. When I told Mr. H. B. Payne, the druggist, my trouble he said he knew of no finer tonic. He always recommended it when a good, reliable tonic was needed. After taking three bottles I got relief, but I am still taking it. My appetite has come back. I can sleep. I have no more headaches and have already gained ten pounds. I am well satisfied with Carnol and always recommend it to my friends."—Mrs. M. Pelletier, Rivière du Loup.

The autumn days are waning fast, And fowl beckons the world; The sun is setting early, And it's growing mighty cold. The joints of birds are slower, No crickets voices float; The frogs that used to chortle, Have a throat round their throat.

But foxes, crows and squirrels, Still are lively "on the wing"; And ivy softly rustling, Is a rod and gliding thing. The trees are bare and cheerless, And the farmer kindling cuts; He'll be busy for Thanksgiving, Now is fattod up on nuts.

For the sere month of November, Offers naught to cheer the soul; We no longer dream of summer, For our thoughts are turned to coal. And there's little consolation, In the card-board lofty piled; When the weather prophet tells us, That the winter will be mild.

LATE AUTUMN DREAM

In response to a request from his Sunday School teacher a boy gave an account of Elijah in the following form:

"Once there was a man named Elijah. He had some bears and lived in a cave. Some boys tantalized him. He said: 'If you keep on throwing stones at me I will turn the bears on you and they will eat you up.' And they and he did and the bears did."

NEW LAMP BURNS 94 PER CENT AIR

BEATS ELECTRIC OR GAS

A new oil lamp that gives an amazingly brilliant, soft, white light, even better than gas or electricity, has been tested by the U. S. Government and by leading universities and found to be superior to 10 ordinary lamps. It burns without odor, smoke or noise, no pumping up, is simple, clean, safe. Burns 94 per cent. air and 6 per cent common kerosene (coal oil).

The inventor, F. N. Johnson, 215 Craig St. W., Montreal, is offering to send a lamp on 10 days' FREE trial, or even to give one FREE to the first user in each locality who will help him introduce it. Write him to-day for full particulars. Also ask him to explain how you can get the agency, and without experience or money make $250 to $500 per month.

About 2 o'clock Sunday morning fire was discovered in the tailoring shop of J. L. Boyes & Son, by Night-watchman Cook. The tailoring shop was badly burned and water and smoke did considerable damage to the stock in the main store. The alertness and prompt action of Mr. Cook prevented a very serious fire.

Young Business Man Passes in Belleville.

Belleville, Dec. 3rd.—Earl F. Chapman, one of Belleville's most promising young business men, passed away early to-day at the family residence, 184 Albert street. Mr. Chapman was about business as usual on Saturday, but was stricken in the evening at his office at the Belleville Motors, Limited, and was hurried home. In spite of all that medication and medical skill could accomplish the illness proved fatal. His father was County Clerk of Hastings. Educated here, he went to Toronto, and was for some time with the Ford Motor Company at Windsor and Toronto, and with the Continental Guarantee Corporation at Toronto. Returning to Belleville in the spring of 1921, he founded with Mr. Eardley Wilmot, Belleville Motors, Limited. He was active in the life of the city and a prominent member of the Kiwanis. He was also a member of the Country Club and Edmonton Lodge, A. F. and A. M.

The late Mr. Chapman was a member of the firm of Wilmot & Chapman, Napanee.

Death of Dorothy Eleanor Finn.

The death took place at the Hotel Dieu Hospital, Kingston, on Tuesday, Nov. 27th, of Dorothy Eleanor Finn, two-year-old daughter of Mr. John Finn, of Bath. The remains were sent to Bath by the James Reid firm. This case is a particularly sad one as Mr. Finn's wife died during the summer and the twin of this child died last Saturday. Much sympathy is felt for Mr. Finn.

Delightful Children's Bazaar.

A delightful afternoon was spent at the home of Mr. G. W. Gibbard, on Saturday last, when four young girls, Marjorie and Betty Gibbard, Mary Gerow and Mildred Loucks, held a bazaar in aid of the Star Santa Claus Fund. Other years these girls sent donations, but for many weeks they have spent their spare time making Xmas gifts for their bazaar. The drawing room, prettily decorated, was given to the booths, Mrs. J. Pringle in charge of the fancy work, and Mrs. J. Loucks the candy table, helped the girls with their sales. Mrs. Gibbard was kept busy inviting the callers to the dining room where delicious refreshments were served. Mrs. Laidley and Miss Hall were in charge, assisted by many pretty little girls who performed their duties in a delightful manner. During the afternoon a musical programme was furnished, adding greatly to the enjoyment of all. We understand a handsome sum has been forwarded the Treasurer of the Fund, Toronto, to bring cheer to many a home where Santa Claus would not otherwise have visited.

NAPANEE COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE

The Commencement Exercises of the Napanee Collegiate Institute will be held this year on Thursday evening, Dec. 20th, in the Armouries. Last year the crowd was so great that many could not gain admission to the entertainment, which was held in Wonderland Theatre.

This year the programme will contain a great many new attractions. The Orchestra of 15 pieces, which is being trained by Mrs. Cameron Wilson, will make its first appearance. Sergt.-Major Turner, Kingston, has been training the boys in gymnastics, and a novel and skillful exhibition by 20 boys, on parallel bars, on the "horse" and in tumbling, etc., is very thrilling. The fancy dances in costume by groups of girls, are beautiful and graceful. A Glee Club also has been organized and gives promise of a good performance.

The important items on the programme are the distributions of Graduation Diplomas, Commercial Diplomas, Typewriting Medals, and the cups and medals won at the Field Day and which are now on exhibition in the window of Wallace's Drug Store.

WEDDING BELLS

Cole—Brown.

A pretty wedding of the Thanksgiving season took place yesterday morning at 10, in the parsonage of the First Methodist Church of Farrell, when Miss Ethel Cole, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Olive Cole, of Desoronto, Canada, became the bride of Sidney Brown, of Napanee, Canada. Rev. J. E. Iams, Pastor of the First Methodist Church, was the presiding clergyman. Miss Helen Antol attended as bridesmaid, while Emil Bernard of Farrell, served as best man.

The bride looked lovely in a gown of dark blue Canton crepe, with smart hat to correspond. She carried brides roses. Miss Antol wore a frock of black Canton crepe, with trimmings of squirrel and carried pink roses.

In the evening an informal reception was held in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Emil Bernard of Spearman Ave., cousins of the bride. Forty guests were received. The Bernard home was beautifully decorated with roses and chrysanthemums.

Mr. and Mrs. Brown have dispensed with the wedding trip and will make their home in Farrell. Both young people are well known here. Mrs. Brown has visited frequently in Farrell. Mr. Brown is identified with the American Steel and Wire Company. Their friends extend congratulations.

KILLS BACTERIA

Antiseptic Effect Attributed to Tobacco Smoke.

Pipe-smokers have an advantage in health over men who do not smoke, according to an American doctor who saw service as a surgeon with the American Expeditionary Forces in the world war. "During the war", he says, "I was in charge of over 500 soldiers at a post with marshes near by, and dysentery raged with virulence. I noticed that the heaviest smokers, who went about with pipes in their mouths, did not contract the disease. I smoked all the time and was free from it. So that smoking is in reality a great protective against disease."

According to the Pasture Periodical, a magazine issued by the celebrated Pasteur Institute in Paris, tobacco smoke is highly antiseptic and kills, in a few moments, the primary bacteria of cholera, diptheria and cerebrospinal meningitis.

Belleville, Dec. 3rd.—Earl F. Chapman, one of Belleville's most promising young business men, passed away early to-day at the family residence, 184 Albert street. Mr. Chapman was about business as usual on Saturday, but was stricken in the evening at his office at the Belleville Motors, Limited, and was hurried home. In spite of all that attention and medical skill could accomplish the illness proved fatal. His father was County Clerk for Hastings. Educated here, he went to Toronto, and was for some time with the Ford Motor Company at Windsor and Toronto, and with the Continental Guarantee Corporation at Toronto. Returning to Belleville in the spring of 1921, he founded with Mr. Eardley Wilmot, Belleville Motors, Limited. He was active in the life of the city and a prominent member of the Kiwanis. He was also a member of the Country Club and Edmonton Lodge, A. F. and A. M.

The late Mr. Chapman was a member of the firm of Wilmot & Chapman, Napanee.

Tea and Fowl Supper.

You will miss a whole lot if you don't come to Violet Church, on New Years night, where they are holding their Tea and Fowl Supper. Chicken and pies galore. Come and help us eat them. A good programme is being prepared. Tickets, $1.00 couple; children under 12 years, 25c. 49a

Death of Dorothy Eleanor Finn.

The death took place at the Hotel Dieu Hospital, Kingston, on Tuesday, Nov. 27th, of Dorothy Eleanor Finn, two-year-old daughter of Mr. John Finn, of Bath. The remains were sent to Bath by the James Reid firm. This case is a particularly sad one as Mr. Finn's wife died during the summer and the twin of this child died last Saturday. Much sympathy is felt for Mr. Finn.

Delightful Children's Bazaar.

A delightful afternoon was spent at the home of Mr. G. W. Gibbard, on Saturday last, when four young girls, Marjorie and Betty Gibbard, Mary Gerow and Mildred Loucks, held a bazaar in aid of the Star Santa Claus Fund. Other years these girls sent donations, but for many weeks they have spent their spare time making Xmas gifts for their bazaar. The drawing room, prettily decorated, was given to the booths, Mrs. J. Pringle in charge of the fancy work, and Mrs. J. Loucks the candy table, helped the girls with their sales. Mrs. Gibbard was kept busy inviting the callers to the dining room where delicious refreshments were served. Mrs. Laidley and Miss Hall were in charge, assisted by many pretty little girls who performed their duties in a delightful manner. During the afternoon a musical programme was furnished, adding greatly to the enjoyment of all. We understand a handsome sum has been forwarded the Treasurer of the Fund, Toronto, to bring cheer to many a home where Santa Claus would not otherwise have visited.

NAPANEE COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE

The Commencement Exercises of the Napanee Collegiate Institute will be held this year on Thursday evening, Dec. 20th, in the Armouries. Last year the crowd was so great that many could not gain admission to the entertainment, which was held in Wenderland Theatre.

This year the programme will contain a great many new attractions. The Orchestra of 15 pieces, which is being trained by Mrs. Cameron Wilson, will make its first appearance. Sergt.-Major Turner, Kingston, has been training the boys in gymnastics, and a novel and skilful exhibition by 20 boys, on parallel bars, on the "horse" and in tumbling, etc., is very thrilling. The fancy dances in costume by groups of girls, are beautiful and graceful. A Glee Club also has been organized and gives promise of a good performance.

The important items on the programme are the distributions of Graduation Diplomas, Commercial Diplomas, Typewriting Medals, and the prizes and medals won at the Field Day and which are now on exhibition in the window of Wallace's Drug Store.

WEDDING BELLS

Cole—Brown.

A pretty wedding of the Thanksgiving season took place yesterday morning at 10, in the parsonage of the First Methodist Church of Farrell, when Miss Ethel Cole, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Olive Cole, of Deseronto, Canada, became the bride of Sidney Brown, of Napanee, Canada. Rev. T. E. Ianni, Pastor of the First Methodist Church, was the presiding clergyman. Miss Helen Antol attended as bridesmaid, while Emil Bernard of Farrell, served as best man.

The bride looked lovely in a gown of dark blue Canton crepe, with small hat to correspond. She carried brides roses. Miss Antol wore a frock of black Canton crepe, with trimmings of squirrel and carried pink roses.

In the evening an informal reception was held in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Emil Bernard of Spearman Ave., cousins of the bride. Many guests were received. The Bernard home was beautifully decorated with roses and chrysanthemums.

Mr. and Mrs. Brown have dispensed with the wedding trip and will make their home in Farrell. Both young people are well known here. Mrs. Brown has visited frequently in Farrell. Mr. Brown is identified with the American Steel and Wire Company. Their friends extend congratulations.

KILLS BACTERIA

Antiseptic Effect Attributed to Tobacco Smoke.

Pipe-smokers have an advantage in health over men who do not smoke, according to an American doctor who saw service as a surgeon with the American Expeditionary Force, in the world war. "During the war", he says, "I was in charge of over 500 soldiers at a post with marshes near by, and dysentery raged with virulence. I noticed that the heaviest smokers, who went about with pipes in their mouths, did not contract the disease. I smoked all the time and was free from it. So that smoking is in reality a great protective against disease."

According to the Pasteur Periodical, a magazine issued by the celebrated Pasteur Institute in Paris, tobacco smoke is highly antiseptic and kills, in a few moments, the primary bacteria of cholera, diptheria and cerebrospinal meningitis.

CENTREVILLE

Centreville is enjoying the perfect December weather, even the oldest of the villagers say it is the mildest weather they have ever enjoyed in December.—Mrs. W. J. McGill has returned from the west, after spending five months with her daughters, Mrs. E. A. Toshack, Drumbeller, Alta., and Mrs. Jack Paxton, Regina, also with her granddaughter, Miss Bessie McGill. — Mr. Frank Lochhead has returned home, after an extended visit in and around Napanee. — Mr. Meacham Brigault has returned home from the west, which cheers up some of the Centreville girls.—A number from here attended the dance given by the I.O.O.F., of Yarker, on Wednesday evening. — Centreville L.O.L. No. 756, held their annual at home on Tuesday evening, December 4th. After the election of officers the members of the lodge adjourned to the Town Hall and were assisted by members of Garner L.O.B.A. No. 383, and their lady friends, in spending a very enjoyable social evening. The programme consisted of an address by Rev. R. J. Merriam, speech by Bro. C. E. Breault, address by Mrs. O. A. McKnight, P.W.M. of L. O. L. A., Tamworth, solo by Mrs. Geo. A. McGill, and a recitation by Miss Mona Thompson. The most interesting feature of the evening was a debate, entitled, "Resolved that the Teacher is more essential than the Preacher". The affirmative was taken by Bro. Wilmot Breault, P.M., and Miss Willa Nickle; the negative was taken by Bro. Edgar Drew and Miss Berniece McGill. Bro. Merriam, Frank Thompson, and Mrs. J. R. Hanan, acting as judges, decided that the affirmative won by a small margin. Light refreshments were served and the gathering dispersed with the singing of the National Anthem.

THE WARDEN'S BANQUET

On Friday evening, at the Campbell House, Warden J. S. Johnson, of Adolphustown, entertained the members of the County Council, the County Officials, and a large number of friends, at the annual Warden's banquet. Mr. Bert Wallace, proprietor of the Campbell House, prepared a splendid repast which was thoroughly enjoyed by all present.

Following the supper, Mr. W. G. Wilson, the veteran County Clerk, acted as toast-master, and the usual toasts were given and some splendid short addresses were given by the various speakers in answer to the toasts.

Mr. Johnson, in welcoming his guests, expressed his thanks to the assembly for their appreciation of his invitation. He also expressed his pleasure in representing the U. E. L. Township of Adolphustown, and the pleasure it gave him to have been honoured in being chosen Warden of the County. Mr. Johnson expressed the hope that each and all of his friends had enjoyed the supper and would further enjoy the programme prepared for their entertainment.

Following is the toast list :—

The Army and Navy—Responded to by Mr. Frank Bell and Mr. Frank Ford.

Our Legislators—Responded to by Mr. J. Sexsmith, M.P., and Mr. G. W. Hambly, M.L.A., Mayor Newman, Picton, Mr. O'Brien, and Mr. A. B. Carscallen, Tamworth.

The County Council—Responded to by Ex-Wardens J. E. Harrison, Newburgh, and Johnston Hannah, Camden.

Learned Professions—Responded to by Rev. A. J. Terrill and J. M. Simpson.

The Ladies—Responded to by Mr. Fred. A. Perry.

All the speakers congratulated Warden Johnston on the excellent banquet provided and their keen appreciation of Mr. Johnson's kindness, also congratulating the County on having as Warden a gentleman with more than an average amount of common sense, who has filled the position with honor to the County and credit to himself.

During the banquet and while the guests were assembling, Black's Orchestra furnished excellent music, which was highly appreciated by the assembled guests.

The musical part of the after-dinner programme was in charge of a quartette composed of Messrs. F. La Salle, F. W. Barrett, B. Seymour and W. J. Shannon. All theirs numbers were well rendered and greatly applauded. The quartette also led the community singing.

"LIFE EVERLASTING"

Dr. M. B. Baker, Professor of Geology at Queen's University, lectured on the above subject in the Historical Hall, on Friday, to an interested audience which completely filled the room. The subject with which the Professor was concerned is not the easiest by any means for a popular presentation. But by means of lantern slides and by avoiding technical terms as much as possible, the speaker succeeded in interesting the whole audience and imparting a mass of useful information concerning the growth and developement of life as gleaned from the records of the rocks and the stars and the composition of the earth. The slides for the most part were from photographs of reconstructed specimens which are preserved in the great museums of Europe and America, and were the best possible evidence of the accuracy and painstaking care of the modern scientist. Whatever may be the view of the growth of life which the audience held it was impossible to escape the conviction that those who had from the past reconstructed its life and evolution had been conscientious consecrated and brilliant students and scholars.

The days in which we are living are those of change and transition. It is possible to understand the present only as we understand the past and note the movements which have been in progress through the ages. And a lecture like that which Dr. Baker delivered on Friday will do much to steady ones faith in the ultimate purpose of life, and in the gradual but consistent ascent of man. Popularizing the findings of science, bringing the results of the long years of research to the great mass of people of this generation is a tremendous but most useful function, of those who have the scientific spirit and training and who have not by it cut themselves off from "the man on the street". Dr. Baker is of this type and those who heard him will not long forget his interesting and instructive message.

ACROSTIC.

The Addington Beaver, a nice little sheet,
Has lately been started, and looks brisk and neat;
Everyone who hasn't seen it should immediately see it.

All those who want news that's fresh, spicy and fumpy,
Don't fail to send for it (enclosing the money).
Devoted to literature, science and news,
Its columns are worthy your time to peruse.
Now only three months since it first showed its face,
Gaining strength every day, it is growing apace ;
Then, again, 'tis so cheap, to whom all must agree,
One dollar a year is its moderate fee ;
Now who'd be without it ? I'm sure it's not me."

But before I conclude, just a word I would say,
Encourage The Beaver in every way,
Ask your neighbors to take it, ('tis right that they should),
Very much in this way may be done for its good.
Enjoying The Beaver exceedingly well,
Respectfully yours, I remain,
JIMUEL.

January 25, 1870.

Editor Napanee Beaver :

Dear Sir,—I have just come across the above Acrostic in one of my old scrap books, and it occured to me that it might be of interest to your present readers, since The Beaver moved from Newburgh to Napanee, and also has grown in size, circulation and influence. If I am not mistaken the editor and proprietor at that time, more than half a century ago, was a Mr. Stephas I. Beeman. Having been a student at the Newburgh Academy a short time before The Beaver was born, I, of course, felt interested in it.

I had the privilege of visiting Newburgh in October last, and again last week, visiting the old academy building, considerably changed, like the town itself, and the people too. That terrible fire made sad havoc ; very many of those who lived there then have gone away, and many lie in the cemetery, which I also visited. My good friend "Charlie" still remains, and, I see, occupies a prominent position and fills several important offices. Your readers will know that I refer to C. Welbanks, Esq., at whose home I was delightfully entertained. I met other friends, too, and so had a most enjoyable visit.

Wishing you and your staff a Merry Christmas and a Happy and Prosperous New Year, I am,

Yours faithfully,
JAMES LAWSON.

HAWLEY

Pressing and hauling hay is the order of the day.—Mr. and Mrs. G. Creighton and a number of friends made a flying trip to Kingston on Tuesday last.—Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Clark spent last week with their daughter, Mrs. G. Parks.—Once again we are preparing for a Merry Christmas. A message was received from Santa Claus, saying he will be early in the year fitting his reindeers for their annual trip, so will be around on Christmas eve if possible, and thinks that a rushing a special delivery of Christmas Tree Trimmings to be held on Friday, Dec. 21st, would be quite a treat for the little folks. Everybody cordially invited. Boyes & Sons.

OBITUARY

Mrs. E. A. Leonard.

The news of the sudden illness and death of Mrs. (Dr.) Leonard on Monday came as a shock to the whole community. Mrs. Leonard had been enjoying her usual health, attending to her home duties, and preparing for the Christmas re-union of the family, when she was taken with a stroke on Tuesday morning. Dr. Galbraith, who lives next door, was in the home in a few minutes, Dr. Leonard was home in a short time, Dr. Connell, of Kingston, as well was summoned, but nothing that they could do could in any way restore the patient, and within twelve hours from the time she was stricken she had passed away.

With the death of Mrs. Leonard, Napanee loses a general favorite among the townsfolk and a member of one of the old loyalist families.

She was the daughter of Gilbert S. Clapp. Her father was Provincial Land Surveyor in the district and prominent in business and political circles. He died when his daughter, Fannie Clapp, was only a year and a half old. Mrs. Clapp later was married to W. V. Detlor, and with them Miss Clapp remained until her marriage in 1883 to Dr. Leonard, then a recent graduate of Queen's and practioner in Napanee.

During the past summer Dr. and Mrs. Leonard had spent their 40th wedding anniversary at Murray Bay, at the summer hotel of which Sidney Detlor is the proprietor.

To Dr. and Mrs. Leonard were born five children, of whom four survive, Mr. Will Leonard, of Toronto; Marian, Mrs. Lace, of Toronto; Hazel, Mrs. Byers, of Gananoque; and Francis, now Mrs. R. J. E. Graham, of Belleville. The children were all hastily summoned and are here for the funeral which will be held from St. Mary Magdalene Church, of which Mrs. Leonard was a member.

Besides the children there are left to survive her a brother, Sidney Detlor, and her husband, Dr. Leonard, the Postmaster of Napanee.

The sympathy of the community goes out to the family who are bereaved of a devoted mother, and particularly to Dr. Leonard, the courteous and kindly Postmaster, who will miss most the presence and affection of a beloved wife.

ANDERSON

On Sunday evening last at Anderson Church, a very enjoyable and profitable service was held by the young men of that appointment. In addition to the singing and preliminary features of the service, two very excellent addresses were given. The first address was delivered by Mr. Moore, who spoke with considerable influence on "Abraham, the Man of Faith ; and Samuel Snyder spoke forcefully and impressively on "Isaac, the Man of Peace". The church was filled to the doors with a very attentive congregation, which entered heartily into every phase of the service. Everybody are asking for more of the same kind.

NEWBURGH

Considerable excitement and concern was occasioned on Saturday afternoon, when the little four-year-old son of Percy Paul, who lives just outside the corporation, was missing from the home. After dinner Mr. Paul went to the barn to fill up some grain to take to the mill. Mrs. Paul, thinking that the child was with his father, did not give his absence any thought, and then until Mr. Paul came home from the mill was it discovered that the little lad was missing. Word was immediately sent to neighbors and soon twenty or twenty-five people were searching in all possible and impossible places. But not until after dark was any trace of him discovered. He was then found by his mother in a swamp some miles from home. With the child was the home dog, which being white, attracted the attention of Mrs. Paul, and in this way was the means through which the little lad was discovered. When found the poor child was in tears calling lustely for his daddy and mother. One can imagine the feelings of the parents when their little boy was lost, and their joy when he was found.

The High School concert held on Friday night last was a success from the standpoint of audience and programme. The hall was filled to overflowing, and the programme was varied and well rendered. Unfortunately there were a few smart guys whose conduct marred the pleasure of the occasion. These persons, old or young, are perhaps not aware that the law of the land provides penalty for such action. But such is the case, and from the indignation generally expressed we gather that some penalty by law awaits any renewal of such conduct, at any future gathering, without discrimination. We take occasion to publish this warning so that no one will get into trouble.

Mr. Swartz and the Misses Swartz rendered valuable help in the programme at the High School concert in giving both vocal and instrumental numbers. The Misses Swartz remained over the week end, renewing old acquaintances.

"LIFE EVERLASTING"

Dr. H. B. Baker, Professor of Geology at Queen's University, lectured on the above subject in the Historical Hall, on Friday, to an interested audience which completely filled the room. The subject with which the Professor was concerned is not the easiest by any means for a popular presentation. But by means of lantern slides and by avoiding technical terms as much as possible, the speaker succeeded in interesting the whole audience and imparting a mass of useful information concerning the growth and developement of life as found from the records of the rocks and the stars and the composition of the earth. The slides for the most part were from photographs of reconstructed specimens which are preserved in the great museums of Europe and America, and were the best possible evidence of the accuracy and painstaking care of the modern scientist. Whatever may be the view of the growth of life which the audience held it was impossible to escape the conviction that those who had from the past reconstructed its life and evolution had been conscientious consecrated and brilliant students and scholars.

The days in which we are living are those of change and transition. It is possible to understand the present only as we understand the past and note the movements which have been in progress through the ages. And a lecture like that which Dr. Baker delivered on Friday will do much to steady ones faith in the ultimate purpose of life, and in the gradual but consistent ascent of man. Popularizing the findings of science, bringing the results of the long years of research to the great mass of people of this generation is a tremendous but most useful function, of those who have the scientific spirit and training and who have not by it cut themselves off from "the man on the street". Dr. Baker is of this type and those who heard him will not long forget his interesting and instructive message.

ACROSTIC.

The Addington' Beaver, a nice little sheet,
Has lately been started, and looks brisk and neat;
Everyone who hasn't seen it should immediately see it.

All those who want news that's fresh, spicy and funny,
Don't fail to send for it ingclosing the money).
Devoted to literature, science and news,
Its columns are worthy your time to peruse.
Now only three months since it first showed its face,
Gaining strength every day, it is growing apace;
Then, again, 'tis so cheap, to which all must agree,
One dollar a year is its moderate fee;
Now who'd be without it ? I'm sure it's not me."

But before I conclude, just a word I would say,
Encourage The Beaver in every way,
Ask your neighbors to take it, ('tis right that they should),
Very much in this way may be done for its good.
Enjoying The Beaver exceedingly well,
Respectfully yours, I remain,

JIMUEL.

Editor Napanee Beaver :

Dear Sir,—I have just come across the above Acrostic in one of my old scrap books, and it seemed to me that it might be of interest to your present readers, since The Beaver moved from Newburgh to Napanee, and also has grown in size, circulation and influence. If I am not mistaken the editor and proprietor at that time, more than half a century ago, was a Mr. Cephas J. Beeman. Having been a student at the Newburgh Academy a short time before The Beaver was born, I, of course, felt interested in it.

I had the privilege of visiting Newburgh in October last, and again last week, visiting the old academy building, considerably changed, like the town itself, and the people too. That terrible fire made sad havoc ; very many of those who lived there then have gone away, and many lie in the cemetery, which I also visited. My good friend "Charlie" still remains, and, I see, occupies a prominent position and fills several important offices. Your readers will know that I refer to C. Welbanks, Esq., at whose home I was delightfully entertained. I met other friends, too, and so had a most enjoyable visit.

Wishing you and your staff a Merry Christmas and a Happy and Prosperous New Year, I am,

Yours faithfully,
JAMES LAWSON.

HAWLEY

Pressing and hauling hay is the order of the day.—Mr. and Mrs. G. Creighton and a number of friends made a flying trip to Kingston on Tuesday last.—Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Clark spent last week with their daughter, Mrs. G. Parks.—Once again we are preparing for a Merry Christmas. A message was received from Santa Claus, saying he began early in the year fitting his reindeers for their annual trip, so will be expected on Christmas Eve if possible. OBITUARY

Mrs. R. A. Leonard.

The news of the sudden illness and death of Mrs. (Dr.) Leonard of Napanee, came as a shock to the whole community. Mrs. Leonard had been enjoying her usual health, attending to her home duties, and preparing for the Christmas re-union of the family, when she was taken with a stroke on Tuesday morning. Dr. Galbraith, who lives next door, was in the home in a few minutes, Dr. Leonard was home in a short time, Dr. Connell, of Kingston, as well was summoned, but nothing that they could do could in any way avert the end which came in twelve hours from the time she was stricken she had passed away.

With the death of Mrs. Leonard, Napanee loses a general favorite among the townsfolk and a member of one of the old loyalist families.

She was the daughter of Gilbert S. Clapp. Her father was Provincial Land Surveyor in the district and prominent in business and political circles. She died when his daughter, Fannie Clapp, was only a year and a half old. Mrs. Clapp later was married to W. V. Detlor, and with them Miss Clapp remained until her marriage in 1883 to Dr. Leonard, then a recent graduate of Queen's and practioner in Napanee.

During the past summer Dr. and Mrs. Leonard had spent their 40th wedding anniversary at Murray Bay, at the summer hotel of which Sidney Detlor is the proprietor.

To Dr. and Mrs. Leonard were born five children, of whom four survive, Mr. Will Leonard, of Toronto; Marian, Mrs. Lace, of Toronto; Hazel, Mrs. Byers, of Gananoque; and Francis, now Mrs. R. J. E. Graham, of Belleville. The children were all hastily summoned and are here for the funeral which will be held from St. Mary Magdalene Church, of which Mrs. Leonard was a member.

Besides the children there are left to survive her a brother, Sidney Detlor, and her husband, Dr. Leonard, the Postmaster of Napanee.

The sympathy of the community goes out to the family who are bereaved of a devoted mother, and particularly to Dr. Leonard, the courteous and kindly Postmaster, who will miss most the presence and affection of a beloved wife.

ADOLPHUSTOWN

"The Balsams" was en fete last Friday evening, when Mr. and Mrs. James Dorland entertained a large number of their friends. Mrs. George Daverne won the prize for progressive euchre.—Miss Sampson, Toronto, spent the week end with Miss Hilda Mallory. — Miss Agnes Smith is spending a fortnight in Trenton.—Mrs. Mehlhoff and daughter, who have been with Mr. and Mrs. Ephraim Dorland for the past few months, returned to their home in Saskatchewan, on Monday. — Mrs. Hardy Wilson is confined with a severe attack of influenza. — Miss Hawley, Napanee, visited here last week.—Miss Wilson, Picton, is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. J. Farrell's.—Mr. W. Conger has returned home, after spending some time in Belleville, N.Y.—Mr. and Mrs. A. Doan visited friends in Belleville on Friday and Saturday last week.

ANDERSON

On Sunday evening last at Anderson Church, a very enjoyable and profitable service was held by the young men of that appointment. In addition to the singing and preliminary features of the service, two very excellent addresses were given by Arthur Moore, who spoke with considerable influence on "The Man of Faith", and Samuel Board spoke both fluently and impressively on "Jesus, the Man of Power". This was a good congregation which entered most heartily into every part of the service, and many are asking for more of the same kind.

The words "French Ivory" are greatly abused. When we offer you French Ivory, we guarantee it is just what it is. There was a good deal of French Ivory on the counters of Hooper's Drug Store last week. See the display this week.

NEWBURGH

Considerable excitement and concern was occasioned on Saturday afternoon when little Irene Paul, son of Percy Paul, who lives just outside the corporation, was missing from his home. After dinner Mr. Paul went to the barn to fill up some grain to take to the mill. Mrs. Paul, thinking that the child was with his father, did not give his absence any heed, and not until Mr. Paul came home from the mill was it discovered that the little lad was missing. Word was telephoned to the neighbors and soon twenty or twenty-five people were searching in all possible and impossible places. But not until after dark was any trace of him discovered. He was then found by his mother in a swamp some miles from home. With the child was the home dog, which being white, attracted the attention of Mrs. Paul, and in this way was the means found which led the little lad was discovered. When found "the poor child was in tears calling lustely for his dog and mother. One can imagine the feelings of the parents when their little boy was lost, and when he was found.

The High School concert held on Friday night last was a success from the standpoint of attendance and programme. The hall was filled to overflowing, and the proceeds were varied and well rendered. Unfortunately there were a few smart guys whose conduct marred the pleasure of the occasion. These persons, old or young, are perhaps not aware that the law of the land provides penalty for such action. But such is she case, and from the indignation generally expressed we gather that punishment by law awaits any renewal of such conduct, at any future gathering, without discrimination. We take occasion to publish this warning so that no one will get into trouble.

Mr. Swartz and the Misses Swartz rendered valuable help in the programme at the High School concert in giving both vocal and instrumental numbers. The Misses Swartz remained over the week end, renewing old acquaintances.

Prince of Wales Lodge, A. F. and A. M., elects officers on Wednesday night, the 19th inst., and I. O. L. 2589 installs officers on Friday (tonight).

The public are asked to remember the S. S. entertainment on the 19th, at which the Public School pupils give the programme. Admission 25c.

The Young Men's Bible Class of Union S. S. will give a return entertainment to the Young Ladies' Class on Friday (to-night). A fine display of white aprons is expected.

TOWN COUNCIL

A special meeting of the Council was held in the Council Chamber on Tuesday night.

On motion of Coun. Perry, seconded by Coun. Tustin, the proposed grant to the Bay Bay ferry of $100.00 was ordered to be paid. This sum was granted at the beginning of the season on condition that the ferry maintained a good service, which was vouched for by Coun. Perry.

THE WARDEN'S BANQUET

On Friday evening, at the Campbell House, Warden J. S. Johnson, of Adolphustown, entertained the members of the County Council, the County Officials, and a large number of friends, at the annual Warden's banquet. Mr. Bert Wallace, proprietor of the Campbell House, prepared a splendid repast which was thoroughly enjoyed by all present.

Following the supper, Mr. W. G. Wilson, the veteran County Clerk, acted as toast-master, and the usual toasts were given and some splendid short addresses were given by the various speakers in answer to the toasts.

Mr. Johnson, in welcoming his guests, expressed his thanks to the assembly for their appreciation of his invitation. He also expressed his pleasure in representing the U. E. L. Township of Adolphustown, and the pleasure it gave him to have been honoured in being chosen Warden of the County. Mr. Johnson expressed the hope that each and all of his guests had enjoyed the supper and would further enjoy the programme prepared for their entertainment.

Following is the toast list:—

The Army and Navy—Responded to by Mr. Frank Bell and Mr. Frank Ford.

Our Legislators—Responded to by Mr. E. J. Sexsmith, M.P., and Mr. C. W. Hambly, M.L.A., Mayor Newman, Picton, Mr. O'Brien, and Mr. A. B. Carscallen, Tamworth.

The County Council—Responded to by Ex-Wardens J. E. Harrison, Newburgh, and Johnston Hannah, Camden.

Learned Professions—Responded to by Rev. A. J. Terrill and J. M. Simpson.

The Ladies—Responded to by Mr. Fred. A. Perry.

All the speakers congratulated Warden Johnston on the excellent banquet provided and their keen appreciation of Mr. Johnson's kindness, also congratulating the County on having as Warden a gentleman with more than an average amount of common sense, who has filled the position with honor to the County and credit to himself.

During the banquet and while the guests were assembling, Black's Orchestra furnished excellent music which was highly appreciated by the assembled guests.

The musical part of the after-dinner programme was in charge of a quartette composed of Messrs. F. Lasalle, F. W. Barrett, R. Seymour and W. J. Shannon. All theirs numbers were well rendered and freely applauded. The quartette also led the community singing.

"LIFE EVERLASTING"

Dr. M. B. Baker, Professor of Geology at Queen's University, lectured on the above subject in the Historical Hall, on Friday, to an interested audience which completely filled the room. The subject with which the Professor was concerned is not the easiest by any means for a popular presentation. But by means of lantern slides and by avoiding technical terms as much as possible, the speaker succeeded in interesting the whole audience and imparting a mass of useful information concerning the growth and development of life as gleaned from the records of the rocks and the stars and the composition of the earth. The slides for the most part were from photographs of reconstructed specimens which are preserved in the great museums of Europe and America, and were the best possible evidence of the accuracy and painstaking care of the modern scientist. Whatever may be the view of the growth of life which the audience held it was impossible to escape the conviction that those who had from the past reconstructed its life and evolution had been conscientious and brilliant students and scholars.

The days in which we are living are those of change and transition. It is possible to understand the present only as we understand the past and note the movements which have been in progress through the ages. And a lecture like that which Dr. Baker delivered on Friday will do much to steady ones faith in the ultimate purpose of life, and in the gradual but consistent ascent of man. Popularizing the findings of science, bringing the results of the long years of research to the great mass of people of this generation is a tremendous but most useful function, of those who have the scientific spirit and training and who have not by it cut themselves off from "the man on the street". Dr. Baker is of this type and those who heard him will not long forget his interesting and instructive message.

ACROSTIC.

The Addington Beaver, a nice little sheet,
Has lately been started, and looks brisk and neat;
Everyone who hasn't seen it should immediately see it,

All those who want news that's fresh, spicy and funny,
Don't fail to send for it (neglecting the money).
Devoted to literature, science and news,
Its columns are worthy your time to peruse.

Now only three months since it first showed its face,
Gaining strength every day, it is growing apace;
Then, again, 'tis so cheap, to which all must agree,
One dollar a year is its moderate fee;
Now who'd be without it? I'm sure it's not me.'

But before I conclude, just a word I would say,
Encourage The Beaver in every way,
Ask your neighbors to take it, ('tis right that they should),
Very much is this way may be done for its good.
Enjoying The Beaver exceedingly well,
Respectfully yours, I remain,

JIMUEL.

Editor Napanee Beaver:

Dear Sir,—I have just come across the above Acrostic in one of my old scrap books, and it seemed to me that it might be of interest to your present readers, since The Beaver moved from Newburgh to Napanee, and also has grown in size, circulation and influence. If I am not mistaken the editor and proprietor at that time, more than half a century ago, was a Mr. Cephas L. Beeman. Having been a student at the Newburgh Academy a short time before The Beaver was born, I, of course, felt interested in it.

I had the privilege of visiting Newburgh in October last, and again last week, visiting the old academy building, considerably changed, like the town itself, and the people too. That terrible fire made sad havoc; very many of those who lived there then have gone away, and many lie in the cemetery, which I also visited. My good friend "Charlie" still remains, and, I see, occupies a prominent position and fills several important offices. Your readers will know that I refer to C. Welbanks, Esq., at whose home I was delightfully entertained. I met other friends, too, and so had a most enjoyable visit.

Wishing you and your staff a Merry Christmas and a Happy and Prosperous New Year, I am,

Yours faithfully,
JAMES LAWSON.

HAWLEY

Pressing and hauling hay is the order of the day.—Mr. and Mrs. G. Creighton and a number of friends made a flying trip to Kingston on Tuesday last.—Mr. and Mrs. M. L. OBITUARY

Mrs. E. A. Leonard.

The news of the sudden illness and death of Mrs. (Dr.) Leonard of Moscow, came as a shock to the whole community. Mrs. Leonard had been enjoying her usual health, attending to her home duties, and preparing for the Christmas re-union of the family, when she was taken with a stroke on Tuesday morning. Dr. Galbraith, who lives next door, was in the home in a few minutes, Dr. Leonard was home in a short time, Dr. Connell, of Kingston, as well was summoned, but nothing that they could do could in any way revive the patient, and within twelve hours from the time she was stricken she had passed away.

With the death of Mrs. Leonard, Napanee loses a general favorite among the townsfolk and a member of one of the old loyalist families. She was the daughter of Gilbert S. Clapp. Her father was Provincial Land Surveyor in the district and prominent in business and political circles. He died when his daughter, Fannie Clapp, was only a year and a half old. Mrs. Clapp later was married to W. V. Detlor, and with them Miss Clapp remained until her marriage in 1883 to Dr. Leonard, then a recent graduate of Queen's and practioner in Napanee.

During the past summer Dr. and Mrs. Leonard had spent their 40th wedding anniversary at Murray Bay, at the summer hotel of which Sidney Detlor is the proprietor.

To Dr. and Mrs. Leonard were born five children, of whom four survive, Mr. Will Leonard, of Toronto; Marian, Mrs. Lace, of Toronto; Hazel, Mrs. Byers, of Gananoque; and Francis, now Mrs. R. J. E. Graham, of Belleville. The children were all happily gathered and are here for the funeral which will be held from St. Mary Magdalene Church, of which Mrs. Leonard was a member.

Besides the children there are left to survive her a brother, Sidney Detlor, and her husband, Dr. Leonard, the Postmaster of Napanee.

The sympathy of the community goes out to the family who are bereaved of a devoted mother, and particularly to Dr. Leonard, the courteous and kindly Postmaster, who will miss most the presence and affection of a beloved wife.

ANDERSON

On Sunday evening last at Anderson Church a very enjoyable and profitable service was held by the young men of that appointment. In addition to the ordinary preliminary features of the service, two very excellent addresses were given by Arthur Moore, who spoke with considerable influence on "Abraham, the Man of Faith", and Harold Sparks on "Jesus", fluently and impressively on "Jesus, the Man of Peace". There was a good congregation, which enjoyed and heartily into every phase of the service, and many are asking for more of the same kind.

NEWBURGH

Considerable excitement and concern was occasioned on Saturday afternoon, when the little four-year-old son of Percival Hall, who lives just outside the corporation, was missing from his home. After dinner Mrs. Paul went to the barn to fill up some grain to take to the mill. Mrs. Paul, thinking that the child was with his father, did not give his absence any thought, and just until Mr. Paul came home from the mill was it discovered that the little lad was missing. Word was telephoned to the neighbors and soon twenty or twenty-five people were searching in all possible and impossible places. But not until after dark was any trace of him discovered. He was then found by his mother in a swamp some miles from home. With the child was the home dog, which being white, attracted the attention of Mrs. Paul, and in this way was the means through which the little lad was discovered. When found the poor child was in tears calling lustely for his daddy and mother. One can imagine that the feelings of the parents when their little boy was lost, and their joy when he was found.

The High School concert held on Friday night last was a success from the standpoint of attendance and programme. The hall was filled to overflowing, and the programme was varied and well rendered. Unfortunately there were a few smart guys whose conduct marred the pleasure of the occasion. These persons, old or young, are perhaps not aware that the law of the land provides penalty for such action. But such is the case, and from the indignation generally expressed we gather that punishment by law awaits any renewal of such conduct, at any future gathering, without discrimination. We take occasion to publish this warning so that no one will get into trouble.

Mr. Swartz and the Misses Swartz rendered valuable help in the programme at the High School concert in giving both vocal and instrumental numbers. The Misses Swartz remained over the week end, renewing old acquaintances.

Prince of Wales Lodge, A. F. and A. M., elects officers on Wednesday night, the 19th inst., and L. O. L. 2583 installs officers on Friday (tonight).

The Young Men's Bible Class of Union S. S. will give a return entertainment to the Young Ladies' Class, on Friday (to-night). A fine display of white aprons is expected.

The members present were Councillors Burgess, Huffman, Paul, Perry and Tustin.

Mayor MacGregor presided.

Coun. Tustin, Chairman of Streets, reported that he had contracted for twenty evergreen trees with which to decorate Dundas Street for the Yuletide. The contract price was $6.00 delivered.

A By-law was passed, signed and sealed by the Mayor, to raise the sum of $7000.00 to meet the cost of constructing sidewalks and sewers in the town as local improvements.

On motion of Coun. Perry, seconded by Coun. Tustin, the proposed grant to the Hay Bay ferry of $100.00 was ordered to be paid. This sum was granted at the beginning of the season on condition that the ferry maintained a good service, which was vouched for by Coun. Perry.

J. S. JOHNSON,
Warden.

THE WARDEN'S BANQUET

On Friday evening, at the Campbell House, Warden J. S. Johnson, Adolphustown, entertained the members of the County Council, the County Officials, and a large number of friends, at the annual Warden's banquet. Mr. Bert Wallace, proprietor of the Campbell House, prepared a splendid repast which was thoroughly enjoyed by all present.

Following the supper, Mr. W. G. Wilson, the veteran County Clerk, acted as toast-master, and the usual toasts were given and some splendid short addresses were given by the various speakers in answer to the toasts.

Mr. Johnson, in welcoming his guests, expressed his thanks to the assembly for their appreciation of his invitation. He also expressed his pleasure in representing the U. E. L. Township of Adolphustown, and the pleasure it gave him to have been honoured in being chosen Warden of the County. Mr. Johnson expressed the hope that each and all of his guests had enjoyed the supper and that, further, they had a programme prepared for their entertainment.

Following is the toast list :—

The Army and Navy—Responded to by Mr. Frank Bell and Mr. Frank Ford.

Our Legislators—Responded to by Mr. E. J. Sexsmith, M.P., and Mr. C. W. Hambly, M.L.A., Mayor Newman, Picton, Mr. O'Brien, and Mr. A. B. Carscallen, Tamworth.

The County Council—Responded to by Ex-Wardens J. E. Harrison, Newburgh, and Johnston Hannah, Camden.

Learned Professions—Responded to by Rev. A. J. Terrill and J. M. Simpson.

The Ladies—Responded to by Mr. Fred. A. Perry.

All the speakers congratulated Warden Johnston on the excellent banquet provided and their keen appreciation of Mr. Johnson's kindness, also congratulating the County on having as Warden a gentleman with more than an average amount of common sense, who has filled the position with honor to the County and credit to himself.

During the banquet and while the guests were assembling, Black's Orchestra furnished excellent music, which was highly appreciated by the assembled guests.

The musical part of the after-dinner programme was in charge of a quartette composed of Messrs. F. LaSalle, F. W. Barrett, B. Seymour and W. J. Shannon. All theirs numbers were well rendered and freely applauded. The quartette also led the community singing.

"LIFE EVERLASTING"

Dr. H. H. Baker, Professor of Geology at Queen's University, lectured on the above subject in the Historical Hall, on Friday, to an interested audience which completely filled the room. The subject with which the Professor was entrusted is not the easiest by any means for a popular presentation. But by means of lantern slides and by avoiding technical terms as much as possible, the speaker succeeded in interesting the whole audience and imparting a mass of useful information concerning the growth and development of life as gleaned from the records of the rocks and the stars and the composition of the earth. The slides for the most part were from photographs of reconstructed specimens which are preserved in the great museums of Europe and America, and were the best possible evidence of the accuracy and painstaking care of the modern scientist. Whatever may be the view of the growth of life which the audience held it was impossible to escape the conviction that those who had from the past strengthened its faith and evolution had been conscientious and consecrated and brilliant students and scholars.

The days in which we are living are those of change and transition. It is possible to understand the present only as we understand the past and note the movements which have been in progress through the ages. And a picture like that which Dr. Baker delivered on Friday will do much to steady ones faith in the ultimate purpose of life, and in the grand but consistent ascent of man. Popularizing the findings of science, bringing the results of the long years of research to the great mass of people of this generation is a tremendous but most useful function, of those who have the scientific spirit and training and who have not by it cut themselves off from "the man on the street". Dr. Baker is of this type and those who heard him will not long forget his interesting and instructive message.

ACROSTIC.

The Addington Beaver, a nice little sheet,
Has lately been started, and looks brisk and neat;
Everyone who hasn't seen it should immediately see it.

All those who want news that's fresh, spicy and funny,
Don't fail to send for it (neglecting the money).
Devoted to literature, science and news,
Its columns are worthy your time to peruse.
Now only three months since it first showed its face,
Gaining strength every day, it is growing apace ;
Then, again, 'tis so cheap, to which all must assent agree,
One dollar a year is its moderate fee ;
Now who'd be without it ? I'm sure it's not me.

But before I conclude, just a word I would say,
Encourage The Beaver in every way,
Get your neighbors to take it, ('tis right that they should),
Very much in this way may be done for its good.
Enjoying The Beaver exceedingly
Respectfully yours, I remain.

JIMUEL.

Editor Napanee Beaver :

Dear Sir,—I have just come across the above Acrostic in one of my old scrap books, and it seemed to me that it might be of interest to your present readers, since The Beaver moved from Newburgh to Napanee, and also has grown in size, circulation and influence. If I am not mistaken the editor and proprietor at that time, more than half a century ago, was a Mr. Cephas L. Beeman. Having been a student at the Newburgh Academy a short time before The Beaver was born, I, of course, felt interested in it.

I had the privilege of visiting Newburgh in October last, and again last week, visiting the old academy building, considerably changed, like the town itself, and the people too. That terrible fire made sad havoc ; very many of those who lived there have gone away, and many lie in the cemetery, which I also visited. My good friend "Charlie" still remains, and, I see, occupies a prominent position and fills several important offices. Your readers will know that I refer to C. Wellanks, Esq., at whose home I was delightfully entertained. I met other friends, too, and so had a most enjoyable visit.

Wishing you and your staff a Merry Christmas and a Happy and Prosperous New Year, I am,

Yours faithfully,
JAMES LAWSON.

THREE CHILDREN BURNED TO DEATH AT ERINSVILLE

Sad Fatality Happened While Parents Were Absent From Home.

On Friday afternoon shortly after three o'clock a fatality which has cast a shadow over the entire Erinsville district happened at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Brills, when fire completely destroyed their residence and blotted out the lives of their three children aged respectively four, three and one year. How the fire originated will probably be never known, as Mr. Brills was in the woods cutting wood and Mrs. Brills had left the children in the house to go to a nearby pump for water. When she returned the house was in flames and though she heroically burst in the door in an attempt to save her little ones the flames and smoke drove her back and she was forced to stand by while the precious little lives were smothered in the flames. Neighbors who answered her frantic cries were also unable to save anything.

The sad occurrence has brought forth a wave of sympathy for Mr. and Mrs. Brills, whose happy family circle has been broken, and who have been left childless as well as homeless.

Address and Presentation

A number of friends and neighbours gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edlie Smith, on Monday evening, Dec. 3rd, to spend an enjoyable evening.

Before the dainty refreshments brought by the ladies were served, Mr. and Mrs. Smith were called to the centre of the gathering, and the following address was read:—

Mount Pleasant,
Dec. 3rd, 1922.

Mr. and Mrs. Edlie Smith.

Dear Friends,—We are aware of the fact that in this world we may constantly look for and expect changes. But even so, we sincerely regret the changes which take from our church and neighborhood persons who have been interested in them, and not afraid to go ahead and do something for the welfare and good of the community. However our memories will be enriched by our friendship with you, and we shall miss you both, and your two girls, Wilda and Truby. We shall follow you with great interest, and pray for your health and prosperity and success in future years.

In token of our esteem and love to you, we, your friends, ask you to kindly accept this tea set, and may it ever remind you in years to come that you have left behind you warm and sincere friends.

"Though we sunder part,
It gives us inward pain,
But we shall still be joined in heart
And hope to meet again."

Signed on behalf of your friends,
Margaret Howie,
Mrs. Walter Cole,
Rev. T. H. P. Anderson.

Also at the same time, Mr. and Mrs. Desmore Davis, Napanee, presented Mr. and Mrs. Smith with a set of blue and white enamelled cooking utensils.

Mr. Smith, in a few words, expressed for Mrs. Smith and family their deep appreciation of the kindness of the friends and neighbours.

FATTENING SURPLUS COCKERELS

(Experimental Farms Note.)

Considerable advice has been given on how to fatten the surplus stock on the poultry plant, and by this time a good deal of the early cockerels have been marketed, but there are always a few of the later ones left, and it is more or less of a problem to know just what to do with them.

As a rule these cockerels are not only later, but they are neither as well developed nor as strong and vigorous as the early birds. Neither are they suitable for the Christmas trade, so the best thing to do with them now is to get them ready for January's market. It does not pay to carry even late hatched cockerels into the winter for it is better to get rid of them before they crowd the pullets in their winter quarters. Put these birds in a well ventilated pen by themselves, and give a mash feed three times a day. Any good mixture of home grown grains mixed with skim milk or buttermilk will be satisfactory.

In crate feeding two mistakes are often made. Birds are fed too heavily the first few days, and losing their appetite, go down on their legs, die, or are killed by the other birds. In bringing the cockerels in off range where they have plenty of exercise, and confining them in the small space of a feeding crate, care must be taken for the first few days not to give them nearly as much as they want. Keep them hungry, gradually increasing the feed until about the fourth day when they may get their full ration twice a day. Epsom salts in the first feed helps (one pound to 100 birds). The second common fault is that the birds are put into the crates without being treated for lice, and as a consequence some birds will never put on flesh. Use a good louse powder as the birds are put into the crate, and again several days before they are killed and sprinkle well into the feathers. Dry sulphur also serves the purpose.

In feeding birds that are not really vigorous nor uniform in size and constitution, it is well to weigh the sizes and match the individual birds carefully so that those carrying all the fattening they can stand may be taken out and killed. Some cannot go through more than a few short days of crate feeding, while others make good gains for five or six weeks. With late birds especially this difference is always more marked.

Some birds will not fatten and will never be fit for the market. Don't try to market these, it simply brings down the price of the better fowl. It is more profitable to make soup of them. Higher prices and a greater return would be received if nothing but properly fitted birds were put on the market, and if these were distributed throughout as many months of the year as possible. It is the finishing touch that pays.

HORSEHAIR SNAKES.

Positive Proof of Bogboot's Belief Not Forthcoming.

Of course horsehairs can be turned into snakes.

So states a letter in the Atlantic Monthly in which Mrs. L. Emilie Pearsall disagrees with a contributor to the magazine who pooh-poohed the theory, and rushes to the rescue of Shakespeare, who raised the point some time previously.

He (the magazine writer alluded to above) says he cannot believe Shakespeare when he says that horsehair, imbedded in mud, would develop into worms or snakes as we used to call them, writes Mrs. Pearsall—and as Shakespeare is not here to defend himself I would like to say a few words for his vindication—inasmuch as I have had some experiences with horsehair snakes myself.

When I was a child we lived in the country (about 25 miles from New York), and we had an old watering trough, made from a hollowed-out log, where our horses were always watered, and quite often my brothers used to bring in a hair snake found in this trough. The trough was set on a slant; the horses always drinking from the lower end, while the upper had always in it some green slime.

One day I pulled out a lot of hairs and imbedded them in the slimy end of the trough. I remember hearing one of my brothers say one day, "What are all these horsehairs doing in here?" And another one said, "Oh, Emilie is trying to raise snakes."

The first said, "I have a notion to throw them out," but the other said, "No; let them alone and let her see what she can do." And in a couple or more weeks after putting them in my mother called me one day and told me I had a couple of snakes down.

That was a great many years ago, but I can still see those snakes as they curled about my fingers and as they opened wide their mouths—how long they lived or anything else about them I cannot tell—but I that old trough was still in existence I would like to prove to some of our modern scientists that there is such a thing as live snakes developed from horses' hair.

Shakespeare was right.

A Future Minister.

A remarkable travel record has been made by a seventeen-year-old Chicago boy, Ernest Watts, who has travelled from Chicago to London for the sum of 4c.

Starting on June 22 he managed to get like in private cars from Chicago which took him to Fort Wayne. There he spent the night in the Y.M.C.A. Next day, still using the same means of travel, he reached Akron, Ohio. Here he found the Y.M.C.A. closed and was lodged for the night in jail.

"I went and asked at the jail if I could sleep there and they said 'sure!' and put me in a cell, but forgot to give me a bed. It was an all night in jail, and I'll see it is my last," he said. "It was terrible."

On the third day he reached Pittsburg, where he was lodged at an hotel, an episcopal minister paying the expenses, and on the fourth day he reached his sister's home at Gettysburg, Philadelphia, after travelling 1,100 miles in four days without an expense to him.

Not satisfied with this record, he worked his passage as a deck boy across the Atlantic in the Princess Wilhelmina, Inner London Quay, and, landing at Greenhithe, reached his uncle's home at Chigwell Row, Essex, after 14 days' travel.

Ernest Watts intends to go into the ministry after he leaves school.

Some Bet Hours o' Sunshine.

"I reckon none on hours o' sunshine?"

A famous sundial bears this inscription.

So to that sundial there are no hours but those of sunshine.

All other hours, the cloudy ones, the rainy, the stormy, pass right over it unnoticed, "unregistered," so to speak. As far as the sundial is concerned, they never existed.

And why shouldn't we humans be like that sundial? Some of us, a too few of us, are.

It was intended that we should dwell only on the good in the things that are present. That would be the natural way. And it is those of us who do not have this happy faculty, those of us who co-relate every little bit of disappointment or setback or unpleasantness, and record it in black letters on our dispositions and our features who are lonehorsed and on the wrong track.

Lives 20 Years on Wine Diet.

A man fifty-seven years old, who has lived for thirty years on alcoholic drink instead of the customary rice diet, has offered his body when he dies to the China Medical College. He believes that the result of a post-mortem examination will be a revelation to the medical world.

The man says that he started to drink when he was nineteen years old, and when he was in his early twenties he consumed a gallon and a half of rice wine every day. Latterly he has contented himself with a little less than a gallon each day. He says he never was ill but has a strong constitution and weighs 170 pounds.

The Burrowing Owl.

The burrowing owl is a small owl which burrows in the ground in many parts of North and South America. It is about 10 inches long, greyish-brown, profusely spotted with white, with the head smooth, without plumicorns. This is the owl well known on the Western prairies in connection with the prairie dogs, in the deserted burrows of which it makes its nest. These owls are diurnal, and feed upon insects and small mammals and reptiles.

On Friday afternoon shortly after three o'clock a fatality which has cast a shadow over the entire Erinsville district happened at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Brills, when fire completely destroyed their residence and blotted out the lives of their three children aged respectively four, three and one year. How the fire originated will probably be never known, as Mr. Brills was in the woods cutting wood and Mrs. Brills left the children in the house to go to a nearby pump for water. When she returned the house was in flames and though she heroically burst in the door in an attempt to save the little ones the flames and smoke drove her back and she was forced to stand by while the precious little lives were smothered in the flames. Neighbors who answered her frantic cries were also unable to save anything.

The sad occurrence has brought forth a wave of sympathy for Mr. and Mrs. Brills, whose happy family circle has been broken, and who have been left childless as well as homeless.

Address and Presentation

A number of friends and neighbours gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edie Smith, on Monday evening, Dec. 3rd, to spend an enjoyable evening.

Before the dainty refreshments brought by the ladies were served, Mr. and Mrs. Smith were called to the centre of the gathering, and the following address was read :—

Mount Pleasant,
Dec. 3rd, 1923.

Mr. and Mrs. Edie Smith.

Dear Friends,—We are aware of the fact that in this world we may constantly look for and expect changes. But even so, we sincerely regret the changes which take from our church and neighborhood persons who have been interested in them, and not afraid to go ahead and do something for the welfare and good of the community. However our memories will be enriched by our friendship with you, and we shall miss you both, and your two girls, Willa and Theresa. We shall follow you with great interest, and pray for your health and prosperity and success in future years.

In token of our esteem and love to you, we, your friends, ask you to kindly accept this tea set, and may it ever remind you in your home to such that you have left behind you warm and sincere friends.

"Though we asunder part,
It gives us inward pain,
But we shall still be joined in heart
And hope to meet again."

Signed on behalf of your friends,
Margaret Howie,
Mrs. Walter Cole.
Rev. T. H. P. Anderson.

Also at the same time, Mr. and Mrs. Deamore Davis, Napanee, presented Mr. and Mrs. Smith with a set of blue and white enamelled cooking utensils.

Mr. Smith, in a few words, expressed for Mrs. Smith and family their deep appreciation of the kindness of the friends and neighbours.

FATTENING SURPLUS COCKERELS

(Experimental Farms Note.)

Considerable advice has been given on how to fatten the surplus stock on the poultry plant, and by this time a good deal of the early cockerels have been marketed, but there are always a few of the later ones left, and it is more or less of a problem to know just what to do with them.

As a rule these cockerels are not only later, but they are neither as well developed nor as strong and vigorous as the early birds. Neither are they suitable for the Christmas trade, so the best thing to do with them now is to get them ready for January's market. It does not pay to carry even late hatched cockerels into the winter for it is better to get rid of them before they crowd the pullets in their winter quarters. Put these birds in a well ventilated pen by themselves, and give a mash feed three times a day. Any good mixture of home grown grains mixed with skim milk or buttermilk will be satisfactory.

In crate feeding two mistakes are often made. Birds are fed too heavily the first few days, and losing their appetite, go down on their legs, die, or are killed by the other birds. In bringing the cockerels in off range where they have plenty of exercise, and confining them in the small space of a feeding crate, care must be taken for the first few days not to give them nearly as much as they want. Keep them hungry, gradually increasing the feed until about the fourth day when they may get their full ration twice a day. Epsom salts in the first feed helps (one pound to 100 birds). The second common fault is that the birds are put into the crates without being treated for lice, and as a consequence some birds will never put on flesh. Use a good louse powder as the birds are put into the crate, and again several days before they are killed and sprinkle well into the feathers. Dry sulphur also serves the purpose.

In feeding birds that are not really vigorous nor uniform in size and constitution, it is well to separate the sizes and match the individual birds carefully so that those carrying all the fattening they can stand may be taken out and killed. Some cannot go through more than a week or ten days of crate feeding, while others make good gains for five or six weeks. With late birds especially this difference is always more marked.

Some birds will not fatten and will never be fit for the market. Don't try to market these, it simply brings down the price of the better fowl. It is more profitable to make soup of them. Higher prices and a greater return would be received if nothing but properly fitted birds were put on the market, and if these were distributed throughout as many months of the year as possible. It is the finishing touch that pays.

HORSERADISH SNAKES.

Positive Proof of Bogboad's Belief Not Forthcoming.

Of course horseradish can be turned into snakes.

So states a letter in the Atlantic Monthly in which Mrs. L. Emilie Pearsall disagrees with a contributor to the magazine who pooh-poohed the theory, and rushes to the rescue of Shakespeare, who raised the point some time previously.

He (the magazine writer alluded to above) says he cannot believe Shakespeare when he says that horsehair, imbedded in mud, would develop into worms or snakes as we used to call them, writes Mrs. Pearsall—and as Shakespeare is not here to defend himself I would like to say a few words for his vindication—inasmuch as I have had some experience with horsehair snakes myself.

When I was a child we lived in the country (about 25 miles from New York), and we had an old watering trough, made from a hollowed-out log, where our horses were always watered, and quite often my brothers used to bring in a hair snake found in this trough. The trough was set on a slant; the horses always drinking from the lower end, while the upper had always in it some green slime.

One day I pulled out a lot of hairs and imbedded them in the slimy end of the trough. I remember hearing one of my brothers say one day, "What are all these horsehairs doing in here?" And another one said, "Oh, Emilie's trying to raise snakes."

The first said, "I have a notion to throw them out," but the other said, "No, let them alone and let her see what she can do." And in a couple of hours we could see quite a few in by mother called me one day and told me I had a couple of snakes there.

That was a great many years ago, but I can still see those snakes as they curled about my fingers and as they opened wide their mouths—how long they lived or anything more about them I cannot tell—but that old trough was still in existence I would like to prove to some of our modern scientists that there is such a thing as live snakes developed from horsehair.

Shakespeare was right.

A Future Minister.

A remarkable travel record has been made by a seventeen-year-old Chicago boy, Ernest Watts, who has travelled from Chicago to London for the sum of 45.

Starting on June 22 he managed to get lifts in private cars from Chicago which took him to Fort Wayne. There he spent the night in the Y.M.C.A. Next day, still using the same means of travel, he reached Akron, Ohio. Here he found the Y.M.C.A. closed and was lodged for the night in jail.

"I went and asked at the jail if I could sleep there and they said 'sure!' and put me in a cell, but forgot to give me a bed. It was my first night in jail, and I'll see it is my last," he said. "It was terrible."

On the third day he reached Pittsburg, where he was lodged at an hotel, an episcopal minister paying his expenses, and on the fourth day he reached his sister's home at Gettysburg, Philadelphia, after travelling 1,100 miles in four days and no expense to himself.

Not satisfied with this record, he worked his passage as a deck boy across the Atlantic in the Princess Wilky liner London Corporation, and, landing at Greenhithe, reached his uncle's home at Chiswell Road, Essex, after 14 days' travel.

Ernest Watts intends to go into the ministry after he leaves school.

None But Hours of Sunshine.

"I record none on hours of sunshine."

A famous sundial bears this inscription.

So to that sundial there are no hours but those of sunshine.

All other hours, the cloudy ones, the rainy, the stormy, pass right over it unnoticed, "unrecorded," so to speak. As far as the sundial is concerned, they never existed.

And why shouldn't we humans be like that sundial? Some of us are too few of us, are.

It was intended that we should dwell only on the good in the things that are present. That would be the natural way. And it is those of us who do not have this happy inertia, those of us who go restlessly over little bit of disappointment or setback or unpleasantness, and record it in black letters on our disposition and our features who are inherently and on the wrong track.

Lives 30 Years on Wine Diet.

A man fifty-seven years old, who has lived for thirty years on cocoa-cle drink instead of the customary rice diet, has offered his body when he dies to the China Medical College. He believes that the result of a post-mortem examination will be a revelation to the medical world.

The man says that he started to drink wine when he was nineteen years old, and when he was in his early twenties he consumed a gallon and a half of rice wine every day. Latterly he has contented himself with a little less than a gallon each day. He says he never eats rice, but has a strong constitution and weighs 170 pounds.

The Burrowing Owl.

The burrowing owl is a small owl which burrows in the ground in many parts of North and South America. It is about 10 inches long, greyish-brown, profusely spotted with white, with the head smooth, without plumerns. This is the owl, well known on the Western prairies in connection with the prairie dogs, in the deserted burrows of which it makes its nest. These owls are diurnal, and feed upon insects and small mammals and reptiles.

Wild Horses Live Longer.

In a wild state a horse lives to be thirty-five or forty years old, while the domestic horse is as a rule old at twenty-five.

YARKER

(For last week).

The weather continues very mild with considerable rain, which keeps the roads in bad condition.—The Yarker people had another scare on Monday night when the alarms was given. The Benjamin wheel factory was on fire. Although it had very little damage owing to the fact it originated in the west end it retired before it had gained much headway, or it would have been a serious fire. The factory being a partial rear a number of other frame buildings would perhaps cause a heavy loss to the Village of Yarker if it ever burns. The young people intend holding a Xmas Tree about Xmas Eve.—The I. O. O. F. held a dance and supper in the Benjamin Hall Wednesday night and were a large crowd. Will Storms is home from Rochester to visit his family, and will stay for a short time owing to his daughter, Mrs. Bolton, being on the sick list.—A. D. Leonard and S. Hart went the week end in Ottawa on business.—Jack Winters is home from the West to visit his parents.—Mrs. H. Ferrier motored to Napanee on Wednesday, where she took the train for Inwood to visit her parents for a short time.—We notice a good many vacant houses in the village owing to a good many of our residents moving to the United States, where the times are better than here.—Miss Toner, of Strathcona, visited with Miss Hazel Hart for a day or two.—Mr. F. Snider has moved in the Richardson house now owned by Mr. Foster.—Mrs. R. Delby at Peterboro', visiting her parents.—Mrs. Benjamin has closed up her house and gone to Montreal to spend the winter months.

Perhaps You Need a Tonic

A tonic is necessary in all run-down conditions, after colds, fevers and illnesses of all kinds. When a person is anaemic, undernourished, nervous, tired, listless, he needs a tonic. If you can't sleep, have no appetite, feel miserable and depressed, a tonic will fix you. The tonic best suited for general use is Carnol. It can be given with perfect safety to a delicate child, a convalescent, or to an aged person. It is made from the prescription of an eminent physician. Hundreds of doctors prescribe Carnol in their practice. Here's what Mr. Davis says about Carnol:

"We have sold Carnol for two years. During those two years we have seen many other so-called tonics tried out, but they did not repeat and people did not advise their friends to buy them. Carnol has been bought by people who used it before. It has been recommended by people to their friends and has enjoyed a good sale. We believe that it has the ingredients that go to make up one of the very best nerve and body builders ever put before the public."—Davis the Druggist, Columbia and 6th Sts., New Westminster, B.C. 11-9

Carnol is sold by all good druggists everywhere.

OF THUGS OF INDIA ONLY NAME SURVIVES.

Thug, a word of universal acceptance wherever English is spoken, came into the language from India in Victorian days, as is noted by W. G. Tinkom-Fernandez, in the New York Times. It was derived from the Hindu word, "thag", meaning a cheat, but came to have a more sinister significance from the practices of Hindus and Mohammedans who were proud to bear the name and who adopted as their goddess the bloodthirsty Kali, whose shrine at Kalighat gave its name to Calcutta. The Thugs were in existence since mediaeval times and the various princes seemed powerless to suppress them. It was not until Lord William Bentick, the Viceroy, appointed Colonel Sleeman to devote himself to their extermination almost a century ago, that they were successfully grappled with. The success of Sleeman is one of the most noteworthy in police and military annals. The Thugs numbered perhaps hundreds of thousands when he went to work, and before he had finished thousands had been hanged or deported to the Andaman Islands and the others had retired from business. There are criminals in India to-day, men who hold life cheap, but the old religious order of Thugs has completely disappeared.

A Religious Order.

The organization was a remarkable one, for in caste-ridden India it was the only society where men of different religions and castes met on terms of equality. It was a real brotherhood. Its members probably thought that by offering human sacrifices to the goddess Kali they were establishing a credit account in Paradise, but their murders were not committed for this purpose. They were committed for material gain. There were no murders without robbery. There were no murders of revenge, so far as the records show, and if one Thug were to murder another he would be expelled from the order. Thugs could not be hired to commit murder, nor did they commit murder without religious ceremonies. Murder and robbery were not their sole occupations. When they were not engaged in these practices they were model citizens, filling the land, observing all laws and setting an example to their neighbors. Apart from the great princes they paid more taxes than any other element in the community because they were wealthier, and they did not seek to conceal their wealth nor were they ashamed to acknowledge how it had been acquired.

A Hereditary Craft.

The craft of Thugee was hereditary, and had its secret ritual as well as a sort of slang which made it possible for Thugs speaking different languages to communicate with each other on matters decided for the good of the order. There were several degrees in the organization. One initiated the young Thug, being a scout bringing news of likely victims. After that he became a grave digger, for the Thugs always buried their victims, after mutilating them so that their identity might be concealed. The third grade was composed of the shumsia, or men whose business it was to hold the hands and feet of the victims while they were being done to death. The "pankurti" was the strangler, or strangler. The Thugs had a particular way of killing their victims. They were forbidden the shedding of blood, in a literal sense; therefore there were no clubbings or stabbings. They operated with a noose. It was often a rope with iron balls at each end. This would be hurled at the victim, and the balls would wrap it round his throat so that he would be strangled in a minute. Often the murder would be committed by a short lariat, or by a thin strip of lion cloth.

Missing Men.

But Europeans were never attacked, because they wore pistols, carried little money on journeys, and, what is significant, their disappearance would arouse the Government. But the British became interested when Indian officers and soldiers on leave from their regiments failed to return. In 1831 a gang was caught red-handed, and proved the existence of Thugee. The Viceroy began a campaign for their extermination, inviting the native States to co-operate. Many willingly responded, but their traditional attitude was illustrated, in 1834, when the Rajah of Jodhpore maintained his right to give them asylum. The Viceroy explained the danger of providing Thugee with a base of operations against British territory, and soon forced his consent. In October, 1835, Thugs up to 1,562 were committed for trial, 382 hanged and 986 transported for life to the Andaman Islands. But it took many years to obliterate so large and hereditary a religious cult. Turning King's evidence soon became popular and remote hangs were tracked down. The step was timely, for their organization might have proved disastrous against the British in the great mutiny which followed.

Wholesale Massacres.

The old saying that there is honor among thieves might well have been suggested by the Thugs of India in their dealings with each other they were scrupulously exact. The loot was shared evenly among all members of the gang, and even if a member had not been present at a murder his share would be set aside for him. It was not often that they murdered children. If any fell into their hands as the result of the extermination of a caravan, the boys would be adopted into the order while the girls would be sold as slaves in the large cities. Certain occupations were also immune from their attacks. Religious beggars, poets, musicians, dancers, washer-women, oil vendors, blacksmiths and others might roam at will, certain that they would not be attacked but were more likely to be rewarded if they came across Thugs. Carriers of water from the sacred Ganges were safe so long as they had the water with them. If they were returning for a supply they would be strangled without compunction. It is on record that on one occasion a caravan of 500 people was put to death by a band of 1,000 Thugs. The extermination of this order constitutes one of the soldest British achievements in India.

HOW LONG DO DREAMS LAST?

A Question Often Asked, But Never Clearly Answered.

How long do dreams last is a question that has often been asked, but has never been clearly answered. But the following instance seems to bear out the supposition that dreams are really of very short duration.

As a clock began to strike twelve a man fell asleep and dreamed.

In his dream he ran away to sea, served on board ship for a long time, was nearly drowned in a shipwreck, and swam to a desert island. No rescue arriving, he began to abandon hope, when at last a ship hove in sight and took him on board. He became a ringleader in a successful mutiny, took charge of the ship, and sailed it across remote and uncharted seas.

At last, wearying of this life, he sailed to England, sold his ship, and entered business on shore.

One day someone recognized him as a mutineer. He was arrested and tried, condemned to death and led off to execution. The noose was placed round his neck and he awoke suddenly to hear the last stroke of the clock striking midnight.

Dreams are sometimes helpful, as they bring back to our minds things which we cannot consciously remember, says A. J. J. Ritchie in "A History of Dreams."

A cashier in a bank found an error in his books one was extremely worried about it, as he could not account for it.

One night he dreamt that a man came into the bank, withdrew a little money from his account and left. The cashier also noticed that, in the hurry, he forgot to enter the transaction in his books.

Remembering the dream the next morning, he found out that the error had actually occurred in this way, and was thus able to rectify it.

Egypt's First Lighthouse.

To Egypt belongs the credit of the erection of the first lighthouse on record, namely, the tower built on the island of Pharos at the mouth of Alexandria harbor, by that most enlightened ruler, Ptolemy II., about 660 years before the Christian era. This tower was 100 feet high and stood as a monument to an ancient civilization until the fourteenth century, when it was washed away by the sea. Its light consisted of an open fire of burning wood, and the same practice was followed in the subsequent lighthouses until the beginning of the seventeenth century. Such as late as 1789 the South Foreland lighthouse was merely a beacon-fire of coal. The famous Eddystone lighthouse, in 1759, was lit by 16 pounds of tallow candles, a clock being provided to ring the bell every half-hour to remind the keeper to snuff them. In 1782 oil lamps with reflectors were used for the lighting of the Mersey channel, and after the invention of the Argand burner 20 years later, oil became the standard illuminant. Mineral oil was introduced in 1872, and the concentrated wicks of the Argand burner in due course gave way to the incandescent mantle, which now furnishes the light for all the most important lighthouse of the world.

Temperance In Japan.

The four delegates from Japan to the eleventh World's W.C.T.U. Convention held in Philadelphia in November, 1922, have issued a striking statement on the question of national prohibition in Japan and Korea. A law forbidding the sale of alcoholic liquor to young people under twenty has been in force since April, 1922, thus annexating the bill which Lady Astor has just succeeded in getting through the British Parliament. These Japanese women say: "Our best and only way now open to us is to reach these young people. So we determined, God helping us, to raise a fund to reach ten million children of school age with the scientific truth about alcohol. With $10,000 we can prepare the best temperance posters to place in all the public and private schools throughout Japan and Korea, and also translate, print and distribute the most authoritative books about alcohol and other narcotics, and place them in all the public libraries and school libraries. We are all mothers, and realizing the need, each one of us has individually offered ¥100; place the Philadelphia Convention could more was subscribed, so you see ¥21,000 citizens have been embraced. Will you kindly help us to reach the remaining, 9,169,000?"

To Study Warships.

Experiments are being made at Chatham, England, with a gyroscope to prevent the rolling of battleships. In the preliminary trials a novel method has been employed of imparting a rolling motion to a ship moored in the dockyard. Platforms have been constructed enabling parties of men to run on and off the vessel.

Should the instrument eliminate rolling, it will prove of much importance in naval warfare. The modern battleship is so heavy that once she starts rolling a long time elapses before she recovers her normal balance. This motion is one of the greatest difficulties with which naval gunners have to contend.

Movies Build Church.

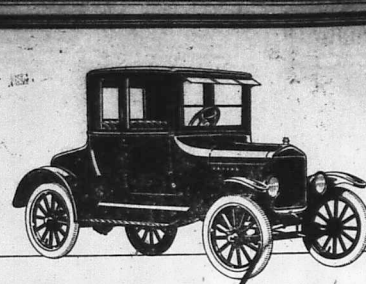
In the old church of the author of "In His Steps," Dr. Charles M. Sheldon, in Topeka, Kansas, on Easter Sunday last year 120 persons were admitted to fellowship, all of whom said they were first attracted by the motion-picture services held every Sunday evening, and at which the pastor builds his sermon around the story shown on the screen.

Evolution of Whales.

Whales probably evolved from land animals. They have vestiges of hind legs; they suckle their young, which are almost invariably born one at a time; they have hairs on and about the snout, jaws and skin; they breathe air as land animals do, instead of like fishes.

Saleslady—I hear that you and your husband are going abroad to acquire an inheritance; but why don't you go together on the same boat?

Lady Friend—No! I'll tell you; if the ship should go under there'll always be one left to take over the inheritance.



The New Ford Coupe

An entirely new body design of remarkable beauty as well as practical utility, is the distinguishing feature of the new Ford Coupe.

The body lines follow in one graceful sweep from the new high radiator to the "Turtle back" curve of the rear deck, which has been enlarged to conveniently accommodate bulky grips and packages.

Upholstering is luxuriously deep both in the seat and back, the covering being of rich brown broadcloth with mahogany stripe. A recess shelf is provided behind the seat, for parcels.

Interior fittings include revolving window regulators, and door locks and handles finished in nickel. The large rear window is fitted with silk poplin shade in dull silvered mountings.

The windshield is surmounted by a broad sun-visor, which protects the eyes from glare.

As a handsome and practical all-weather car for town or country, the new Ford Coupe cannot be surpassed.

Defies Rust!

There's one big point about "Toronto" Stable Equipment which makes me specially proud to sell it. It's the fact that the galvanizing thoroughly covers and completely coats both the inside and the outside of the steel tubing with pure zinc spelter. This "hot" process makes it absolutely rust-defying and proof against strong stable fumes for the maximum period.

This is a mighty valuable feature. Let me explain some of the many others. Or get some of the interesting Toronto Literature.

YARKER

(For last week).

The weather continues very mild with considerable rain, which keeps the roads in bad condition.—The Yarker people had another scare on Monday night when the alarm was given. The Benjamin wheel factory was on fire. Although it did very little damage owing to where it originated and it was noticed before it had gained much headway, or it would have been a serious fire. This factory being located near a number of other frame buildings would perhaps cause a heavy loss to the Village of Yarker if it ever burns. The young people intend holding a Xmas Tree about Xmas Eve.—The I. O. O. F. held a dance and supper in the Benjamin Hall Wednesday night and drew a large crowd. Will Storms is home from Rochester to visit his family, and will stay for a short time owing to his daughter, Mrs. Bolton, being on the sick list.—A. D. Leonard and S. J. Hart spent the week end in Ottawa on business.—Jack Winters is home from the West to visit his parents.—Mrs. H. Forster motored to Napanee on Wednesday, where she took the train for Inverness to visit her parents for a short time.—We notice a good many vacant houses in the village owing to a good many of our residents moving to the United States, where the times are better than here.—Miss Toner, of Strathcona, visited with Miss Hazel Hart for a day or two.—Mr. F. Snider has moved in the Richardson house now owned by Mr. Foster.—Mrs. R. Bulby of Petersburg, visiting her parents.—Mrs. Benjamin has closed up her house and gone to Montreal to spend the winter months.

Perhaps You Need a Tonic

A tonic is necessary in all run-down conditions, after colds, fevers and illnesses of all kinds. When a person is anaemic, undernourished, nervous, tired, listless, he needs a tonic. If you can't sleep, have no appetite, are miserable and depressed, a good tonic will fix you. The tonic best suited for general use is Carnol. It can be taken with perfect safety to a delicate child, a convalescent, or to an aged person. It is made from a prescription of an eminent physician. Hundreds of doctors prescribe Carnol in their practice. Here's what Mr. Davis says about Carnol:

"We have sold Carnol for two years. During those two years we have seen many other so-called tonics tried out, but they did not spread and people did not advise their friends to buy them. Carnol has been bought by people who used it before. It has been recommended by people to their friends and has enjoyed a good sale. We believe that it has the ingredients that go to make up one of the very best nerve and body builders ever put before the public."—Davis the Druggist, Columbia and 6th Sts., New Westminster, B.C. 11-9

Carnol is sold by all good druggists everywhere.

THUGS OF INDIA. NAME SURVIVES.

Thug, a word of universal acceptance wherever English is spoken, came into the language from India in Victorian days, as is noted by W. G. Tinkom-Fernandez, in the New York Times. It was derived from the Hindu word, "thag", meaning a cheat, but came to have a more sinister significance from the practices of Hindus and Mohammedans who were proud to bear the name and who adopted as their goddess the bloodthirsty Kali, whose shrine at Kalighat gave its name to Calcutta. The Thugs were in existence since mediaeval times and the various princes seemed powerless to suppress them. It was not until Lord William Bentick, the Viceroy, appointed Colonel Sleeman to devote himself to their extermination almost a century ago, that they were successfully grappled with. The success of Sleeman is one of the most noteworthy in police and military annals. The Thugs numbered perhaps hundreds of thousands when he went to work, and before he had finished thousands had been hanged or deported to the Andaman Islands and the others had retired from business. There are criminals in India to-day, men who hold life cheap, but the old religious order of Thugs has completely disappeared.

A Religious Order.

The organization was a remarkable one, for in caste-ridden India it was the only society where men of different religions and castes met on terms of equality. It was a real brotherhood. Its members probably thought that by offering human sacrifices to the goddess Kali they were establishing a credit account in Paradise, but their murders were not committed for this purpose. They were committed for material gain. There were no murders without robbery. There were no murders of revenge, so far as the records show, and if one Thug were to slay another he would be expelled from the order. Thugs could not be hired to commit murder, nor did they commit murder without religious ceremonies. Murder and robbery were not their sole occupations. When they were not engaged in these practices they were model citizens, filling the land, obeying all laws and setting an example to their neighbors. Apart from the great princes they paid more taxes than any other element in the community because they were wealthier, and they did not seek to conceal their wealth nor were they ashamed to acknowledge how it had been acquired.

A Hereditary Craft.

The craft of Thugee was hereditary, and had its secret ritual as well as a sort of slang which made it possible for Thugs speaking different languages to communicate with each other on matters deemed for the good of the order. There were several degrees in the organization. Once initiated the young Thug became a scout bringing news of likely victims. After that he became a grave digger, for the Thugs always buried their victims, after mutilating them so that their identity might be concealed. The third grade was composed of the shumsia, or men whose business it was to hold the hands and feet of the victims while they were being done to death. The penultimate was the burkia, or strangler. The Thugs had a particular way of killing their victims. They were forbidden the shedding of blood, in a literal sense; therefore there were no clubbings or stabbings. They operated with a noose. It was often a rope taken from bullock carts. This rope would be hurried at the victim, and the balls would wrap, it round his throat so that he would be strangled in a minute. Often, if the murder would be committed by a short lariat, or by a thin strip of loin cloth.

Missing Men.

But Europeans were never attacked, because they wore pistols, carried little money or journeys, and, what is significant, their disappearance would arouse the Government. But the British became interested when Indian officers and soldiers on leave from their regiments failed to return. In 1831 a gang was caught red-handed, and proved the existence of Thugee. The Viceroy began a campaign for their extermination, inviting the native States to co-operate. Many willingly responded, but their traditional attitude was illustrated in 1834, when the Rajah of Jodhpore maintained his right to give them asylum. The Viceroy exclaimed the danger of providing Thugee with a base of operations against British territory, and soon forced his consent. In October, 1835, Thugs up to 1,562 were committed for trial, 382 hanged and 986 transported for life to the Andaman Islands. But it took many years to obliterate so large and hereditary a religious cult. Turning King's evidence soon became popular and remote Thugs were tracked down. The step was timely, for their organization might have proved disastrous against the British in the great mutiny which followed.

Wholesale Massacres.

The old saying that there is honor among thieves might well have been suggested by the Thugs of India. In their dealings with each other they were scrupulously exact. The loot was shared evenly among all members of the gang, and even if a member had not been present at a murder his share would be set aside for him. It was not often that they murdered children. If any fell into their hands as the result of the extermination of a caravan, the boys would be adopted into the order while the girls would be sold as slaves in the large cities. Certain occupations were also immune from Thugee attacks. Religious beggars, poets, musicians, dancers, washerwomen, oil vendors, blacksmiths and others might roam at will, provided that they would not be attacked but were more likely to be rewarded if they came across Thugs. The factors of water from the sacred Ganges were safe so long as they had the water with them. If they were returning for a supply they would be strangled without compunction. It is on record that on one occasion a caravan of 500 people was put to death by a band of 1,000 Thugs. The extermination of this order constitutes one of the oddest British achievements in India.

A Question Often Asked, But Never Clearly Answered.

How long do dreams last is a question that has often been asked, but has never been clearly answered. But the following instance seems to bear out the supposition that dreams are really of very short duration.

As a clock began to strike twelve a man fell asleep and dreamed.

In his dream he ran away to sea, served on board ship for a long time, was nearly drowned in a shipwreck, and swam to a desert island. No rescue arriving, he began to abandon hope, when at last a ship hove in sight and took him on board. He became a ringleader in a successful mutiny, took charge of the ship, and sailed it across remote and uncharted seas.

At last, wearying of this life, he sailed to England, sold his ship, and entered business on shore.

One day someone recognized him as a mutineer. He was arrested and tried, condemned to death and led off to execution. The noose was placed round his neck and he awoke suddenly to hear the last stroke of the clock striking midnight.

Dreams are sometimes helpful, as they bring back to our minds things which we cannot consciously remember, says A. J. J Ratcliff in "A History of Dreams."

A cashier in a bank found an error in his books and was extremely worried about it, as he could not account for it.

One night he dreamt that a man came into the bank, withdrew a little money from his account and left. The cashier also noticed that, in the hurry, he forgot to enter the transaction in his books.

LOVELY GARDENS OF ROME.

Garden of Augustus Has Wealth of Exquisite Bloom.

Augustus, first of the Roman emperors, gained his throne just twenty-seven years before Christ was born. He had conquered Mark Anthony at Actium and Cleopatra had died with her maidens. Under his reign the empire settled into greatness. In A.D. 14 he died, not knowing that in a carpenter's home in Nazareth a little boy grew in wisdom and stature and in favor with God and man. And Tiberius reigned in his stead.

In the Rome of to-day can be seen the tombs of each one of the famous men who built in majesty or destroyed it. The city is a treasure house of memories, a shrine to worship a glory that has completely gone.

Augustus did his share of building, too. There is the Domus Livie, the home of his wife Livia, near the place where Caligula is said to have been murdered. And there is his own palace, now mainly ruined, and the altar of peace that he set up in the Campus Martius.

The way to it lies through the Forum to where the Palatine rises in a great hummock of grass and ruin. On either side of the steps are grey walls, dank with age and dim passages, creeping away into darkness like furtive snakes. At the top is the garden of Augustus Caesar.

This garden, resting so softly on ancient walls, speaks the triumph of love and eternity over temporal power. Augustus is dead, with all that he knew for, but above the ruins of his splendid house expressive peint their dark spears toward the sky, and roses spill their petals when the June wind furries them.

Seasons move quietly in Rome, and by April the Garden of Augustus is full of the treasures that England spends May and June in collections. Irises are out, and along the borders fat pincushion lavender bushes are sprayed with mauve, and grey hawthorne trees are bent to the ground with their burden of snow. Acolhat a wall stand a long line of purple irises, grave and aloof. They might be the spirits of the Roman soldiers who stood on guard at the palace of Augustus nineteen hundred years ago. Over them, for incense, thins the scent of clove carnations. Orange trees are thickly studded with golden fruit, and cedars fling indigo shadows, like courtiers' cloaks, across the winding paths. A row of Boccar-ino trees, exquisitely slender and lovely, cross with pink tapestry the blue Italian sky.

Forecasting for Rain.

There are many ways of foretelling rain. If the cows lie down, all facing the same way; if you hear the sheep at night; if the chairs and tables of the sitting room crack; if the ducks quack loudly; if the swallow flies low; if the cat washes one time behind her ear; if the fish rise to catch flies above the stream; if toads are seen in the evening; if there are great numbers of worms about; if frogs look brown instead of green; if the black bird shrills; if the dog scratches his bones to eat grass instead; if the rocks, in their night, dive downward suddenly—in each and all of these cases rain may be expected shortly.

Rooks and cats foretell rain as well as rain. If the rooks keep near home, there is going to be a calm. Cats rush aloft when a storm is coming.

Spaniels are said to be abnormally sleepy when rain is coming shortly.

"What does this mist mean?" a Sussex England, man was asked one morning. His reply was: "Near hain, far rain; far haze, near rain."

If the sun "goes to bed in a blanket" the next day will be fine. If he goes to bed pale, it will be wet. Soot falls down the chimney and spiders stay in their cobwebs when rain is expected.

School Howlers.

The following humorous mistakes are said to have been made in examination papers by school children. Can you point out the errors?

Horse-power is the distance one horse can carry one pound of water in one hour.

An angle is a triangle with two sides.

A ruminating animal is one that chews its cubs.

Tennyson wrote "In Memoriam-dum."

A vacuum is a large, empty space where the pope lives.

Algebraical symbols are used when we don't know what we are talking about.

Jerusalem was surrounded by walls so as to keep in the milk and honey.

Lengthy Tunnels.

Although the Otira Tunnel in New Zealand opened recently, is officially stated to be the longest in the British Empire, it is easily beaten in this respect by several other tunnels.

The Simplon, for instance, through the Alps, measures 12½ miles in length, as compared with Otira's 5¾ miles, and is the longest in the world. Next comes the St. Gothard, 9½ miles; the Mont Cenis, eight miles; and the Arlberg, 6¾ miles. The longest in the British Isles is the Severn Tunnel, 4 1-3 miles, which brings Cardiff and South Wales into close communication with Bristol and the south of England.

Not Too Fast.

The lecturer was letting himself go. "I venture to assert," he declared with warmth, "that there is not a man in this audience who has ever done anything to prevent the destruction of our forests."

A man in the quiet, the mild-looking man in the back row bounded to his feet.

"Have I've shot woodpeckers!" he protested, heatedly.

Boosts Goat's Meat.

A Pennsylvania preacher left in his will a sum of money to encourage the eating of goat meat as a substitute for pork.

Don't make your wife's Xmas gift one for the whole family. She appreciates the little extras. A bottle of Day Dream Perfume for instance, or a gold plated Vanity Case. These for sale at Wallace's.

"Well," said the president, "just tell them, 'that's what they all say'."

That afternoon there called at the office a young lady. The boy assured her it was impossible to see the president.

"But I'm his wife," said the lady.

"Oh, that's what they all say," said the boy.

And Tiberius reigned in his stead.

Many scenes of to-day can be seen the touch of each one of the famous men who built in majesty or destroyed it. The city is a treasure house of memories, a shrine to worship a glory that has completely gone.

Augustus did his share of building, too. There is the Domus Livie, the home of his wife Livia, near the place where Caligula is said to have been murdered. And there is his own palace, now mainly ruined, and the altar of peace that he set up in the Campus Martius.

The way to it lies through the Forum to where the Palatine rises in a great hummock of grass and ruin. On either side of the path are grey walls, dank with age and dim passages creeping away into obscure interior mazes. At the top is the garden of Augustus Caesar.

This garden, resting so softly on ancient walls, seems the triumph of love and eternity over temporal power. Augustus is dead, with all that he stood for, but above the ruins of his splendid house expresses its faint their dark spears toward the sky, and roses spill their petals when the June wind flurries them.

Seasons move quickly in Rome, and by April the Garden of Augustus is full of the treasures that England spends May and June in cultivating. Roses are out, and along the borders fat pinushion lavender bushes are speared with mauve, and grey hawthorne trees are bent to the ground with their burden of snow. Against a wall stand a long line of purple irises, grave and aloof. They might be the spirits of the Roman soldiers who stood on guard at the palace of Augustus nineteen hundred years ago. Over them, for incense, blows the scent of clove carnations. Orange trees are thickly studded with golden fruit, and cedars fling indigo shadows, like sentinels' drinks, across the winding paths. A row of flowering trees, exquisitely slender and lovely, cross veil pink against the blue Italian sky.

Forecasting for Rain.

There are many ways of foretelling rain. If the cows lie down, all indications the same way; if you hear the sheep at night; if the chairs and tables, or the sticks, creak; if the ducks quack loudly; if the swallow flies low, if the cat washes nine times behind her ears; if the fish rise to catch flies above the stream; if toads are seen in the evening; if there are many glow-worms about; if frogs croak more than usual; if the blackbird shifts; if the dog scratches his bones to eat grass instead; if the rocks, in their flight, dive downwards suddenly—in each and all of these cases rain may be expected shortly.

Rooks and gulls foretell gales as well as rain. If the rooks keep near home there is going to be a gale. Cats rush about when a storm is coming.

Spaniels are said to be abnormally sleepy when rain is coming shortly. "What does this mean, nurse?" asked Susan. England, nurse was asked one morning. His reply was: "Near rain, fair rain; far rain, rain rain."

If the sun "goes to bed in a blanket" the next day will be fine. If he goes to bed pale, it will be wet. Soot falls down the chimney and spiders stay in their cobwebs when rain is expected.

School Howlers.

The following humorous mistakes are said to have been made in examination papers by school children. Can you point out the errors?

Horse-power is the distance one horse can carry one pound of water in one hour.

An angle is triangle with two sides.

A ruminating animal is one that chews its cuds.

Tennyson wrote "In Memoriam."

A vacuum is a large, empty space where the pope lives.

Algebraical symbols are used when we don't know what we are talking about.

Jerusalem was surrounded by walls so as to keep in the milk and honey.

Lengthy Tunnels.

Although the Otira Tunnel in New Zealand, opened recently, is officially stated to be the longest in the British Empire, it is easily beaten in this respect by several other tunnels.

The Simplon, for instance, through the Alps, measures 12¼ miles in length, as compared with Otira's 5¾ miles, and is the longest in the world. Next comes the St. Gothard, 9½ miles; the Mont Cenis, eight miles; and the Arlberg, 6¾ miles. The longest in the British Isles is the Severn Tunnel, 4 1-3 miles, which brings Cardiff and South Wales into close communication with Bristol and the south of England.

Not Too Fast.

The lecturer was letting himself go. "I venture to assert," he declared with warmth, "that there is not a man in this audience who has ever done anything to prevent the destruction of our forests."

Stung to the quick, the mild-looking man in the back row bounded to his feet.

"I've—I've shot woodpeckers!" he protested, breathlessly.

Boosts Goat's Meat.

A Pennsylvania preacher left in his will a sum of money to encourage the use of goats' meat as a substitute for pork.

Don't make your wife's Xmas gift one for the whole family. She appreciates the little extras. A bottle of Day Dream Perfume for instance, or a gold plated Vanity Case. These for sale at Wallace's.

"I can't keep the visitors from coming up," said the office boy, dejectedly, to the president. "When I say you're out, they simply say they must see you."

"Well," said the president, "just tell them, 'that's what they all say'."

That afternoon there called at the office a young lady. The boy assured her it was impossible to see the president.

"But I'm his wife," said the lady.

"Oh, that's what they all say," said the boy.

MOVIES AT TILLAMOOK ROCK.

Noted Lighthouse Has Been Visited by Photographer.

The monotony of the tireless vigil at the Tillamook Rock lighthouse, probably the loneliest station of the service, was relieved recently when a photographer for a moving-picture company made a flip of the rock and its surroundings.

Tillamook Rock is located a mile off the coast of Oregon, near the mouth of the Columbia river, and is known to every mariner who sails the Pacific. A rough sea almost constantly breaks against its base, and only in the calmest weather will even a small boat attempt a landing. When the lighthouse tenders, "Rose" and "Manzanita," make their periodical visits, they stand off at a distance and supplies for the lighthouse are transferred to a small boat, then hoisted to the rock by means of a derrick.

This derrick came in handy when the photographer made his visit. Suspended from the derrick in a cage, he obtained fine views of the rock and its environs, the pounding waves breaking almost directly beneath him.

The lighthouse has its foundations anchored in the solid rock, which rises 85 feet above the sea, and is tended in turn by three keepers.

Although the coastline is rough and threatening few marine disasters have occurred in this locality, for the Tillamook light sends out its friendly beams to guide ships into the Columbia. In a storm, the wind howls and tears at the lighthouse as though it would sweep it from its foundations. Men in the Government service still find a favorite topic in a gale of two decades ago, when the waves dashed clear over the lighthouse and threw rocks against it with terrific force. One of the bowlders shattered the lenses of the light, letting in the heavy seas to drench its occupants. This piece of rock is still preserved as a souvenir in the office of Robert Warrack, superintendent of the 17th lighthouse district.

Making Colored Movies.

There are two methods. One is hand-painting on to each separate little picture, while extremely ingenious machinery deals with the copies. In the other method the color film maker films his subject alternately through red and green "light filter" screens.

A film, as we know, consists of a series of tiny photographs. From one of these photographs, then, all the red colors will be entirely cut out, while all the green colors will be shown; other colors will be let through in varying degrees, entirely depending upon how little red they contain.

In the next tiny photograph, exactly the reverse will occur, no greens appearing, all reds being clear, and the other colors being let through in accordance with the amount of green they contain.

The result, as we examine the film itself, is in black and white. When, however, it is shown, it is projected on to the screen in red and green light, and the real result, of course, is a series of pictures, alternately incomplete as to their colors.

In a film showing a red cow in a green field—and nothing else—the picture really shows the cow only, and the next picture the field only. When, however, the pictures are thrown rapidly, our eyes pick them easily.

Spanish Schools.

Some years ago Spain was called the most illiterate country in the world. In 1887 61 per cent. of the adult population were illiterate, and out of 100 children from 3 to 12 years of age 41 did not attend school. Teachers' salaries were so low that men and women of ability could not afford to enter the profession. It was through the untiring efforts of Prof. Giner, of the University of Madrid, that Spain was rescued from this state of mediæval barbarism. He founded the Free Institute of Instruction, and introduced many reforms in pedagogy. New schools of all kinds were built, open air schools in the mountains and by the seaside, schools for the blind and for the deaf and dumb at Vallvidere, professional and vocational schools, playgrounds and public gardens for the small children. School officials were sent to Belgium to learn the educational methods of that little country. The school system of Spain to-day is among the best in the world.

A Mark Is a Mark.

Eighty per cent. of German farms were mortgaged before the war. They have been paid off in depreciated marks during the past two years. German law accepts the principle that "a mark is a mark"—that is a depreciated paper mark must be treated as if it were a pre-war gold mark—and peasants who mortgaged their farms in 1914 say, for 5,000 marks ($12,000) can now redeem the mortgage for roughly three cents.

The elderly mother of a trained nurse who had invested her life savings in a "safe" security got her money back again. It bought two loaves of bread.

Union of Trees.

Animals or humans that are joined together must be brothers or sisters. Not so trees. These need not be even of the same species. If two seeds sprout close together, the resulting plants may coalesce by a kind of natural grafting and in time become united so closely that they are one to all intents. Altogether Mr. Arbuthnot, he has observed, has seen more or less complete between the following species: Willow, oak and bobbily pine, white oak and white pine.

Sir Walter Raleigh's Pipe.

The famous pipe which Sir Walter Raleigh first smoked in England was recently discovered and has been placed on exhibition in a London tobacconist shop. The pipe is said to be the one Sir Walter smoked on the eve of his execution in 1618.

RICHES IN OLD TOMBS

JEWELS BURIED WITH RULERS OF ANCIENT EGYPT.

Unprecedented Discoveries Made at Luxor—Possibility That Wonderful Gems and Priceless Works of Art Still Remain — Many Reputed to Have Been Rifled by Robbers.

A popular interest in Egypt's wonderful history has been aroused by the unprecedented discoveries made at Luxor. But even the jewels unearthed in the tomb of Tut-Ankh-Amen are not more beautiful than many which have been previously found.

The trouble has always been that the tombs hitherto uncovered have invariably been rifled by robbers and only the things they overlooked have been left behind.

A jewel with a wonderful history lay in a glass case at the Royal Society some years ago at Burlington House. Before it was a collection of lapis lazuli and turquoise, and cut made by order of the pharaoh who ruled the Nile when Joseph was governing. Save it to one of his court favorites and when he died it was buried with him.

A robber or ancient Egypt, breaking his tomb, and upon this chief's fate fell. He took one of a reddish glab which formed the chamber to the sepulchre, and crashed it the jewels.

Year by year the ruined tomb of the chief's body was buried deeper and deeper, so that, like the tomb of Tut-Ankh-Amen, it lay for long centuries hidden beneath the desert.

A few years ago Prof. Flinders Petrie and his excavating party found it. The earlier grave and the casket body of the thief told their tale and the excavators were encouraged to search for what they knew the thief had not been able to carry off. Thus at last they found the beautiful jewel which the court jeweller designed fifty centuries ago.

The same explorer had another stroke of luck in exploring the tomb of one of the pharaohs. It was found that at some remote period the tomb had been entered by robbers, and that the plunderers had broken off the mummified arm of his queen and hidden it in a crevice in the wall—perhaps on being alarmed—and had never returned to retrieve it.

On taking off the wrappings, the explorers found four magnificent bracelets of gold, with amethyst, turquoise, and lapis lazuli in varied and elegant adjustments. The gold work was peculiarly fine and delicate, though the metal, being pure, was soft, owing to the absence of an alloy.

On another occasion explorers were clearing the floor of the passage to a tomb when they discovered a secret receptacle which had escaped the tomb-robbers of bygone ages. In this secret receptacle was a little wooden box, quite rotten, filled with a good deal of perfectly marvelous workmanship, which was carefully conveyed to the State Museum.

The principal jewel was a breastplate of gold, enemused with precious stones of great beauty and fine workmanship. On the breastpiate were depicted two eagles guarding the tomb. The rest of the jewellery consisted of necklaces, girdles, bracelets, and scores of various little trinkets.

With the recent record find, the world has been set wondering whether, under the piled sand at the edge of the desert, there may not lie great hoards of riches, for the ancient Egyptians seem to have been in the habit of burying with their kings all their barbaric wealth.

Address and Presentation

The many friends and relatives of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Wartman, Wesley, gathered at their home and spent a very pleasant evening on October 26th. The early part of the night was spent in games by the young people, while the older friends indulged in sociability.

Mr. and Mrs. Wartman and Marguerite were called and an address was read by Mrs. Rodgers. After the presentation, Mr. Wartman thanked the friends for their remembrance to them. Also Mr. D. Wartman replied in brief but well chosen words, referring principally to the community spirit of their friends.

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Wartman and Marguerite,—We, your friends and neighbors of Wesley, have met here to-night to express in some tangible way our appreciation of you in our neighborhood. We feel that it would be unfair to let you go away from our immediate circle without some expression of the esteem in which you have been held.

Mr. Wartman, you have been a life long member of this community, and have shared in the joys and sorrows. You have also been ready to lend a helping hand to any good enterprise, not looking for reward, but because it was in the best interests of the people and in the service of the Master.

Mrs. Wartman, you have not been long in our midst, but in this short period we have come to appreciate your pleasing personality and the sterling qualities of your life. A task entrusted to you meant a task well done. You entered into our activities heartily, and we shall miss your help in Church, Sabbath School and Auxiliary work.

And you, Marguerite, will also be missed, and remembered as one of Wesley's bright young girls, and may you give your young life fully to the Master's use.

We feel the truth of the words:

Here be the tie that binds
Our hearts in Christian love.
The fellowship of kindred minds
Is like to that above.

Mr. and Mrs. Wartman, we ask you to accept this electric lamp, and Marguerite, this set of French ivory, not for their intrinsic value, but for the love that prompted the gift.

It was a scarab of deep blue lapis lazuli, and turquoise, and was made by order of the pharaoh who reigned about 3,000 years ago. The king gave it to one of his court favorites, and when he died it was buried with him.

A robber of ancient Egypt, both in life and death, paid for it. His fate fell in the shape of a crushing slab which formed the entrance to the sepulchre, and crushed the thief.

Year by year the ruined tomb tells the thief's story. He was buried deeper and deeper, as that like the tomb of Tut-Ankh-Amen, to lay for long centuries hidden beneath the desert.

A few years ago Prof. Flinders Petrie and his excavating party found it. The fallen roof and the crushed body of the thief told their tale, and the excavators were encouraged in search for what they knew the thief had not been able to carry off. Then at last they found the beautiful jewel which the court jeweller designed for his centurion.

The same explorer had another stroke of luck in exploring the tomb of one of the pharaohs. It was found that at some remote period the tomb had been entered by robbers, and that the plunderers had broken off the mummified arm of his queen and hidden it in a crevice in the wall—perhaps on being disturbed—and had never returned to retrieve it.

On taking off the wrappings, the explorers found four magnificent bracelets of gold, with amethyst, turquoise, and lapis lazuli in varied and elegant adjustments. The gold work was peculiarly fine and delicate, both the metal being pure, was soft, owing to the absence of an alloy.

On another occasion explorers were clearing the floor of the passage to a tomb when they discovered a secret receptacle which had escaped the tomb-rifler's of bygone ages. In this secret receptacle was a little wooden box, quite rotten, filled with jewels of perfectly marvelous workmanship, which was carefully conveyed to the State Museum.

The principal jewel was a breastplate of gold, enemusted with precious stone of great beauty and fine workmanship. On the breastplate were depicted two eagles guarding the tomb. The rest of the jewellery consisted of necklaces, girdles, bracelets, and scores of various little trinkets.

With the recent record find, the world has been set wondering whether, under the piled sand at the edge of the desert, there may sig lie great hoards of riches, for the ancient Egyptians seem to have been in the habit of burying with their kings all their barbaric wealth.

MOVIES AT TILLAMOOK ROCK.

Noted Lighthouse Has Been Visited by Photographer.

The monotony of the tireless vigil at the Tillamook Rock lighthouse, probably the loneliest station of the service, was relieved recently when a photographer for a moving picture company made a film of the rock and its surroundings.

Tillamook Rock is located a mile off the coast of Oregon, near the mouth of the Columbia river, and is known to every mariner who sails the Pacific. A rough sea almost constantly breaks against its base, and only in the calmest weather will even a small boat attempt a landing. When the lighthouse tender, "Rose" and "Manzanita," make their periodical visits, they stand off at a distance and supplies for the lighthouse are transferred to a small boat, then hoisted to the rock by means of a derrick.

This derrick came in handy when the photographer made his call. Suspended from the derrick in a cage, he obtained fine views of the rock and its environs, the pounding waves breaking almost directly beneath him.

The lighthouse has its foundations anchored in the solid rock, which rises 85 feet above the sea, and is tended in turn by three keepers.

Although the coastline is rough and threatening few marine disasters have occurred in this locality, for the Tillamook light sends out its friendly beams to guide ships into the Columbia. In a storm, the wind howls and tears at the lighthouse as though it would sweep it from its foundations. Men in the Government service still find a favorite topic in a gale of two decades ago, when the waves dashed clear over the lighthouse and threw rocks against it with terrific force. One of the bowlders shattered the lenses of the light, letting in the heavy seas to drench its occupants. This piece of rock is still preserved as a souvenir in the office of Robert Warrack, superintendent of the 17th lighthouse district.

Making Colored Movies.

There are two methods. One is hand-painting on to each separate little picture, while extremely ingenious machinery deals with the copies. In the other method the color film maker films his subject alternately through red and green "light filter" screens.

A film, as we know, consists of a series of tiny photographs. From one of these photographs, then, all the red colors will be entirely cut out, while all the green colors will be shown; other colors will be let through in varying degrees, entirely depending upon how little red they contain.

In the next tiny photograph, exactly the reverse will occur, no greens appearing, all reds being clear, and the other colors being let through in accordance with the amount of green they contain.

The result, as we examine the film itself, is in black and white. When, however, it is shown, it is projected on to the screen in red and green light, and the real result, of course, is a series of pictures, alternately incomplete as to their colors.

In a film showing a red cow in a green field—and nothing else—one picture really shows the cow only, and the next picture the field only. When, however the pictures are thrown rapidly, our eyes pick them easily.

Spanish Schools.

Some years ago Spain was called the most illiterate country in the world. In 1887 61 per cent. of the adult population were illiterate, and out of 100 children from 2 to 12 years of age 41 did not attend school. Teachers' salaries were so low that men and women of ability could not afford to enter the profession. It was through the untiring efforts of Prof. Giner, of the University of Madrid, that Spain was rescued from this state of intellectual barbarism. He founded the Free Institute of Instruction, and introduced many reforms in pedagogy. New schools of all kinds were built, open air schools in the mountains and by the seaside, schools for the blind and for the deaf and dumb at Vallvidere, professional and vocational schools, playgrounds and public gardens for the small children. School officials were sent to Belgium to learn the educational methods of that little country. The school system of Spain to-day is among the best in the world.

A Mark is a Mark.

Eighty per cent. of German farms were mortgaged before the war. They have been paid off in depreciated marks during the past two years. German law accepts the principle that "a mark is a mark"—that is a depreciated paper mark must be treated as if it were a pre-war gold mark—and peasants who mortgaged their farms in 1914 say, for 5,000 marks ($12,000) can now redeem the mortgage for roughly three cents.

The elderly mother of a trained nurse who had invested her life savings in a "safe" security gave the money back again. It bought two loaves of bread.

Union of Trees.

Animals or humans that are joined together at the breast are called "twins." Not so trees. These need not be even of the same species. If two seeds sprout close together, the resulting plants may coalesce by a kind of natural grafting and in time become united so closely that they are one to all intents. Altogether Mr. Arderne tells us, he has observed a hundred more or less complete between the following species: Willow, oak and holly; pine, white oak and white pine.

Sir Walter Raleigh's Pipe.

The famous pipe which Sir Walter Raleigh first smoked in England was recently discovered and has been placed on exhibition in a London tobacconist shop. The pipe is said to be the one Sir Walter smoked on the eve of his execution in 1618.

Address and Presentation

The many friends and relatives of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Wartman, Wesley, gathered at their home and spent a very pleasant evening on October 26th. The early part of the night was spent in games by the young people, while the older friends indulged in sociability.

Mr. and Mrs. Wartman and Marguerite were called and an address was read by Mrs. Rodgers. After the presentation, Mr. Wartman thanked the friends for their remembrance to them. Also Mr. D. Wartman replied in brief but well chosen words, referring especially to the community spirit of their friends.

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Wartman and Marguerite,—We, your friends and neighbors of Wesley, have met here this night to express in some tangible way our appreciation of you in our neighborhood. We feel that it would be unfair to let you go away from our immediate circle without some expression of the esteem in which you have been held.

Mr. Wartman, you have been a life long member of this community, and have shared in the joys and sorrows. You have also been ready to lend a helping hand to any good enterprise, not looking for reward, but because it was in the best interests of the people and in the service of the Master.

Mrs. Wartman, you have not been long in our midst, but in this short period we have come to appreciate your pleasing personality and the sterling qualities of your life. A task entrusted to you meant a task well done. You entered into our activities heartily, and we shall miss your help in Church, Sabbath School and Auxiliary work.

And you, Marguerite, will also be missed, and remembered as one of Wesley's bright young girls, and may you give your young life fully to the Master's use.

We feel the truth of the words :

Blest be the tie that binds
Our hearts in Christian love.
The fellowship of kindred minds
Is like to that above.

Mr. and Mrs. Wartman, we ask you to accept this electric lamp, and Marguerite, this set of French ivory, not for their intrinsic value, but for the love that prompted the gift.

RICHES IN OLD TOMBS

JEWELS BURIED WITH RULERS OF ANCIENT EGYPT

Unprecedented Discoveries Made at Luxor—Possibility That Wonderful Gems and Priceless Works of Art Still Remain — Many Tombs Have Been Rifled by Robbers.

A popular interest in Egypt's wonderful history has been aroused by the unprecedented discoveries made at Luxor. But even the jewels unearthed in the tomb of Tut-Ankh-Amen are not more beautiful than many which have been previously found.

The trouble has always been that the tombs intended to safeguard were invariably been rifled by robbers and only the things they overlooked have been left behind.

A jewel with a wonderful history lay in a glass case of the Royal Jewelry store years ago at Buxhaven House, London. It was an egyptian lapis-lazuli and turquoise pendant made by order of the pharaoh who reigned about 3,000 years ago. The king gave it to one of his court favorites and when he died it was buried with him.

The robbers of ancient Egypt broke into his tomb and upon him a strange fate fell, in the shape of a heavy slab which formed the entrance to the sepulchre and crushed the thief flat.

Year by year the ruined tombs of the thieves' dead were buried deeper and deeper, so that, like the tomb of Tut-Ankh-Amen, it lay for long centuries hidden beneath the desert.

A few years ago Sir Flinders Petrie and his excavating party found it. The fallen roof and the crushed body of the thief told their tale, and the excavators were encouraged to believe that they knew the tomb had not been able to carry off. Then at last they found the beautiful jewel which the court jeweller designed fifty centuries ago.

The same explorer had another Egyptian find in exploring the tomb of one of the pharaohs. It was found that at some remote period the tomb had been entered by robbers, and that the plunderers had broken off the mummified arm of his queen and hidden it in a crevice in the wall—perhaps on being alarmed—and had never returned to retrieve it.

On taking off the wrappings, the explorers found four magnificent bracelets of gold, with amethyst, turquoise, and lapis lazuli in varied and elegant adjustments. The gold work was peculiarly fine and delicate, though the metal, being pure, was soft, owing to the absence of an alloy.

On another occasion explorers were clearing the floor of the passage to a tomb when they discovered a secret receptacle which had escaped the tomb-rifflers of bygone ages. In this had been entered by the wooden box, quite rotten, filled with jewels of perfectly marvelous workmanship, which was carefully conveyed to the State Museum.

The principal jewel was a breastplate of gold, encrusted with precious stone of great beauty and fine workmanship. On the breastplate were depicted two eagles guarding the tomb. The rest of the jewellery consisted of necklaces, girdles, bracelets, and scores of various little trinkets.

With the recent record find, the world has been set wondering whether, under the piled sand at the edge of the desert, there may not lie great hoards of riches, for the ancient Egyptians seem to have been in the habit of burying with their kings all their barbaric wealth.

Noted Lighthouse Has Been Visited by Photographer.

The monotony of the tireless vigil at the Tillamook Rock lighthouse, probably the loneliest station of the service, was relieved recently when a photographer for a moving-picture company made a film of the rock and its surroundings.

Tillamook Rock is located a mile off the coast of Oregon, near the mouth of the Columbia river, and is known to every mariner who sails the Pacific. A rough sea almost constantly breaks against its base, and only in the calmest weather will even a small boat attempt a landing. When the lighthouse tenders, "Rose" and "Manzanita," make their periodical visits, they stand off at a distance and supplies for the lighthouse are transferred to a small boat, then hoisted to the rock by means of a derrick.

This derrick came in handy when the photographer made his call. Suspended from the derrick in a cage, he obtained fine views of the rock and its environs, the pounding waves breaking almost directly beneath him.

The lighthouse has its foundations anchored in the solid rock, which rises 85 feet above the sea, and is tended in turn by three keepers.

Although the coastline is rough and threatening few marine disasters have occurred in this locality, for the Tillamook light sends out its friendly beams to guide ships into the Columbia. In a storm, the wind howls and tears at the lighthouse as though it would sweep it from its foundations. Men in the Government service still find a favorite topic in a gale of two decades ago, when the waves dashed clear over the lighthouse and threw rocks against it with terrific force. One of the windows shattered the lenses of the light, letting in the heavy seas to drench its occupants. This piece of rock is still preserved as a souvenir in the office of Robert Warrack, superintendent of the 17th lighthouse district.

Making Colored Movies.

There are two methods. One is hand-painting on to each separate little picture, while extremely ingenious machinery deals with the copies. In the other method the color film maker films his subject alternately through red and green "light filter" screens.

A film, as we know, consists of a series of tiny photographs. From one of these photographs, then, all the red colors will be entirely cut out, while all the green colors will be shown; other colors will be let through in varying degrees, entirely depending upon how little red they contain.

In the next tiny photograph, exactly the reverse will occur, no greens appearing, all reds being clear, and the other colors being le, through in accordance with the amount of green they contain.

The result, as we examine the film itself, is in black and white. When, however, it is shown, it is projected on to the screen in red and green light, and the real result, of course, is a series of pictures, alternately incomplete as to their colors.

In a film showing a red cow in a green field—and nothing else—one picture really shows the cow only, and the next picture the field only. When, however, the pictures are thrown rapidly, our eyes pick them easily.

Spanish Schools.

Some years ago Spain was called the most illiterate country in the world. In 1887 61 per cent. of the adult population were illiterate, and out of 100 children from 3 to 12 years of age 41 did not attend school. Teachers' salaries were so low that men and women of ability could not afford to enter the profession. It was through the untiring efforts of Prof. Giner, of the University of Madrid that Spain was rescued from this state of intellectual barbarism. He founded the Free Institute of Education, and introduced many reforms in pedagogy. New schools of all kinds were built, open air schools in the mountains and by the seside, schools for the blind and for the deaf and dumb at Valvidera, professional and vocational schools, playgrounds and public gardens for the small children. School officials were sent to Belgium to learn the educational methods of that little country. The school system of Spain to-day is among the best in the world.

A Mark Is a Mark.

Eighty per cent. of German farms have been paid off in depreciated marks during the past two years. German law accepts the principle that "a mark is a mark"—that is a depreciated paper mark must be treated as if it were a pre-war gold mark—and peasants who mortgaged their farms in 1914 say, for 5,000 marks ($12,000) can now redeem the mortgage for roughly three cents.

The elderly mother of a trained nurse who had invested her life savings in a "safe" security got her money back again. It bought two loaves of bread.

Union of Trees.

Animals or humans that are joined together must be brothers or sisters. Not so trees. These need not be even of the same species. If two seeds sprout close together, the resulting plant may coalesce by a kind of natural grafting and in time become united so closely that they are one to all intents. Altogether Mr. Andrews tells us, he has observed unions more or less complete between the following species: Willow, oak and loblolly pine, white oak and white pine.

Sir Walter Raleigh's Pipe.

The famous pipe which Sir Walter Raleigh first smoked in England was recently discovered and has been placed on exhibition in a London tobacconist shop. The pipe is said to be the one Sir Walter smoked on the eve of his execution in 1618.

Address and Presentation

The many friends and relatives of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Wartman, Wesley, gathered at their home and spent a very pleasant evening on October 26th. The early part of the night was spent in games by the young people, while the older friends indulged in sociability.

Mr. and Mrs. Wartman and Marguerite were called and an address was read by Mrs. Rodgers. After the presentation, Mr. Warfman thanked the friends for their remembrance to them. Also Mr. D. Wartman replied in brief but well chosen words, referring principally to the community spirit of their friends.

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Wartman and Marguerite,—We, your friends and neighbors of Wesley, have met here to-night to express in some tangible way our appreciation of you in our neighborhood. We feel that it would be unfair to let you go away from our immediate circle without some expression of the esteem in which you have been held.

Mr. Wartman, you have been a life long member of this community, and have shared in the joys and sorrows. You have also been ready to lend a helping hand to any good enterprise, not looking for reward, but because it was in the best interests of the people and in the service of the Master.

Mrs. Wartman, you have not been long in our midst, but in this short period we have come to appreciate your pleasing personality and the sterling qualities of your life. A task entrusted to you meant a task well done. You entered into our activities heartily, and we shall miss your help in Church, Sabbath School and Auxiliary work.

And you, Marguerite, will also be missed, and remembered as one of Wesley's bright young girls, and may you give your young life fully to the Master's use.

We feel the truth of the words :

Blest be the tie that binds
Our hearts in Christian love.
The fellowship of kindred minds
Is like to that above.

Mr. and Mrs. Wartman, we ask you to accept this electric lamp, and Marguerite, this set of French ivory, not for their intrinsic value, but for the love that prompted the gift.

WISE AND OTHERWISE.

Tom—Harry ate something that poisoned him.
Dick—Croquette?
Tom—Not yet; but he's very ill.

Only the uninformed endure the agony of corns. The knowing ones apply Holloway's Corn Remover and get relief.

"So you think a college education is a good thing for a boy?"
"Great! Fits him for something in life. If he can't make one of the big ball teams he can often land a job as a professor."

Recognized as a leading specific for the destruction of worms, Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator has proved a boon to suffering children everywhere. It seldom fails.

"Josiah," said Mrs. Corntassel, "do you approve of women smokin' cigarets?"
"Nope," was the gruff response, "Stickin' to light so many cigarets takes too much time off'n your work. If you must smoke, smoke a pipe."

It Bids Pain Begone. — When neuralgia racks the nerves or lumbago cripples the back is the time to test the virtues of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. Well rubbed in it will still the pain and produce a sensation of ease and rest. A trial of it will establish faith in it.

Tom—What makes you think she'd like you?
Vic—She told me she thought there was room in every family.
"Well, what of that?"
"I'd just gotten through a moment before telling her that I was an only child."

Will-ow Weed Powders are a prompt relief from the attacks of worms in children. They are powerful, yet so mild in action that it is to be desired as a worm expelling agent an invigorating effect upon the entire system, remedying fever, biliousness, loss of appetite, sleep and other ailments that follow in the train of worms in the stomach and bowels.

A prominent official of Westminster Church, formerly London County Council, and Parr's Bank, Ltd., announced at Church last week one of the results of Lloyds Bank, who have taken over the control of Cambridge Street, Hoxton, Shoreditch, London, E.C.2.

For Scalds or Burns.—Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil is a standard remedy for the treatment of scalds and burns. Its healing powers quickly relieve pain and take away the agony from the injury. It is also an excellent remedy for all manner of cuts, bruises and sprains, as well as for relieving the pains arising from inflammation of various kinds. A trial bottle will soon convince you of its merits and save many doctor's and veterinary's fees.

An aerial young woman stopped into a berth the other day and handed a cheque to the cashier with the request that he should cash it.
"What's cheque, madam," said the cashier, "don't filled in."
"Left wing," said the young woman.
"If has your husband's name signed to it," explained the cashier, "but it doesn't state how much money it is for."
"Oh, is that all?" was the reply. "Well, fill 'aht there be, please."

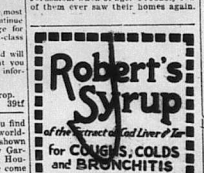
The Terror of Asthma comes like a specter in the night and its dreadful wrestling robbing its victim of breath. It seems beyond the power of human aid to relieve until one trial is made of that remarkable preparation, Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Asthma Remedy. Then relief comes with a rush. Life becomes worth living, and, if the remedy be used persistently, the disease is put permanently to flight. Take no substitute.

The Children's Crusade.

The "Children's Crusade," was one of the saddest episodes of the Middle Ages. It originated about the year 1212, with Stephen, a fanatic shepherd boy of Vendome in France, who professed that he was divinely commissioned to relieve Jerusalem. Wonderful miracles were attributed to him, he always was said to kneel before him, and such an influence had he over other children, and their parents that they flocked to him in crowds from all parts, until he was at the head of 30,000, the majority of whom were under the age of twelve.

All the efforts of this multitude he put one for Marseilles, France, promising them that the sea would dry back before them, and that they should reach the Holy Land dryshod. That such a moment of their leader's prophecy did not discourage them, and they refused to disperse to their homes. A certain number embarked with two merchants who professed sympathy with their cause, but only raised their confidence by selling them as slaves to the very infidels whom they had set out to destroy.

Meantime, another army, almost equally large, gathered in Germany and set out across the Alps. They perished in thousands, but the survivors struggled on to Rome to demand sanction from their vow to the pope. He is said to have discussed them matter exacting a promise that they would proceed to Jerusalem when of age. Probably few of them ever saw their homes again.



ARRIVAL IN TANGIER.

All Bedlam and Babel Seems to Have Broken Loose.

A traveller who has recently visited Morocco gives his experiences as follows:

Your arrival at Tangier is apt to be a little alarming. Boatloads of Moors beset the steamer, clamoring for passengers, for it is in their small boats that one is rowed ashore. A crowd of yelling Moors and Jews gathers on the pier, and it is well for the traveller who has friends waiting to rescue him from this importunate crowd. Even in those circumstances it is hard to escape the unwelcome following of a mob of motley fellows, who seem to find speech impossible save at the highest pitch of the human voice.

One safely mounted on your donkey, mule, or horse, off you go, bump, bump, slip, stumble, up the polished slippery cobbles of a very steep and narrow street, thronged by figures in every variety of picturesque costume. Your servant in charge of the baggage you are unable to find, but does it gouged.

In the 1830's all bodies and all to have broken down, leaving hopelessly disorganized, and the unfortunate creditors, who had lent too much money to the bankrupt governments, were left lamenting. Many of the loans were made on the security of the customs dues, which afforded a most unreliable source of income, as the amounts collected depended entirely on the honesty of the collectors. A hundred years ago the customs of Spain were collected by the municipalities, and the central government received only what the municipalities thought it good to hand over. The result was that the collectors, who were practically left to their own devices, pocketed the greater part of the revenue, and the government received only a small fraction of the amount which should have been collected. The abuses of the system were so glaring that in 1845 a reform was introduced, and it continued in force, with varying degrees of efficiency, until the outbreak of the present troubles.

Some years ago, but by different methods, the customs revenues of Portugal were hypothecated to the payment of the interest on the national debt. Here, too, the collectors found it to their advantage to squeeze as much as they could out of the people, creating a stress which caused the greatest discontent. The abuses of the system were so glaring that in 1852 a reform was introduced, and it continued in force, with varying degrees of efficiency, until the outbreak of the present troubles.

"Cabin" Indians.

The Iroquois occupied the north as summer quarters all other Indians. They were particularly proud of their cabins, and were known by other tribes as "Cabin" Indians. During the hunting, part of the woman's duty was to carry the portable materials of the cabin and put them together.

These dwellings were constructed somewhat on the principle of modern apartment houses, with accommodations for from five to twenty families, sometimes exceeding 500 feet in length. They were built of poles, forming a stress which carried the roof to the ground. The doors were placed at each end, and a corridor ran through the centre, dividing the compartments on either side and served for fireplaces. Adult slept on mats placed on the ground on a low platform, the younger members of the family sleeping in the upper tier. For privacy, such as it was, strips of bark or skin were used. They were not all alike, on the contrary, some of them were neatly thatched with bark, and their owners were covered with strips of skins.

Potato and Adam.

In England the first efforts to promote the cultivation of the potato was suspected to be a conspiracy of capitalists to oppress the poor. The labor leader, William Corbett, said, "Potatoes ought not to be introduced to live on such 'cattle food'." In 1725 an attempt was made to introduce potatoes into Scotland, but they were denounced from the pulpit on two contradictory counts: that they were not mentioned in the Bible, and so not fit for Christians; and that they were the forbidden fruit. the cause of all the evil. They were accused of causing leprosy and fever.

Cattle Shows for China.

Dried cattle sinews are eagerly sought among the poorer classes in South China, where many thousand tons are consumed annually. The demand for cattle ligaments has exercised a serious restriction, and Hong Kong dealers and importers of this article are now looking to America for supplies. These are usually imported in bags containing 500 to 600 pounds. Cattle sinews are also used in China for the manufacture of glue.

What Every Mother Knows.

"Pa," said Clarence, "when is Mothers' day?"
"Every day, from sunup till midnight," growl-ed ma, who had just finished the dishes and was sitting down to the family mending.

Manager—I intend starting a comedy company on the road shortly.
Actress—What play?
Manager—I haven't had it written yet, but I heard a dandy joke to-day that we can use in it.

THE NECESSARY THREE

For an hour the teacher had dwelt with painful repetition on the parts played by carbohydrates, proteins and fats in the building up and maintaining of the human body.

At the end of the lesson the usual test questions were put, among them: "Can any girl tell me the three foods required to keep the body in health?"

There was silence until one maiden held up her hand and replied:

"Yes, teacher! Yer breakfast, yer dinner, and yer supper."

Bobby (looking up from book)—Ma, was Robinson Crusoe an acrobat?
Mother—I don't know, dear. Why?
Bobby—Well, it says here that after he had finished his day's work he sat down on his chest.

"What do you consider the greatest question before the people to-day?"
"From the demand for coin by various people in all kinds of sums", replied Senator Sorghum, "I should say that the great question to-day and every day is the currency question."

"Great! Fits him for something in life. If he can't make one of the big ball teams he can often land a job as a professor."

Recognized as a leading specific for the destruction of worms, Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator has proved a boon to suffering children everywhere. It seldom fails.

"Josiar," said Mrs. Corntassel, "do you approve of women smokin' cigarets?"
"Nope," was the gruff response, "stumps to light so many cigarets takes too much time off'n your work. If you must smoke, smoke a pipe."

It Bids Pain Begone. — When neuralgia racks the nerves, lumbago makes the back ache is the time to test the virtues of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. Well rubbed in it will still the pain and produce a sensation of ease and rest. A trial of it will establish faith in it.

Tom—What makes you think she's stuck on you?
Dick—She told me she thought there was a fool in every family.
Well, what of that?"

Wright's Worm Powders are a prompt relief from the attacks of worms in children. "Why, no," he added, "you're not a bit overcome."
"Am I not entering in raids?" was the polite rejoinder.

For Scalds or Burns—Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil is a standard remedy for the treatment of scalds and burns. Its healing power quickly relieves the pain and holds a speedy reserve force over the injury. It is also an excellent remedy for all manner of cuts, bruises and sprains, as well as for relieving to pains arising from inflammation of various kinds. A trial bottle will be sent to any address on receipt of 25 cents. Avoid substitutes.

"Oh, is that all?" was the reply. "Well, I'll take all there is, please."

The Terror of Asthma comes like a thief in the night. With its dreadful rattling, robbing its victim of breath. It scorns beyond the power of human aid. Let a reliable trial be made of that remarkable preparation, Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Asthma Remedy. Then relief comes with a rush. Life becomes worth living, and, if the remedy be used persistently, the disease is put permanently to flight. Take no substitute.

The Children's Crusade.

The "Children's Crusade," was one of the gruesome episodes of the Middle Ages. It originated about the year 1212, with Stephen, a fanatic shepherd boy of Vendome in France, who professed that he was divinely commissioned to relieve Jerusalem. Thousands of children were attracted by his promise that they would proceed to Jerusalem when of age. Probably few of them ever saw their homes again.

ARRIVAL IN TANGIER.

All Beduins and Babel Seems to Have Broken Loose.

A traveller who has recently visited Morocco gives his experiences as follows:

Your arrival at Tangier is apt to be a little alarming. Boatloads of Moors bearing the steamer, clamoring for passengers, for it is in their small boats that one is rowed ashore. A crowd of yelling Moors and Jews gathers on the pier, and it is well for the traveller who has friends waiting to rescue him from this unfortunate crowd. Even in those circumstances it is hard to escape the unwelcome following of a mob of motley figures, who seem to find employment in the air. At the busiest pitch of the human voice.

Once safely mounted on your donkey, mule or horse, off you go—bump, bump, slip, stumble, up the polished slippery cobbles of a very steep and narrow street, thronged by figures in every variety of picturesque attire. Everything seems in every other's way, and yet nobody seems seriously impeded by the jostling crowd. By the time you have reached the Soko, the market place, you have realized you must be born into a donkey, to come out running into a donkey in front or donkey behind is certainly coming into you.

Beside, nobody checks the Moorish gentleman on full career, for to check him on that point is to run full tilt into his donkey, which is probably straddled by a fat Jewish merchant, who is certain to have a bundle of rags in his hand, which he is anxious to display to you. Or, if you are riding in a carriage, you are certain to run down a string of camels, which are passing in single file, each one tied to the tail of the one in front of it. Or you are certain to run down a string of donkeys, each one laden with a huge bundle of fodder, which entirely conceals the animal underneath it, and which is apparently walking off with itself. A string of camels is certainly the most picturesque.

Tangier, by the way, is not by any means a bad place to begin your travels in Morocco, for it is the most European town in the country, and you will find in it many things which you will not find elsewhere. The Grand Hotel, for instance, is a palatial building, with a frontage of 200 feet, and a garden which covers nearly three acres. The dining room is a magnificent apartment, with a lofty ceiling, and the cuisine is excellent. The drawing room is a delightful lounge, and the billiard room is a model of its kind. Indeed, the whole hotel is a credit to the enterprise of its proprietor, and is a place that must be seen to be appreciated.

A visit to the Soko is a thing that you will not soon forget. It is a scene of indescribable confusion, and you will find it a great deal of fun to bargain with the Moorish merchants who have their booths there. The Moorish merchant is a delightful person to deal with, for he is always willing to take a joke in good part, and he is not at all offended if you offer him only a quarter of what he asks you for his goods. He will probably come down to half what he asks, and then you will have to bargain with him for an hour or so before you can get him to accept the price you are willing to pay. Then he will probably throw in a present of some kind, and you will part the best of friends.

"Cable" Dishes.

The Iroquois recognized the potato as a superb vegetable, and were known to other tribes as "Cable" Indians, because of their hunting, part of the woodcraft that was to carry the portable machines of the cabin and pay them for labor.

These dwellings were constructed somewhat on the principle of gondolas, the apartment houses with accommodations for from five to twenty families, sometimes exceeding 500 feet. A passageway in the center divided the compartments on either side and served for fireplaces. Adam slept on mats placed on the ground on a low platform, the younger members of the family sleeping on an upper tier. For privacy, such as it was, strips of bark or skin were used. A small boy strolled into an Arizona drug store, and said: "Gimme a nickel's worth of asafetitty." The proprietor wrapped it up, and passed it over.

"Charge it," said the boy.

"What name?" inquired the druggist.

"Hunnyfunkle," was the answer.

"Take it for nothin'," retorted the languid chemist. "I wouldn't write 'asafoetida' and Hunnyfunkle' both for no nickle."

BARE ARMS NOT IMMODEST.

Girls More Beautiful With These Than Bare Knees.

Bare armed girls are no more of a danger signal than bare-headed boys or bare-legged children, according to a mother who has raised a large family on Washington Heights. She considers them only signs of the times—of the modern trend that children are taking and of the way of the world in the line that is finding out what is best for the child.

Short skirts and knickerbockers this mother puts in the same category, although she is inclined to object to certain knickers for boys which include a stiff elastic band just under the knee and she objects to bare things for plump, growing girls.

"The present styles of children's clothes," said this mother, "gives them the greatest freedom I have ever known. And by children I mean all these between three or four and eighteen or nineteen—both boys and girls.

It is true that I do not care particularly myself for the large, stout matron who swings along the avenue in her bare arms, but that is her privilege if she cares to do it. This style, however, should be reserved for the more slender women whose age is not so noticeable.

As for the young girls, they are undoubtedly beautiful in their bare arms — much more beautiful than they were in their short skirts of a year or two ago. It is much better that a girl should show a dimpled elbow than a dimpled knee and there is a hygienic point in the care of both that is important. The advertising campaign waged by manufacturers of skin lotions have a much more legitimate field upon the beautiful arms of our young women than they had before."

Making and Taking of Gems.

When buying stocks, jewellers have always to be on their guard. Imitations made from glass may be ignored, for even the finest reproduction would not pass the most elementary test—that of the file—for hardness.

Perhaps the cleverest counterfeits of gems have been constructed in laboratories where the exact chemical constituents of the real stone are taken and fused together under great heat. The article produced, when cut, polished, and set, possesses in an extraordinary degree the hardness, durability, and lustre of nature's own stones.

The sapphire and the ruby have been very successfully counterfeited, but the drawback to this method of reproduction is its expense and the long process involved. The stones produced in this way are invariably sold as "synthetic gems."

Another method and one to which the term "faking" might be applied, has been used to obtain the emerald and aquamarine. For this purpose ordinary rock crystal is used.

This stone is cut in the same manner as an emerald or aquamarine would be cut. It is then split, a coloring matter is inserted, and the stone is then carefully rejoined with invisible cement, with the result that the one-transparent crystal becomes a rich-colored gem of enhanced value.

In dealing with diamonds the counterfeiter is up against the most wonderful of nature's gems. The various efforts of scientists have met with absolute failure, or success in such an infinitesimal degree as to make the production ludicrous.

Teeth Filed Before Marriage.

The Malays pay for marriage before they celebrate it. To eat a wedding cake or wear a wedding robe as yet unpaid for would be an irreparable disgrace, according to the Malayan code.

All the wedding expenses are paid for by the bridegroom and the sum which covers them is sent by him to the father-in-law-elect on the day previous to that on which the young man claims and receives his wife.

On the day before her marriage the girl's teeth are filed. Feasting and music interpose elaborate ceremonials, and if the maiden means business she is crowned in a flood of music.

Three days before the ceremony she has her hair cut short and how to a thin, straight fringe and the nails of both hands and feet are deeply stained with henna.

A Malay bride, except for her conventional marriage ornaments and her nail varnish, wears the ordinary dress of a lady of rank.

Inns at Mongolia.

In Mongolia there are four distinct grades of inns. First comes the ordinary inn, where mules and donkeys, horses and their owners can be accommodated more or less comfortably. Next there is a smaller type of hostelry, where foot passengers stay. Then comes the "camel inn," where only the "ships of the desert" are received, because these illtempered brutes are so vicious, biting and kicking all who approach, that they have to be kept apart from other animals. In the more settled localities custom requires their drivers to travel with them only at nights, and to keep them shut up in their own inns by day.

Finally, there are the "pig inns." Their courtyards are filled with low troughs where four-footed guests are fed.

Profiteering.

A young fellow in New York went up and down the principal streets with a hand-cart peddling German pickle trays at twenty cents for a ten-thousand mark note. He made over fifteen and three-quarter cents on every sale, and his load sold like hot cakes. Before the war ten thousand marks were $2,300.

Verses on Prayer Rugs.

Verses from the Koran and other passages considered sacred are generally stamped on the fabrics used as prayer rugs by the Mohammedans, and it is criminal in oriental law to export such pieces.

Increase Your Sales
By Long Distance
Long Distance enables you to get a decision immediately.
Right now, all over Canada, salesmen are making appointments with customers in distant cities, calling them, forestalling competition and getting the orders on the books.
At no time in history has it been more important to the business man to be in many places in one day. The more places he can be in, the more goods he will sell.
In many cases the line that separates the efficient from the inefficient is the thin copper line of Long Distance.

Hospital for Sick Children

COLLEGE ST., TORONTO.

Dear Mr Editor:—

Recent discoveries in medical science have called attention to the great service rendered by an up-to-date hospital through facilities provided for research. Probably few laymen appreciate the amount of this work conducted under the auspices of the Hospital for Sick Children. Yet it is only by intensive study of the causes of children's diseases that the hospital staff has been able to establish a world famous record for cure. Statistics show that the rate of infant mortality in this Province has been steadily decreasing, until it is now among the lowest in the world. What that means is that hundreds of Ontario parents owe their children's lives to the research work in the laboratories of the Hospital for Sick Children.

Although the doctors give their services freely, the bills for equipment add up annually to a good many thousands of dollars. But in view of the results attained, I feel that not one of your readers will cavil at the monies spent, and I confidently venture the hope that many of them at this Christmas season will wish to enrol themselves in the Hospital's campaign on behalf of Ontario's children.

To carry on this research work there is not one cent except what comes in from voluntary subscriptions. For the care of the children occupying hospital cots there are certain statutory grants, but these represent scarcely more than half what the Hospital needs. Last year, for instance, the Hospital doctors looked after an average of 253 inpatients and 152 out-patients daily. Quite a colony of ailing youngsters! And the expenditure — although whittled down to the minimum commensurate with efficiency — was $218,917. The income to the extent of at least $100,000 depends upon the regard which the people of Ontario have for the Hospital's work and the generosity with which they express that regard.

May I ask you, Mr. Editor, to point out to your readers that since the establishment of the Hospital for Sick Children, at least four more Ontario youngsters in every hundred have survived the trials of childhood? For with that simple statement of fact brought to their attention I feel sure that many of them will bestow their benediction upon the work of the Hospital for Sick Children by sending some Christmas gift, according to their means, in care of the Secretary-Treasurer, at 67 College Street, Toronto.

Faithfully yours,
H. J. ROBERTSON,
Chairman of Appeal Committee.

Since the Hospital Opened Its Doors in 1875, 65,231 In-Patients Treated — 603,055 Attendances of Out-Patients.

$2.50 or $3.50 is just about what you want to spend for your boy or girl's Xmas present. What about a Brownie or Kodak? These are sold in Napanee only at Wallace's.

"Of course, I like him," said the ambitious girl; "but why should I marry him? He has neither fame nor fortune."

"You mustn't forget one thing," mildly suggested Miss Cayenne, "if he had either he might be entirely too busy to fall in love and propose."

A small boy strolled into an Arizona drug store, and said: "Gimme a nickel's worth of asafetity." The proprietor wrapped it up, and passed it over.

"Charge it," said the boy.

"What name?" inquired the druggist.

"Hunnyfunkle," was the answer.

"Take it for nothin'," retorted the languid chemist. "I wouldn't write 'asafoetide' and Hunnyfunkle' both for no nickle."

Girls More Beautiful With These Than Bare Knees.

Bare armed girls are no more of a danger signal than bare-headed boys or bare-legged children, according to a mother who has raised a large family on Washington Heights. She considers them only signs of the times—of the modern trend that children are taking and of the way of the world in the line that is finding out what is best for the child.

Short skirts and knickerbockers this mother puts in the same category, although she is inclined to object to certain knickers for boys which include a stiff elastic band just under the knee and she objects to bare things for plump, growing girls.

The present styles of children's clothes," said this mother, "gives them the greatest freedom I have ever known. And by children I mean all those between three or four and eighteen or nineteen—both boys and girls.

"It is true that I do not care particularly myself for the large, stout matron who swings along the avenue in her bare arms, but that is her privilege if she cares to do it. That style, however, should be reserved for the more slender women whose age is not so noticeable.

"As for the young girls, they are undoubtedly beautiful in their bare arms — much more beautiful than they were in their short skirts of a year or two ago. It is much better that a girl should show a dimpled elbow than a dimpled knee and there is a hygienic point in the care of both that is important. The advertising campaign waged by manufacturers of skin lotions have a much more legitimate field upon the beautiful arms of our young women than they had before."

Making and Faking of Gems.

When buying stocks, jewellers have always to be on their guard. Imitations made from glass may be innocent, for even the finest reproduction would not pass the most elementary test—that of the file—for hardness.

Perhaps the cleverest counterfeits of gems have been constructed in laboratories where the exact chemical constituents of the real stone are taken and fused together under great heat. The article produced, when cut, polished, and set, possesses in an extraordinary degree the hardness, durability, and lustre of nature's own stones.

The sapphire and the ruby have been very successfully counterfeited, but the drawback to this method of reproduction is its expense and the long process involved. The stones produced in this way are invariably sold as "synthetic gems."

Another method and one to which the term "faking" might be applied, has been used to obtain the emerald and aquamarine. For this purpose ordinary rock crystal is used.

This stone is cut in the same manner as an emerald or aquamarine would be cut. It is then split, coloring matter is inserted, and the stone is then carefully rejoined with invisible cement, with the result that the one transparent crystal becomes a rich-colored gem of enhanced value.

In dealing with diamonds the counterfeiter is up against the most wonderful of nature's gems. The various efforts of scientists have met with absolute failure, or success in such an infinitesimal degree as to make the production ludicrous.

Teeth Filed Before Marriage.

The Malaya pay for marriage before they celebrate it. To eat a wedding cake or wear a wedding robe as yet unpaid for would be an irreparable disgrace, according to the Malayan code.

All the wedding expenses are paid for by the bridegroom and the sum which covers them is sent by him to the father-in-law-elect on the day previous to that on which the young man claims and receives his wife.

On the day before her marriage the girl's teeth are filed. Feasting and music intersperse elaborate ceremonials, and if the young woman's moans her moans are drowned in a flood of music.

Three days before the ceremony she has her hair cut short upon her brow to a thin, straight fringe and the nails of both hands and feet are deeply stained with henna.

A Malay bride, except for her conventional marriage ornaments and her many flower chains, wears the ordinary dress of a lady of rank.

Inns at Mongolia.

In Mongolia there are four distinct grades of inns. First comes the ordinary inn, where mules and donkeys, horses and their owners can be accommodated more or less comfortably. Next there is a smaller type of hostelry, where foot passengers stay. Then comes the "camel inn," where only the "ships of the desert" are received, because these ill-tempered brutes are so vicious, biting and kicking all who approach, that they have to be kept apart from other animals. In the more settled localities custom requires their drivers to travel with them only at nights, and to keep them shut up in their own inns by day.

Finally, there are the "pig inns." Their courtyards are filled with low troughs where four-footed guests are fed.

Profiteering.

A young fellow in New York went up and down the principal streets with a hand-cart peddling German marks at twenty cents for a ten-thousand mark note. He made over nineteen and three-quarter cents on every sale, and his load sold like hot cakes. Before the war ten thousand marks were $2,300.

Verses on Prayer Rugs.

Verses from the Koran and other passages considered sacred are generally stamped on the fabrics used as prayer rugs by the Mohammedans, and it is criminal in oriental law to export such pieces.

Increase Your Sales
By Long Distance
Long Distance enables you to get a decision immediately.
Right now, all over Canada, salesmen are making appointments with customers in distant cities, or calling them, forestalling competition and getting the orders on the books.
At no time in history has it been more important to the business man to be in many places in one day. The more places he can be in, the more goods he will sell.
In many cases the line that separates the efficient from the inefficient is the thin copper line of Long Distance.

Hospital for Sick Children

COLLEGE ST., TORONTO.

Dear Mr. Editor:—

Recent discoveries in medical science have called attention to the great service rendered by an up-to-date hospital through facilities provided for research. Probably few laymen appreciate the amount of this work conducted under the auspices of the Hospital for Sick Children. Yet it is only by intensive study of the causes of children's diseases that the hospital staff has been able to establish a world-famous record for cures. Statistics show that the rate of infant mortality in this Province has been steadily decreasing, until it is now among the lowest in the world. What that means is that hundreds of Ontario parents owe their children's lives to the research work in the laboratories of the Hospital for Sick Children.

Although the doctors' and their services freely, the hospital equipment and up to annually costs a good many thousands of dollars. But in view of the results attained, I feel that not one of the non-residents will cavil at the moderate amount, and I confidently venture the hope that many of them at this Christmas season will wish to enrol themselves in the Hospital's ranks, on behalf of Ontario's childhood.

To carry on this research work there is not one cent except what comes in from voluntary subscriptions. For the care of the children occupying hospital cots there are certain statutory grants, but these represent scarcely more than half what the Hospital needs. Last year, for instance, the Hospital doctors looked after an average of 253 in-patients and 152 out-patients daily. Quite a colony of ailing youngsters! And the expenditure although whittled down to the minimum commensurate with efficiency — was $318,917. The income to the extent of at least $160,000 depends upon the regard which the people of Ontario have for the Hospital's work and the generosity with which they express that regard.

May I ask you, Mr. Editor, to point out to your readers that since the establishment of the Hospital for Sick Children, at least four more Ontario youngsters in every hundred have survived the trials of childhood? For with that simple statement of fact brought to their attention I feel sure that many of them will bestow their benedictions upon the work of the Hospital for Sick Children by sending some Christmas gift, according to their means, in care of the Secretary-Treasurer, at 67 College Street, Toronto.

Faithfully yours,
IRVING E. ROBERTSON,
Chairman of Appeal Committee.

Since the Hospital Opened Its Doors in 1875, 65,231 In-Patients Treated — 603,055 Attendances of Out-Patients.

$2.50 or $5.50 is just about what you want to spend for your boy or girl's Xmas present. What about a Brownie or Kodak? These are sold in Napanee only at Wallace's.
